- WALL PAPER -

THE DESIGNS of our spring wall papers are beautiful and the colorings exquisite. The effects they produce upon the wall have been studied with intelligent sympathy, and the "long-felt-wants" of a few years ago have been provided for with cultivated taste. A judicious employment of any of our papers leaves little to be done in a room—a few ornaments according to the taste or wealth of the occupant are all that is necessary to contribute to its beauty and comfort. Our papers thoroughly represent the standard of the prevailing taste in interior decorations,

HE PLANNED TO KILL.

Shortis Premeditated the Valleyfield Murder.

TRIED TO GET AN ACCOMPLICE

Montreal, March 30.—A remarkable story comes from Cornwall in regard to Shortis, the Valleyfield murderer, which will come before the judge and jury that will try Shortis, and will tend to show that he premeditated the horrible butchery. Michael J. Gleason, who plays inside home for the junior Cornwalls, and during the summer was employed in the Valleyfield Cotton Company, was brought into constant contact with Shortis and became quite intimate with him.

He often lunched with Shortis, but he became so quarrelsome that Gleason made up his mind to drop him. One day Shortis accompanied Gleason to a deserted part of the mill.

"While I was busying myself getting what I required," said Gleason, "he suddenly remarked: 'Say, Mike, how would you like to make $1000?' I replied laughingly that I should like it first rate, at the same time asking him what on earth he meant. He then entered into an elaborate explanation, telling me how he was perfectly conversant with the method of paying the men's wages which was in vogue at the mill, and explaining how the money was distributed and how easy it would be to secure the whole amount."

"I should want someone to help me," he said.

"I don't want to do it alone, but with the assistance of a friend who would act with me the matter could be very easily arranged."

"We could disguise ourselves by putting a mask or something over our faces, and then by taking the back way, and avoiding the bridge, we could creep quietly along, and with something on our feet to avoid making a noise we could make our way to the office and take them by surprise. Jack Lowe would be the only one we would have to deal with, and we could manage to fix him so that we could lock him in the vault. The other two are only inoffensive young fellows, anyway, and we should have no trouble with them. I guess they wouldn't do anything to us. We could then get the money and make away with it without anyone interfering with us. We would secrete it on the island down the river, and no one would be any wiser as to who had stolen it or where it was. We would remain around town and act just the same as usual, and no one would suspect us."

"I waited until he had outlined the whole plan, and then I said: 'Well, Shortis, I always thought you were a fool, but I never thought you were quite such a fool as all that.' He tried to persuade that he was not joking, but I refused to listen to him, and we started to return to the mill. Before leaving the 'scrap room' he said to me, 'You will not tell anyone what I said to you?' and I replied that it was so nonsensical that I certainly would not, but even then he made me promise over again.

"That evening I paid a visit to a young lady who was employed in the mill, and who is still working for the Montreal Cotton Company, and as we were talking Shortis passed by on the other side of the street. The young lady remarked that she thought Shortis was half crazy, to which I replied, 'If you only knew what he proposed to me to-day you would think him more than half crazy,' and thereupon I told her what had passed between the young Irishman and myself that afternoon. This young lady, who, as I say, is still in the employ of the Montreal Cotton Co., will bear me out in what I say at the present time."

$56,000 BLAZE IN CHATHAM

Two Large Buildings Burned—Ten Stores and Numerous Offices in Ashes.

Chatham, Ont., April 1.—About 5 o'clock Sunday morning fire broke out in Jordan's jewelry store, in the block on the corner of King and Sixth-street. The fire station is situated in the rear of this building and the firemen were on hand and in a few minutes had several streams laid, but notwithstanding their efforts the flames reached the second floor and thence to J. W. Burriss' dry-goods store and other portions of the large building, which, with the exception of the portion occupied by G. E. Young, grocer, was completely gutted.

Losses: J. W. McLaren, druggist, $2500, insurance $2000; E. Jordan, jeweler, loss $10,000, insurance $6000; J. W. Burriss, drygoods, $20,000, insurance $16,500; G. E. Young, grocer, $3000, insurance $1000. The upper stories were occupied as offices and by Dr. Cornell, dentist, all of whom will suffer considerable loss.

The building is owned by James Lamont, G. Richardson and G. E. Young. Lamont is insured for $6000, Richardson for $3000 and Young for $2000. Miss Manning, dressmaker, was carried out unconscious from smoke. She had a narrow escape.

In the afternoon, about 4 o'clock, a large wooden building in Fifth-street, North Chatham, containing a furniture store, candy shop, shoe store, gasfitters, warehouse and repair shop on the ground floor and occupied by a number of tenants in the upper stories, was completely destroyed. Building owned by M. Houston. Loss $10,000.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. Foster Spoken of But No Appointment Made.

MONTREAL'S COLOSSAL REQUEST

The Premier and Sir C. H. Tupper Arm-in-Arm—Possible Change in Sittings of the House—The Controllers Confer With Dr. Bourinot.

Ottawa, March 31.—A meeting of the Cabinet was held yesterday afternoon, at which all the members in town were present. There was a good-humored report in circulation round town that Sir Mackenzie and Sir Charles entered the Council Chamber arm in arm. Be that as it may, the Minister of Justice was present, and as for the Premier, when I saw him after the Cabinet meeting, he was in the very best of spirits. Despite the responsibilities, and sometimes the worries, of office, Sir Mackenzie is in excellent health, and looks forward to the coming session with the spirit of a Richard III. The pricipal matter disposed of at yesterday's Cabinet meeting was the appointment of a sub-committee to meet the Newfoundland Ministers and discuss with them terms of union. The delegates are to be here on Tuesday.

During the past week much has been said about the leadership of the House. The Premier told me to-night that the question had not been discussed in council and that nothing is yet settled. Beyond this Sir Mackenzie would say no more. Mr. Foster's name is mentioned for the post, but intimate friends say that he would be reluctant to take it. The position of leader of the House is a most arduous one; it necessitates great watchfulness of the business of the House, and, moreover, constant attendance there. Last session, it will be remembered, Mr. Foster's health failed him, and during the recess he has not recovered his health fully. Even to-day he is confined to his home through an attack of rheumatism, which, together with lumbago, has troubled him considerably for some time. Sir Charles H. Tupper's name has been mentioned this week in connection with the position, but an intimate friend of the Minister's told me to-night that the Minister of Justice, at no time, ever contemplated pressing any claims he might have for the position. In fact, the gentleman who spoke for him said that Sir Charles would hardly take it if it were offered him. Whoever may be chosen, and the general impression is that Mr. Foster will be the man, he will find a loyal supporter in the Minister of Justice.

If the Minister of Finance accepts the post there will be a decided improvement in the habits of the House. Mr. Foster likes to get home early, and henceforth sittings extending after midnight will be the exception. During the last year or two there has been a decided improvement in respect of late night sessions. In place of sitting until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning right along, both the Ministerial and Opposition benches have willingly acquiesced in adjournments at 11 o'clock at night. Sir Richard Cartwright has been a great supporter of the Government in this respect. The question of night sessions once more calls attention to a proposal which has been mooted more than once, that the House should meet at 11 o'clock in the morning and sit continuously until 6 o'clock, and then adjourn. This, of course, would necessitate committee meetings at night. This, if adopted, would be a radical departure from British legislative customs.

Apropos of the present political situation, the two controllers, Hon. N. C. Wallace and Hon. J. F. Wood, yesterday had a long conference with Dr. Bourinot, our leading constitutional authority. The nature of the discussion can well be surmised.

Are the Controllers responsible for any particular line of policy which the Cabinet may lay down? To what extent are they bound by a Ministerial decision? These and kindred questions are being greatly discussed just now.

Despite the uncalled-for sneers of Patron Haycock recently, the present Minister of Agriculture has shown himself in every respect a progressive man and a firm friend of the farmers of Canada. Last year, recognizing what a valuable adjunct bee-keeping is to the agricultural interests, as well as to that of many who may only be called horticulturists, he authorized the establishment at the Central Experimental Farm of an apiary, in order that reliable information for publication might be obtained by actual observation. This was placed under the charge of the entomologist, Mr. Fletcher, and the result of the first year's experience is detailed in his annual report. The apiary now consists of 20 colonies of bees. Mr. Fletcher's report is of a most valuable character.

The British Columbia Government some time ago made a claim upon the Federal authorities for an increase in the subsidy allowance of 80 cents per head, on the allegation that the census of 1891 had not been accurately recorded, and that the province should receive credit for 11,959 people more than appeared in the official census returns. The province, however, has been acting under a misapprehension with regard to the alleged discrepancy in the returns. The authorities claimed that many Indians residing on the Liard River and its tributaries had not been enumerated, these constituting the major portion of the additional 11,959 for which a subsidy is asked. It appears, however, that the Provincial Government did not know that these Indians were enumerated by the agents of the Hudson Bay Company, and that, when the returns came to Ottawa, credit was duly given to the province. The Provincial Government has had to withdraw from its untenable position, but has sent in a revised demand asking for an increase in subsidy for 2724 Indians, who, it is claimed, have not been enumerated.

Col. Panet, Deputy Minister of Militia, has recently received several interesting letters from his son, Lieutenant Panet, R.E., who is engaged with the British columns operating in the Waziri country on the northwest frontier of India. Three different detachments of British troops are, with the sanction of the Ameer of Afghanistan, engaged in delimitating a neutral zone between Afghanistan and India, so that there can be no question as to where the respective jurisdictions of the Ameer and Her Majesty are. The work in which the three columns are engaged is arduous and vexatious. The hill tribes, who do not hold allegiance to the Ameer, are persistent in their attacks upon the columns, and in one fight, in which Lieutenant Panet was engaged on Nov. 27 last, 700 men were killed, of whom 75 were British troops, while 145 British troops were wounded.

The argument before the Supreme Court in the case of Northwest Transportation Company v. McKenzie was concluded Saturday. Judgment was reserved.

Toronto Railway Company v. the Queen was next argued. The sole question in this appeal was whether or not steel rails for street railways are exempt from duty by item 173 of the Customs Act, 1887, which exempts steel rails over 23 pounds in weight to be used on railway tracks. The Exchequer Court held that it did not apply to street railways. Judgment was reserved. Robinson, Q.C., and Osler, Q.C., for appellants; Newcombe, Q.C., Deputy Minister of Justice, and Hodgins for respondent. Mr. Justice Sedgwick, having been concerned with this matter while Deputy-Minister of Justice, could not hear the appeal, and Mr. Justice Fournier sat to make a quorum.

The case of Town of Trenton v. Dyer will be taken up on Monday morning.

The Debt Held to Be Disch prisonment of the D

Victoria, B. C., April 1.— & Co., Ltd., who four wee Shipbuilder John Clark imprisoned for debt due to them, which he could not pay, Saturday continued the civil action against Clark and his partner, Harrington, for $8000 odd.

The defence raised the unique point that by seizing the person of the debtor plaintiffs had taken the last recourse of law, and all liabilities on defendants' part had thereby been discharged.

The court held the point well taken and ordered Clark's release, purged of all responsibility for the debt. The case is without precedent in Canadian courts.

INTER-OCEAN ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

Proposed Trans Continental Elevated Electric Road

Chicago, April. 1.—Papers for the incorporation of the Inter-Ocean Electric Railway were obtained from the Secretary of State Saturday. The capital stock is $200,000,000, and the project is to construct an elevated electric railway first from Chicago to New York and finally to the Pacific Coast. New York and local capitalists are promoting the scheme.

tatives to any great power as were those that Sir Edward Grey used Thursday night. It was high time that these words were spoken. There are now three distinct points upon which England gives France warning. One is her violation of treaty stipulations in establishing outposts on the right bank of the Siamese River Mekong and continuing to hold Chantabon; another is the report that a French expedition is on the way from the west of Africa to enter the Upper Nile Valley and occupy it; the third is a similar report that two French expeditions are in the Niger Valley on territory within the sphere of influence of the Niger Company. These two latter stories the English Government prefers for the moment to treat as incredible rumors, but Sir Edward Grey declared with much emphasis, amid hearty cheers, that if either were true the matter would be undoubtedly most serious.

The speech produced a profound impression in Parliament and throughout the country, but we have as yet very little comment from such Parisian papers as speak with certain authority. The irresponsible fly-by-night section of the Parisian press is of course howling at the top of its lungs, but that is not what the English are listening for. The Journal Des Debats alone, of the serious journals, discussed the thing yesterday, advancing the argument that England had nothing to do with the Upper Nile Valley, which concerned the Sultan and Egypt alone, and that France could not recognise any Nile interests or rights save those of the latter. If this is the attitude of the French Government, then England will at once solve the problem by declaring a protectorate over Egypt and the Nile. The debate in the French Chamber of Deputies on the subject is fixed for Thursday, but may now be forced on earlier.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894.

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelle's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles, and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. For female complaints it has no equal."

Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

Not a few Canadians are opposed on principle to capital punishment but there will be little strenuous objection to the hanging of Chattele on the last day of May. If they conclude that he has a soul at all, they will satisfy their consciences with the assumption that it is sunken in such a depth of the grossest slime of materiality that only the sounding line of death will reach it.

MAN AND MONEY.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

De Beaucourt had received Dubois's letter just as he was about to start for Edinburgh, and at once changing his route had traveled post to Brittany.

His unexpected arrival overthrew Gaillot's last hopes. The moment he learned what had taken place at the mill he hurried after Severin.

Anna was almost overcome by the surprise and joy of seeing him once more. A few words sufficed to explain all that had passed, fully exonerating Elie and exposing Gaillot's intrigues to separate the two lovers.

A violent scene between the banker and his nephew followed, in consequence of which the latter left his uncle's house and went to live in Penze with Severin.

Matters remained in this state for nearly a month. The manufacturer had announced the marriage of his daughter with Mr. Elie de Beaucourt; the necessary formalities had been complied with, the day fixed for the ceremony was close at hand. Unhappily Anna's health did not improve.

Revived for a time by Elie's return she soon relapsed into a state of languor which seemed to increase day by day. Dubois, frequently interrogated, always responded in vague terms. There was so much peace, however, so much happiness and repose in this strange convalescence, that they could not believe that there was any cause for alarm.

For the rest, no new anxiety came to trouble the lovers. Mr. Gaillot seemed to have relinquished all idea of offering any further opposition to the marriage and kept silence, whether from disappointment or shame. His name was never mentioned by them and they were beginning to hope he had forgotten them, as they tried to forget him, when one day a letter came from him requesting an interview with Elie and Severin.

They consulted together and after a short hesitation wrote to the banker appointing a time for the interview he desired.

Gaillot arrived at the hour designated. He wore an uneasy and embarrassed look; he had evidently feared to be ill-received. After a brief hesitation, however, making an effort to regain his self-possession, he advanced toward them with an appearance of frankness:

"You are both angry with me," he said, "and you are right; I have caused you suffering; "but," turning to Severin, "my nephew's marriage with your daughter would have frustrated all my hopes and plans. In trying to prevent it, I thought I was rendering a service to Elie himself and laboring for his happiness."

"The matter was one which concerned me closely enough to make it prudent at least to consult me about it," observed de Beaucourt.

"That may be so," returned the banker; "but I have never been in love; how could I suppose that it would be so difficult to give up a fancy?"

"But you were a witness to my daughter's grief, and you were a witness to my despair," said Severin, shaking his head.

"Then the affair was already begun; I could not draw back without avowing what I had done; the awkwardness of retracing my steps impelled me on; you have had reason to complain of me, I confess."

"Are you so sure that you would have perceived that, if you had succeeded?" asked the manufacturer, in a bitter tone.

"Perhaps not. Success, like misfortune, blinds one and renders one pitiless; but, be it due to my conscience or to circumstances, I acknowledge my errors."

"If you could only repair them also," said Elie, with a sigh.

"That is precisely what I have come to propose to you."

Elie and the manufacturer looked at him with surprise.

"Yes," continued Gaillot, who seemed in a frank and genial mood; "to the devil with finesse! The trial I have just made convinces me that I cannot do without Elie. During the month in which we have not seen each other I have missed him. I have been melancholy and out of sorts. Call this feeling affection or only habit, see in it, if you will, only the expression of personal interest and the desire to have near me someone in whom I could have the same confidence as in myself; I state a fact without asking you to place a favorable construction upon it. I desire, then, that our differences shall cease, and it is with that object that I have come to see you. I am going to make you a proposition, which I hope, will smooth away all difficulties."

"We are listening to you, sir," said Severin, with distrustful coldness.

"The great factory and the mill, working together, ought to yield large profits, especially if they are well managed."

"I think so."

"Well, I give the management of them to you."

"To me?" cried Severin.

"To you and to Elie, who will naturally henceforth share your labors. I would not have made you this offer so long as I had hoped to prevent the alliance of our two families; but now the thing is done, and I never rebel against the inevitable. I try to turn everything, even my disappointments to some account. Now, I had set my heart on two things—on marrying Elie according to my fancy and on giving him the management of the paper mills; the first has gone to the devil; I want to prevent the second from following it."

"Several; I prevent a rupture which would grieve me, I avoid a scandal, and I assure the success of my enterprise, of which I shall share, of course, the profits."

Anna's father looked thoughtful, the banker had spoken with such apparent frankness that it was difficult to doubt his sincerity. But Severin's distrust was not conquered. Elie, too, still doubted, and both remained silent.

"Come," resumed Gaillot, after a moment of expectation; "I have spoken to you without circumlocution and my heart in my hand. My proposition is advantageous to you, you cannot doubt that; it places Mr. Severin's affairs again on a good footing and enables him to return to his former habits and occupations; for you, Elie, it prepares an independent future; what more would you have?"

Seeing that the manufacturer still hesitated:

"You have both too much good sense," he added, "to be influenced by petty rancor to combine in refusing me and quarrel with your bread and butter, like silly children. Good chances are not so common as to be let slip without a motive, Severin."

"You are right," said Severin, reddening slightly at seeing his repugnance thus divined; "to reject your offer would be a puerile satisfaction of amour-propre, altogether unjustifiable while the fate of those I love is bound up with yours."

"Then you accept," said Gaillot, with joyful good-humor.

"I may do so," responded Anna's father, who was almost persuaded, in spite of himself, by the banker's blunt frankness, but who was still held back by the recollection of the past. "I must first know your conditions."

"I have none; you will make them to suit yourself. All I ask from you is a month or six weeks time to balance accounts at the factory, buy out my partners, and give everything into your charge. Meantime your daughter's health will be re-established; we will have the wedding in spring; then I will go to Paris, where I have a new enterprise in view; does that proposition suit you?"

"I will think it over."

"Then it is decided, for I will agree to all you wish. God be praised! that is settled."

"Come, Elie," he added, approaching the young man and offering him his hand, "forgive me and let us forget the past."

"I will try to do so," responded de Beaucourt.

The banker returned two days later with the draft of an agreement in which he seemed to have striven to anticipate and meet every possible objection. The marriage of Elie and Anna was stipulated in it as the basis of the contract and the first condition of its execution; the profits secured to Severin and his son-in-law (it was thus Elie was designated) were large enough to satisfy the most exacting requirements. Even Severin could find in it nothing to awaken suspicion and he signed it, as did Elie. Gaillot went away enchanted.

Anna and de Beaucourt, rejoiced at the change which had taken place in their situation, went down into the garden to talk of their happiness; Severin remained alone.

Although he had accepted Gaillot's proposition he had not done so without much reluctance. Regard for Elie's welfare and that of his daughter, whose future had been a source of keen anxiety to him, had made him set aside his repugnance, but had not destroyed it. In vain everything combined to persuade him of the banker's good faith on this occasion, a sort of presentiment protested against the facts themselves. Whether from prejudice or by instinct he could not bring himself to believe that any good could come to him from that quarter. Gaillot's sudden good-nature did not convince him. Still suffering from the wounds of the conflict he watched with uneasiness his former enemy, suspecting under every fold of his garment a concealed weapon. How could he be certain that the banker was not laying some snare for him? In deferring the marriage of Anna and his nephew until the spring was he not merely seeking to gain time? But, on the other hand, this delay was indispensable for the liquidation of the business. Gaillot had not made a condition of it, why, then, attribute it to base motives?

Severin was revolving these doubts in his mind when Dubois entered.

"I beg of you, Severin," he said as he entered, "do not let Anna expose herself in this way to the dampness. I met her just now in the garden, and I made her come in."

"How do you find her?" asked the manufacturer.

"She might be better."

This was the first time the physician had expressed any anxiety regarding the young girl's health. Severin was struck by his words.

"You have never been frank with me, Dubois," he said, in a troubled voice; "you think my daughter's illness more serious than you will confess."

"Eh, how do we know what to believe ourselves?" replied Dubois, shrugging his shoulders. "The chief thing for Anna is to avoid all excitement. Has she had anything to agitate her to-day?"

"That reminds me; Elie's uncle was here not long since."

"Mr. Gaillot?"

"Yes."

"To try to bring about a reconciliation—was it not?"

"Precisely."

"By Jove!" cried Dubois, striking his hands together; "I knew it!"

"How so?"

"From a conversation I had with him the other day. You shall hear it. You know that I almost had a quarrel with the Gaillots on account of that letter I wrote to their nephew about the lancets, which caused him to return so suddenly. I had left off going to the house, when one day about a week ago, I received an invitation to dinner from the banker. Well, I was tired of this ill-feeling. You know how I am; I like to be on good terms with everybody; I accepted."

"Well?"

"Well, I was cordially received, for they are good people at bottom. We spoke of one thing and another, and at last the conversation fell upon you, and Mr. Gaillot inquired minutely about the state of our dear Anna's health. He asked me innumerable questions concerning her illness, and as to when she would be well again. He displayed an extraordinary interest in the matter."

Severin started.

"And what did you answer him?" he asked Dubois, looking at him fixedly.

The health officer seemed embarrassed.

"I?" he said. "Good Heavens! what you already know."

"Dubois," cried Severin, a horrible thought flashing across his mind, "you told him that my daughter was doomed."

"What makes you imagine that?"

"I am sure of it. Tell me the truth; I wish it; it is your duty."

"I did not conceal from him," stammered Dubois, "that the dear child's condition was serious."

"You told him more than that. In God's name tell me the truth; I have the right to demand it of you; I have the strength to hear it. You expressed fears—fears of a near— Oh, speak! speak! I say."

"I only told him," said Dubois, "that in maladies like that from which your daughter is suffering, the approach of spring is to be feared."

"That is it!" cried Severin. "Spring! He wishes to defer the marriage until spring, because in the spring my daughter will be dead."

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

The confession forced from the health officer threw Severin into a state of despair impossible to describe. This blow was the last that could strike him. Despoiled, one after another, of every object dear to him, he had centered all his affections on his daughter. She had become sole possessor of his solitary heart. Old, and weighed down with grief, joy and youth existed for him only through Anna. The light came to him reflected from her; he lived with her spirit, not with his own.

Seeing the slow and steady decline in his daughter's health after his return, he had indeed felt some transitory fears; at times, even struck by a horrible presentiment, he had felt that she must die; but he had not dwelt upon this thought; there are misfortunes so appalling that the mind refuses to contemplate their possibility and can neither cease to dread nor resign itself to believe in them.

The grief of Severin, then, on learning the truth, had all the violence of an unexpected grief; there was something of madness in it. With frenzy in his eyes and arms raised toward heaven, in his agony he poured fourth imprecations against God, demanding why he thus tortured him, and denying his justice since he allowed the innocent to suffer and the wicked to prosper; then passing from blasphemy to supplication he clasped his hands imploring that Anna might recover; he struck his breast in an access of penitence, fell on his knees and tried to remember the prayers of his childhood, stammering them with trembling lips.

And when, weary of calling on Heaven, his thoughts returned to the implacable realities of earth, his terrified soul clung to incredulity for want of a surer anchor. He said to himself that Dubois was mistaken; he accused him of ignorance; he tried to recall examples within his own experiences which might reassure him concerning his daughter, and from which he might be able to draw some hope.

But, alas! this incredulity of the heart was in vain. When examined by the light of reason, the illusions, so toilsomely constructed, vanished like some palace in the clouds.

These alterations of hope and despair brought with them at last the only assuagement Severin could hope for—oblivion. His bursting heart was benumbed by the intensity of its suffering; his brain grew dizzy; he experienced a sort of mental and physical prostration, in which pain became

CURIOUS BEDSTEADS.

Although the majority of mankind is content with the conventional bedstead, manufactured either from wood, iron or brass, there exists certain individuals whose tastes, as regards this necessary article of domestic furniture, are by no means so simple.

Such, for instance, was the Parisian gentleman who, a short time ago, ordered from a firm in Paris a golden bedstead, every part of which, even down to the laths, was made of this precious metal. At first sight this certainly looks like a piece of unwarrantable extravagance, yet who knows but that the gentleman looked upon it in the nature of an investment, which he could at any moment realize, if he felt so inclined.

Equally uncommon was the bedstead which an old lady, who certainly had only tasted the Pierian spring of scientific knowledge, order to be constructed for her use. She had read somewhere that glass insulators placed under the casters of a bedstead were conducive to the retention of electricity in the body, and so she argued that a bedstead composed entirely of glass would prove a still better contrivance. Accordingly, she had such a glass bedstead constructed, which on completion proved to be by no means an inartistic piece of furniture.

Apropos of electricity, early in the present century a Dr. Graham, a quack who made and lost a large fortune over the "Temple of Hygiene," was in the habit of selling electric bedsteads at the price of $200 apiece, the property of which beds, he advertised, was to rejuvenate the persons who slept in them, as well as to give them beauty and health.

As a matter of fact, these bedsteads were nothing more than ordinary brass ones, with a battery attached, while all that could be said in their favor was that they were perfectly harmless.

But by far the most curious kinds of bedsteads are to be found in what we may term mechanical bedsteads, which some people of eccentric habits have, from time to time, ordered to be made.

A retired sea captain, who, although not actually mentally deranged, was what one may call "on the borderland," declared to his friends that he could not sleep unless he felt the motion of the sea. Night after night this unfortunate gentleman kept awake, thereby causing considerable damage to his health. At last it occurred to his medical adviser that something might be done in order to produce, by mechanical means, the movement which his patient so much desired. A consultation with a practical engineer resulted in the production of a bedstead which, by means of machinery, moved the mattress upon which the captain was to sleep up and down, producing, in every way, the effect so much desired. The bedstead proved a great success and the captain was no longer troubled with insomnia.

Without wishing to detract from the charms of music, yet for the purpose of inciting sleep we cannot help thinking it to be a failure, for if the music be good one keeps awake to listen to it, while if it be of the contrary nature, anger rather than sleep is apt to be engendered. This, however, was evidently not the opinion of a certain Indian prince who, a short while ago ordered a musical bedstead. Attached to the bottom of the bedstead was an instrument, something between a musical box and a piano organ. This musical Hindu had but to lie in bed, press a knob, and lo! the band struck up. The repertoire of this instrument, we are informed, was decidedly varied, containing all the latest tunes; so that on awakening from a dream the prince had but to press the knob and be lulled to sleep by the strains of "Cavelleria Rusticana," "Knocked 'me in the Old Kent Road," or whatsoever other tune suited his momentary humor.

Japan has Earned Formosa.

Formosa, which Japan will claim and probably get as part of her war indemnity, lies about one hundred miles off the Chinese coast, between the 20th and 21st degrees of latitude, almost within hailing distance of the cities of Canton, Amoy and Tuchan, and will be surrendered by China with more reluctance than any amount of money she is obliged to pay over. The island is about 400 miles long and 50 wide, inhabited by a mixture of races, some of them not yet emerged from their primal barbarism, and if Japan gets it her first duty will be to give it a civilized administration and bring its wrangling tribes into subjection, which the Chinese have never been able to do. It is in the main a mountainous and rugged territory, not very fertile nor otherwise valuable, but is of great stragetic importance, lying between the China and Eastern Seas, and will give important naval advantage to the country that possesses it. France has interests in those regions, and may have something to say about the transfer, and perhaps other countries will be represented in the discussion. But Japan has earned it; it is important to her, and she will probably get it.—New York Tribune.

Keeping Shoes in Order.

A woman hates to get her nice new shoes wet because it spoils them so, but with care the wetting will not hurt them much. As soon as you can remove the wet shoes do so, and rub them well with a soft rag, to get some of the dampness out, and to take off all the mud; then rub them with a cloth saturated with kerosene. Get as much of the oil into them as possible, and then fill them as full of dry oats as you can and set them aside for a few hours, when apply another coating of kerosene. The stiffness will have disappeared and the shoe will be in good shape when you want to don it again. Never try to put on a low shoe unless you have a shoehorn; you will be sure to stretch it out of shape in the back and make it ill-fitting. Keep the buttons sewed on your shoes and good strings in your laced boots, unless you want the men to say you are a "slouch." Have a paste patch put over the first sign of a break in your shoes and they will keep in shape and last twice as long. Cheap shoes and cheap gloves are a snare for the unwary. They get out of shape, are ill-fitting, and do not wear well. It is false economy to buy cheap foot or hand shoes.

THE WAR IN NORTHWEST INDIA

100,000 Hillmen Will Oppose the British Advance

New York, April 1.—The Tribune's London special cable says: This week's debates in Parliament dealt chiefly with Welsh disestablishment, upon which there was some excellent speaking, but it was purely a harmless gladiatorial display; nothing will come of the bill. The debate showed the hand of the assailants very clearly in one respect, namely, that a successful attack upon the Welsh Church would be immediately followed by an assault upon the Churches of Scotland and England.

The discussion upon Mr. Dalziel's proposal of Home Rule all round was hardly a serious business. The only English speaker who advocated Home Rule for England was Mr. Neville. The most prominent speaker on the Government side in favor of the resolution was Sir George Trevelyan. Mr. Redmond opposed the scheme because it would delay the accomplishment of Irish aspirations. No Cabinet Ministers were present during the debate, and though the proposal was carried by a majority of 26 there were only 230 members present, or about one-third of the House. No serious politician has the smallest hope of seeing this little kingdom split up into four separate states.

The Chitral campaign attracts more attention than is generally devoted to any Indian frontier war. It has been expected for months and the Government, in anticipation of this and other northwest frontier difficulties, has always maintained a substantial army in readiness around Peshawur. Within a fortnight they are able to move 14,600 men into the Pathan Hills and to take them straight across country to the rescue of Robertson and his besieged escort.

The Chitral region to be penetrated is a terra incognita. No Englishman has traveled between India and Chitral by the short route. Its passes and defiles have been mapped by a few of the large body of native geographers trained in the Indian Survey Office, who for 20 years have traveled into the least known regions of India, where a white man or a Christian would not dare to show his face.

But the difficulties of the enterprise are not only topographical, the expedition will enter a veritable hornet's nest of the wildest hillmen in Asia. There is no tribe in Afghanistan more fanatical and warlike than the Swatis. The chief ruler of those regions, Umra Khan, whose forces are assisting in the investment of Chitral, is an adventurer who raised himself to his present position by the sword. He has enormous influence, and it is not improbable that the British expedition may find itself confronted by 70,000 or 100,000 hillmen at various stages of the journey.

The British authorities are naturally exceedingly anxious about the outcome of this enterprise. It will be a great achievement to secure a short cut from Peshawur to Chitral, beyond which is a comparatively easy pass into Russian Turkestan, for the command of that point is the real objective point of the campaign, but this result can be obtained only by an enormous outlay of money and probably a large sacrifice of life. Chitral may prove another Afghanistan.

Sher Afzul has closely invested Chitral, where the British agent, Mr. Robertson, is. The British relief force, numbering 14,500 men will cross the frontier on April 1. It is expected that the expedition will meet with resistance in the snowbound mountain passes.

Oxford Defeats Cambridge

London, March 30.—The usual immense crowds of people of all classes and conditions thronged the banks of the Thames this morning to witness the 52nd race between the crews of the Universities of Cambridge and Oxford since the present series began in 1829. The race was rowed over the championship course from Putney to Mortlake, four and a half miles.

As the pistol was fired by Mr. Willan both crews got well away. Opposite the boat house Oxford had already got the canvas bow of their boat in front of the Cambridge boat. For the first minute Oxford rowed 38 strokes and Cambridge 36. Oxford was drawing ahead rapidly and at Bishop's Creek the Oxonians were leading by half a length.

Favored by the shelter afforded by the Surrey shore, which the Oxfords selected after winning the toss, their boat was rapidly increasing its lead over the Cambridge shell, and they were rowing easily. At Craven Cottage, Oxford was a length ahead. Cambridge was spurting, but could not gain against Oxford's long sweeping stroke. Shooting Hammersmith Bridge Oxford was still a length ahead. Cambridge made another spurt with the same result as before. At Thornycrofts the rough water bothered both crews, and Cambridge had a shade the best of it, Oxford being barely a length ahead at this point.

This was more than two-thirds of the distance, but the Cambridge partisans had not given up hope.

From this point, however, Cambridge fell behind, and at Barnes' Bridge Oxford was three lengths ahead. From there to the Ship, Oxford practically maintained the lead, and won by about three lengths.

VOLUNTARY REPATRIATION.

Minnesota French Canadians Returning—Manitoba Orangemen and the Schools.

Winnipeg, Man., April 1.—Excitement over the famous Remedial Order has at last cooled down, and people now have time to think of something else besides the school question.

Among the passengers on the Eastern C.P.R. express Saturday were several families of French-Canadians, who have been living in Minnesota for a number of years, but are now returning to Quebec and will settle in the Megantic district. They say their compatriots in Minnesota are anxious to return to their native province, but few have sufficient money to pay their fares.

Orangemen of Manitoba are already making preparations for a monster twelfth of July celebration at Winnipeg this year. They also talk of organizing national school leagues on the principle of the Home Rule Leagues in Ireland.

SNAKE BITE ANTIDOTE.

STRYCHNINE NEUTRALIZES THE VENOM OF DEADLY SERPENTS.

Whisky at Last Discounted—The Bulletin Which the Smithsonian Institution is About to Publish on the Subject Will Gladden the Hearts of the Prohibitionists—Two Poisons Which Kill Each Other.

A sure antidote for snake poison has been found. The discovery will mark an epoch in the history of medicine. For thousands of years the secret has been sought in vain. It was Prince Lucien Bonaparte who, in 1843, first made a chemical analysis of the venom of the viper, separating its active principle, which he called "viperine." A similar principle has been separated from the poison of the rattlesnake by Dr. Weir Mitchell, which he has termed "crotaline." But until now no knowledge has been obtained of anything antagonistic to this toxic agent, though alleged "cures" for snake bites have been plentiful enough. The remedy so long looked for has been found at last in strychnine.

The deadly fluid secreted by certain species of snakes was made a subject of study from a very early date, but the old-time investigators knew not how to solve the intricate problems of organic chemistry. All that they accomplished was to produce a prodigious number of antidotes, so-called, most of which in their turn were declared infallible. Not one of them was worth a penny. The most notable work in this line has been performed by Dr. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia, who, for the sake of obtaining sufficient quantities of the poison, has somtimes kept as many as 100 serpents in his laboratory. His method for securing the venom for examination was to seize the snake by the neck with tongs, forcing a saucer between the jaws. The enraged reptile would then bite into the saucer, on which the poison emitted was left.

The substance thus obtained is a yellowish, transparent, sticky fluid, without smell or taste, easily dissolved in water. When dried it will retain its toxic properties for any length of time aparently, looking like a gum or varnish, and it has been preserved for 22 years without altering in the least. On this gronud it is advisable to handle with caution even the dried fangs of snakes long dead. Boiling, unless continued for a long time, does not render the fluid harmless.

It is a fact sufficiently well known that poisoning and even death sometimes results from the bites of rats, dogs, cats, horses, cows and even man himself. Recent investigations have proved that in such cases the consequences are due to the presence in the saliva of minute organisms. These bacteria find their way into the wound and, rapidly multiplying, cause blood-poisoning. Not so very long ago it was imagined that some sort of bacterium in snake poison might be accountable for its effects. Drs. Wolfenden and Williams tried to grow cobra venom on gelatine, proceeding on this theory. If it had been correct they would have been able to produce any quantity of the toxic agent by artifice; but they were entirely unsuccessful. It is now established beyond question that serpent venom is a specific poison, having nothing to do with bacteria. It paralyzes the heart and the nervous centres.

Alcohol has long held the first place in popular esteem as an antidote for snake poison. In truth, it is not such at all, though useful to sustain the vitality of the person bitten against the attack made upon it by the toxic agent. It stimulates the nerve centres and the action of the heart if taken in small doses. But the mistake ordinarily made is to pour into the patient large quantities of whisky, the effect of which is exactly opposite of that required. In such great doses alcohol depresses instead of stimulating the vital functions. Intoxication, far from helping the cure, aids the poison. And, by the way, people have often died from snake bite who were bitten when dead drunk.

With the newly-discovered antidote the case is exactly opposite. Danger is far more likely to result from hesitation in using it liberally than from an overdose. Strychnine—itself a poison scarcely less terrible than snake venom—acts directly upon the nerves, stimulating and turning on their batteries, which the snake poison seeks to depress and turn off. Acting with the unerring certainty of a chemical test, it neutralizes the effects of the serpent venom. But it must be administered in extraordinary quantities, even to the point of spasmodic twitching of the muscles.

In fact, the ordinary doses must be greatly exceeded, and the administration of the strychnine must be continued, even if the total quantity injected within an hour or two amounts to what in the absence of snake poison would be a dangerous, if not fatal, dose. The few failures among the numerous successes with the drug thus far recorded have nearly all been traceable to an insufficiency of the antidote. In urgent cases as much as twenty to twenty-five minims should be given to any person over 15 years of age. If at the end of twenty minutes the symptoms show no abatement a second injection of the same strength should be made promptly, and unless then decided improvement is perceptible, a third one after a like interval. The action of the drug when applied as an antidote is not cumulative. The tendency to relapses is always great where much venom has been absorbed. Apparently yielding to the strychnine for the time, the insidious poison, after an interval during which it seems to ahve been conquered, all at once reasserts its presence, and has to be met by fresh injections, regardless of the quantity previously administered. With children the amount of the remedy to be given must not be judged by the age of the child, but by the amount of venom to be counteracted, the degree of danger chiefly depending on the size of the snake. The bigger the reptile, of course, the more poison it has. Furthermore, it is to be remembered that of all American serpents the rattlesnake is the most dangerous, the copperhead less so and the water moccasin least.

In case of snake-bite, the first thing to be done is to tie a string or a handkerchief as tightly as posible between the wound and the heart, whenever practicable. Next, cut deeply into the punctures made by the fangs, so as to cause the blood to flow freely; suck the blood from the wound—a proceeding perfectly harmless, inasmuch as the poison does not harm when taken internally. Then carefully loosen the ligature so as to admit a small quantity of fresh blood to the member, in order that mortification may not ensue. Small doses of whisky may now be given at frequent intervals. If the patient has to wait for the arrival of a doctor, this is the time to try all means to produce perspiration. The physician will administer extract of jaborandi, for a sudorific and diuretic, and hypodermic injections of fifteen or twenty minims of liquid strychnia, repeated every twenty minutes until slight spasms appear.

It has been ascertained that human beings and other animals are rendered comparatively immune against snake poison by repeated small doses of the venom. This suggests the idea of preventive inoculation, which though not worth while in the United States, might be decidedly so in such serpent-cursed countries as India and Australia, or to travellers in regions where snakes are plentiful and dangerous. It is a fact that the poisonous snakes are proof against their own venom. That this is true has been demonstrated repeatedly by inoculating such serpents with the poisonous secretion from their salivary glands. It is believed that there exists in the blood of the venomous snake some agent similar to the poison itself and that the presence of this toxic principle is accountable for the immunity exhibited.

EDISON'S LATEST.

The Kinetophone Will Show Life Size Figures That Talk.

The kinetophone is the name decided upon by Thomas A. Edison for his latest contrivance. It is a combination of the well-known kinetoscope and the phonograph. The new machine resembles the kinetoscope closely, with the addition of rubber tubes and ear pieces, by means of which the voices of the subjects shown in the pictures may be heard. The matter of combining the two machines was, according to Mr. Edison, very simple, the only obstacle being to get them to work in perfect accord. That is, the kinetoscope and phonograph had to be started at exactly the same time, or the action and sound would not come in together. The machine in its present state is small, and the pictures produced are only the ordinary small ones of the kinetoscope. The problem that Mr. Edison has now set to solve is the production of life size figures, and he says he will have the machine in working order in three months. His idea is to throw the life size pictures of the kinetoscope upon sheets by means of the stereopticon, and produce the sounds through trumpets atached to the phonograph. In experimenting for the production of life size pictures many obstacles have been encountered. The machine requires a larger film and a more powerful light, and the pictures produced must be flawless. In the small machines slight flaws are not noticeable, but when these pictures are magnified 500 times to make them life size, the deviation of a hair's breadth will amount to an inch when shown on the sheet. The slightest waver will spoil a picture. Mr. Edison is enthusiastic over the kinetophone, and he says he will be able to produce grand opera with it, besides many other things. "In fact," he said to a reporter to-day "the field of usefulness of the kinetophone is without limit."

Fortunes From Fancy Risks.

The underwriters who were not afraid to take flyers on the cargo of La Gascogne, in spite of the fact that when she was six days overdue she had become what they term in insurance circles a fancy risk, are at present reaping the rewards for their daring. In one case some thousands of dollars clear profit was made by the turn of a couple of hundreds. It looked on the seventh day as if nobody in the business could be induced to take La Gascogne on any terms, and but three hours before the staunch ship was sighted off Fire Island an insurance man went all over the street literally begging his confreres to help him out of the hole he was in by consenting to relieve him of a share of his risk. But could not get rid of his policies on any terms, although the rates he offered were very tempting.

In fact this business of reinsuring risks when they have in the course of events become "fancy" has developed into something of a lottery, and the returns in not a few instances have been very profitable. La Gascogne, after every man in the profession had in his heart of hearts given her up as lost, has shown that a ship may be overdue more than a week from purely natural causes, and the alarm felt in similar cases will be much diminished hereafter. It is noteworthy that Captain Baudelon refused all aid in his distress, a fact which saved many thousands of dollars to his employers. In fact, the ocean liner captains are not permitted aid except in tremendous emergencies, as it is too costly, and the captain who comes into port without it is more highly esteemed than the one who brings his ship in home in better condition, but with the aid of tugs and tramps of one kind and another.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE CHURCHES

REV MR BAKER PREACHES A PRACTICAL SERMON ON ELECTION

Dollar Sunday at the Tabernacle—Rev. Mr. Hutton in Christ Church—The Army's New Officers—Rev Mr. Marshall Resigns

Yesterday morning Rev. Mr. Baker. preached in Bridge st. church on "election". Some of the congregation went, uncertain whether they were to have a political or doctrinal discourse, but the text settled it: "Wherefore the rather brethren give deligence to make your calling and election sure." II Peter 1-10. He used the political election however to good advantage to illustrate his theme and prefaced his sermon with a statement of his belief, that, contrary to a popular misconception, if any one should have an interest in politics it was ministers and christian men.

The election of the text however was for eternity and all who would might be successful candidates. Some said that the matter was all fixed before hand, God knew just who would be elected and they must just take their course. It was quite as unreasonable to say that because God knew who would be elected to the next Dominion Parliament that settled the whole question and the candidates need take no further trouble about it. It was a foolish and insane thought. But they said they would leave themselves in Gods hand, which was seasonable if they would submit the will and the purposes of the life to Him. Reverting to his illustration the preacher said he didn't believe in a political candidate packing conventions nor yet in a personal canvass, but a man who placed himself in the hands of a convention and then let the matter rest would not be of much use as a candidate. In this election to God's Kingdom, to the parliament above, the will, the heart, the life, must be as true as the sun.

He warned his hearers against presuming on the grace and mercy of God and leaving the question of the election till the last day. Sin was the only thing that could separate man from God. The ransom of Christ and the sacrifice of the love of God was a constant quantity but God hangs salvation on man's diligence. Only a man's self could keep him out of the Kingdom and while in this life of probation and free will sin was possible.

DOLLAR SUNDAY AT THE TABERNACLE.

Yesterday was dollar Sunday at the Tabernacle and the occasion was marked by large congregations morning and evening. Rev. D. O. Crossley, the former pastor, presided and in the evening conducted a song service. His text in the morning was "Have ye received the Holy Spirit since ye believed?" His evening text was "Hold fast that which is good.' He suggested four things that held fast to would make a christian's life a success, the bible, prayer, belief in a Providence and hope of Heaven. At the end of his remarks on each of these he sang a solo. At the conclusion of the sermon Mr. E. Howard sang "He giveth his beloved sleep." This is the first time Mr. Howard has appeared in public and it may safely be promised that it is not the last, for he has a splendid bass voice that was thoroughly appreciated by those who heard it last night.

The congregation was asked to contribute $300 but when the collections were counted it was found that only $125 had been gathered in. Mr. W. H. Gordon said $200 was the least they could get along with so Mr. Crossley started down among the people for a second collection. He with Prof. Dyer's assistance got about $50 and Mr. Gordon made up the difference.

AT CHRIST CHURCH.

In Christ church yesterday there were large congregations present. Rev. J. H. Hutton preached at both services. In the evening he took for his text Matt. IV: 2, 3, 4. The Son of God was led up into the wilderness by the Spirit of God to be tempted of the Devil. After fasting forty days and forty nights he was hungered and the Devil came and said to him if thou art the Son of God command these stones to be made bread. Jesus answered in the words of the text. The birds and the beasts were provided with their food, they had only to seek and find, but it was different with the Son of God. If he chose he could have made the stones into bread and he could have made more bread than was needed. The temptation was not in making the bread, it was making it at the request of the Devil to become the vassal of the Devil. Making bread at the request of the Devil filled our asylums, our poor houses, and penal institutions. Young men starting out in life started to make bread at the request of the devil, they first started by robbing their employer's till, then they robbed the safe and they ended up in a penitentiary. Hendershott started to make bread at the devil's request. Shortis also could not make bread enough by honest work he started to make it at the devil's request. We are led sometimes to wonder if after all honesty is the best policy. We see side by side an honest man and a knave, the former toils hard through life and dies as he has lived. He is buried no man knows where, the knave accumulates riches and honor, he dies and the public press speaks very highly of his so called virtues, and a monument is erected to his memory, probably at the public's expense. It was no wonder than at times people doubted. The beasts of the field ate their fill and were satisfied, man never was, and the increasing wants of man led him to make bread at the devil's request. It would be, better to starve the body as we could never kill the soul. Man shall not live by bread alone.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICE.

At Bridge st. Sunday school yesterday a brief memorial service was held in memory of Walter Frost. Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, of whose class he was member, delivered a short address. Walter Frost had, he said, been one of the most helpful of his scholars, quiet and unassuming but earnest and diligent. During ten years he had only been absent only two or three times. He had been converted seven years ago this month. Mr. O'Flynn spoke in terms of the warmest eulogy of the deceased and Rev. Mr. Baker concluded with prayer after the singing of a hymn.

PRESBYTERIAN HOME MISSIONARIES.

The Home Mission Committee of the Presbyterian church has made the following appointments to the mission field of this presbytery, which has the largest mission field of the Ontario or Quebec presbyteries:

J. R. Lang, R. Grant, E. C. Curry, E. C. Gallups, G. E. Dyde, A. N. Currie, W. N. Kamsawa, W. A. Alexander, S. Woods, D. A. Volume, W. T. Crombie, A. Walker, J. J. Miller.

TOLERANCE AN AID TO NATIONAL SENTIMENT.

There is a good deal of intolerance afloat in the world, even among people who call themselves Christians. Occasionally, however, episodes occur which show that there is a large measure of tolerance and brotherly feeling to be found among people whose creeds are supposed to keep them far apart. One of these episodes—an episode of a pleasant and highly encouraging character—was the appearance, on Washington's birth-day anniversary, of the Roman Catholic Bishop Watterson, of Columbus, Ohio, on the platform of the Y. M. C. A. of that city, where he delivered an admirable address on the rights and obligations of the Christian citizen, which, the report says, was received with "enthusiastic applause' by his Protestant audience.—Halifax Chronicle.

The Chronicle thinks that if Canadians would pattern after this example it would conduce materially to the fostering of a stronger national sentiment.

REV. MR. MARSHALL RESIGNS.

Rev. Mr. Marshall has forwarded his resignation as their pastor to the Executive Committee of the Baptist church. In it his reasons are not specified.

THE ARMY'S NEW OFFICERS.

The late shuffle of Salvation Army officers has brought the Belleville corps another lady commander in the person of a fair Nova Scotian, Ensign Macnamara. She will be assisted by Capt. Moffat and Lieut Spriggs. All the ladies have been stationed at Brockville for the past thirteen months. Miss Macnamara was born at Halifax, N.S., and has been associated with the army work for a number of years. Special services were conducted in the barracks on Saturday evening and Sunday by Major and Mrs. Morris, of Kingston. Mr. and Mrs. Morris are at present in the city the guest of Mr. T. P. Brown.

BUSINESS EXPERIENCE FOR THE NEW FIRM

The Store of Messrs. Sinclair and Ostrom Entered and the Cash box Rifled.

Burglar are again at work in the city and gave evidence of it Saturday night They forced an entrance into the store of Sinclair and Ostrom sometime between Saturday night and this morning and about $2.50 in coppers was taken from the till. It was evident that cash was the booty the thieves were after as that was all that was taken. An entrance was secured at the rear of the premises by prying open the wooden shutters and pulling down the top sash of the window. An iron rod which was used was found by Officers Hayes and McCrudden this morning. It was taken from the building formerly used by H. McInnoch as a blacksmith shop. This was the only clue left by the burlars and it is not a very promising one.

Funeral of the Late W F Canniff and Mrs Johnson

The funeral of the late W. J. Canniff took place yesterday afternoon at three o'clock to the Belleville cemetery and was largely attended. Rev. D. A Good Thing is Always Desirable

So it is with the visits of Prof. Dorenwend to Belleville. On his last visit he was so busy that many ladies and gentlemen were unable to be attended to—he is therefore returning to give all who desire it another opportunity of procuring his art goods for the head. Prof. Dorenwend is undoubtedly one of the leaders of his profession on this continent—his skill in arranging the coverings for the head of either lady or gentleman is well known. His goods are acknowledged to be perfect and in every way true to nature, They are the best protection to the head besides giving a refined and youthful expression to the face. Call and examine these marvels of his art and have them fitted in order to judge of the effect. Consult him about your hair, he will (free of charge) give you advice as to the preservation of it. He will be at Hotel Quinte on Thursday 11 April 1895.

The Modern Invalid

Has tastes medicinally, in keeping with other luxuries. A remedy must be pleasantly acceptable in form, purely wholesome in composition, truly beneficial in effect and entirely free from every objectionable quality. If really ill he consults a physician; if constipated he uses the gentle family laxative, Syrup of Figs

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

TORONTO, March 1.—Among the thousands of orders which weekly pour into the offices of the Dodd's Medicine Co. Ltd., in this city, are many from Austria, Great Britain, Germany, and other countries. The curative properties of Dodd's Kidney Pills in cases of Bright's disease and concomitant ailments have been brought to the attention of friends abroad by patients who were cured here, they in turn have called the attention of their acquaintances to the marvellous effects resultant from the use of the pills until now there is a steady and growing demand for the specific and each foreign mail exhibits an increase in the orders.

TWO OPERATIONS.

BOTH FAILURES

A Case of Kidney Complaint that Would Not Yield to Surgery or Medicine until B. B. B. Was Tried.

GENTLEMEN,—After having undergone two operations for Kidney Complaint without securing the least relief, and hearing of some remarkable cures made by B. B. B. in our neighborhood, I decided to try it. I was given up by the doctors after the operations failed, and it was providential that I heard of B. B. B. After the use of six bottles I experienced so great relief and so great a change for the better that I felt the good effects would be lasting, as indeed they have been. The seventh bottle perfectly cured me, and I am now stronger and better than I ever was before. People who saw me before I took B. B. B. and who see me now can scarcely believe that I am the same person.

Orange Blossoms

A very pleasing event took place at the residence of Mr. John Bush of the 4th con. of Sidney, on Wednesday evening, March 26th, it being the marriage of their daughter Sarah to Mr. Oliver Huff of Frankford. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. S. Depuo in the presence of about eighty guests. The bride was assisted by her cousin Miss Annie Thrasher of Thurlow, while the groom was assisted by Mr. Wm. Doyle of Frankford. The bride was attired in a handsome gown of cream serge trimmed with lace and satin ribbon, and the bridesmaid in a very pretty Swiss muslin dress with moire silk sash. The bride wore a bouquet of white roses on the left shoulder and the bridesmaid a bouquet of carnations on the left shoulder.

The bride was the recipient of many costly and useful presents which show the high esteem in which she was held by her many friends. Among the presents were two handsome purses; one was presented by Mr. Geo. Weston, uncle of the groom, the other by Mr. O. Weston, grandfather of the groom; a beautiful set of dishes by the bride's parents; a pretty bedspread by the groom's mother which was her own work, and a great variety of other presents, which will in after years remind Mr. and Mrs. Huff of the friends of days gone by. The evening was spent in a very social manner, music being the predominating feature. As the midnight hour wore on the guests, after wishing Mr. and Mrs. Huff a long, happy and prosperous life dispersed to their several homes.

DEAR SIRS,—I am thankful to say that through the use of B.B.B. I am strong and healthy to-day. I was troubled with scrofula and Spots and Blemishes all over my body. Being recommended to try B.B.B. I did so, and can positively say it made a perfect cure. The first bottle was very successful, and before I had taken half second I was completely well. I recommend B.B.B. to all comers.

SELF-DENIAL OF PARENTS.

It Should Never be Permitted to Degenerate Into Self Effacement.

That parents should deny themselves superfluities for the sake of their children is not in the least to their credit. It is meet, right and their bounden duty. That they should give their children better advantages than they have had themselves is equally, in the nature of things, their proper line of conduct. Each generation owes to the one in advance all that it can bestow of preparation, of cultnre, of opportunity and of privelege. The self denial of parents is the tribute the race demands. It is not especially notable nor particularly praiseworthy, because it is the appointed and expected role which is given to people when they take upon them the obligations of parenthood.

But self denial on the part of the parents is one thing, and self effacement quite another. The plain man and the plain woman who have scrimped and stinted and saved, contrived, managed, risen early and sat up late, to send their sons and daughters to college, to educate them liberally, to place them well in the world, are not to be set aside as of small account when their children arrive at maturity.

They are wrong to allow themselves to be pushed to the wall, set in the background, as they sometimes are. The mother may not know Eucild or have the faintest acquaintance with the Greek poets, the music her daughter plays may be a Chinese puzzle to her comprehension, but she does know a whole world of science, not necessarily in books, to which her daughter can gain no clew in the classroom, since life must be the teacher.

The father may speak a less ornate vernacular than his boys' vocabulary, but he has the shrewdness, the acquaintance with men, which come only by intercourse with one's fellows, by joy and sorrow and the different phases through which all pass who live long enough. It should be no part of the self denial of parents to do without the deference, the tenderness, the regard, of those whom they have brought up.

One finds it oftener in a comparatively new country than in the more conventional life of our cities, a state of things in which parents seem to have been outgrown by their children. There are farmhouses in our frontier states where women, not yet middle aged, have put on gray hairs and wrinkles, lost the beauty and elasticity of youth, years before their time, resignedly accepting privation and toil and loneliness to give their girls a chance.

If the girls are noble, sweet natured and true, they will hold the dear mother in the greatest esteem because of all that she has done for them. Far from entertaining a feeling of pride or of complacency, they will repay the beautiful self denial of their parents by a devotion which never knows a shade of diminution. It is an ignoble nature alone which is capable of feeling ashamed of those who belong to one's kith and kin on account of any simplicity of manner or plainness of speech. Self denial must not become self effacement.

A few years ago it was not uncommon to find the parents of young people rather crowded out of the way, the drawing-rooms given up to the youthful daughters and their friends, while the mother and father sat by themselves in a basement dining-room or their own chamber. A better state of things obtains now, and young people have learned that society is crude and unsatisfactory, in which parents have not their fitting place.—Harper's Bazar.

WEATHER AFFECTS HEALTH.

Factory Accidents are More Frequent in Bad Weather.

J. S. Lemon notices the very great influence of weather on the health and temperament, and through them on the customs and habits of men of all ages. This is reflected in the salutations of all nations, in their religious ideas, particularly in their conceptions of the future life, and a thousand petty details of everyday existence. It affects even crime. Suicide is known to depend largely on the weather, and it has been calculated that in India 48 per cent. of certain crimes disappear when hot weather gives place to cold. The health of idiots and those afflicted with acute mania is especially dependent upon weather, and its effect on the nervous system is such that many persons can anticipate weather changes from their own feelings. Accidents in factories are said to be much more frequent in bad weather than in good, and physiological phenomena like knee-jerk seem to be dependent on it in some measure. Its effect on the appetite is well known, and tea-tasters, who have cultivated the sense of taste till it has become almost abnormal, say that in good weather this sense is more delicate than in bad weather. No systematic study of all these facts and relations has yet been made, but such a study would doubtless well repay the investigator.—American Journal of Psychology.

A Ship Captured by Scorpions.

The schooner Wallace J. Boyd, Captain Godfrey, arrived at Philadelphia recently from Montevideo with a cargo of bones which were gathered from that locality, and the voyage will long be remembered by Captain Godfrey and his wife, as well as by all the sailors, says the Philadelphia Press. The ship became infested by scorpions and other pestiferous bugs, which arose from the cargo and penetrated every available quarter of the ship. The seamen's rest was disturbed, and for weeks at a time the unfortunate men dared not rest themselves in their bunks for fear of being stung by one of the myriads of these bugs.

Every effort to rid the ship of the plague was unsuccessful, and even while lying at the upper quarantine the decks and cabins were alive with these creeping insects. Climatic changes had no effect whatever on them, and those of the crew who entertained the belief that they would disappear as the northern latitudes were reached were disappointed.

Captain Godfrey is at a loss to know how they found their way out from beneath the hatches, which on board vessels are regarded as even airtight, yet they arose in thousands and made life horrible on board the ship. Five and six times a day all hands were forced to change their clothing, but this did not prevent that horrible prickling feeling of live vermin creeping over the bare skin. When the vessel reached her pier, the sailors at once left, and nothing could ever induce any of them to again ship on a bone laden vessel.

Unnecessary Risks Run by Physicians.

The death in England recently of several surgeons and physicians from diphtheria, contracted during the examination of patients, has directed public attention very forcibly to the risks run by medical men in the performance of their professional duty. Discussion of the matter has elicited the sensible suggestion from a retired surgeon that doctors ought to adopt the single precaution of tying a handkerchief over their mouths and nostrils; he says: "In this way, without in the least inconveniencing the patient or myself, I entirely escaped infection from diphtheria, and by inducing the medical men with whom I consulted to adopt the same plan I often had the satisfaction of seeing them also saved from infection. I will mention one typical case in illustration. I was called at 5 o'clock one morning to meet a family doctor and an eminent surgeon to decide whether tracheotomy should be performed on a little girl, whose sister had died the night before from diphtheria of the larynx. We decided to operate. The surgeon proceeded to open the child's mouth for a final examination of the throat, when, seeing his face unprotected, I sprang forward and drew my handkerchief over his nose and mouth only just in time to receive upon it a lump of contagious matter ejected by the child. I am glad to say that we saved the child, who is now grown up and well. But we also saved the surgeon, who still follows his brilliant career. Many of those so-called 'victims to duty' might have been similarly saved and be still among us doing good had they less rashly exposed themselves to a quite unnecessary and foolish risk."—N. Y. Much of life's misery is due to indigestion; for who can be happy with a pain in his stomach? As a corrective and strengthener of the ailementary organs, Ayer's Pills are invaluable, their use being attended always with marked benefit,

The Best Pill.—Mr. Wm. Vandervoort idney Crossing, Ont., writes: "We have een using Parmelle's Pills, and find them by ar the best Pills we ever used." For Delicate and Debilitated Constitutions these Pills act like a charm. Taken in small doses, the effect is both a tonic and a stimulant, mildly exciting the secretions of the body, giving tone and vigor.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.

Yellow as a guinea.—The complexion, in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick head ache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURES which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels there after to become regular. High professional sanction has been accorded to it; and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich it, every bodily function fags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, its contamination by bile, or other causes, serious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery

MUNICIPAL ACCOUNTS.

The Question of a Provincial Auditor Discussed.

MR. STRATTON'S BICYCLE TAX BILL

Provisions of the Electric Railroad Act—Act Respecting the Chartering of Trust Companies—Amendment To the Ontario Game Laws.

Toronto, April 2.—The greater portion of the session of the Ontario Legislature yesterday was taken up with a discussion on the auditing of municipal accounts. The question came up on the following motion of Mr. Davis:

> That, in the opinion of this House, the present system of municipal audit is not thorough, and the result in a number of cases has been unsatisfactory, and therefore recommends that amendments be made to the act for the purpose of improving the system of audit, and also to provide for a uniform system of keeping the books of the municipalities of the Province.

Mr. Davis said the question was no new one; it had received considerable attention 10 or 12 years ago, at which time it was generally considered the Government would take some steps to appoint an official to audit the accounts of all the municipalities in the province. The present method of keeping accounts, he contended, was not at all satisfactory. He did not propose to suggest any changes that should be made, his desire being simply to get an expression from the House as to whether they agreed that the present system was not a satisfactory one. The matter was one of the greatest importance, and he thought the Government should deal with it, affecting as it did so many interests in the province. He suggested that next session the Government should bring in a bill on the subject.

The municipal taxation in the province amounted to between nine and twelve million dollars per annum. The people who paid these taxes had a right to know that the money reached its proper destination and that it was properly spent. He could, he said, mention six or eight cases during the last few years where frauds had taken place. The commission which enquired in 1888 into Municipal Government generally had reported that the fact that there were not more frauds was not because the system of auditing was good, but on account of the honesty of the officials. There were two reasons why the audit was weak: first, poor bookkeeping and secondly incompetent auditors. Should the Government decide to take up the matter, he suggested that a uniform set of books be provided which would be adequate for the requirements of the various municipalities, and that municipalities should be compelled to keep their accounts in this form.

When Mr. Davis had finished his speech, Mr. Whitney asked: "What about the Provincial audit?" but he received no answer to his query.

Mr. Crawford saw a difficulty in that even expert accountants disagreed as to the best system of keeping books.

Hon. Mr. Hardy admitted that there was a general feeling that some check was necessary in connection with municipal audits, but just what form it should take was a stumbling block, and no precise way had yet been laid down that would answer or satisfy all parties. He did not apprehend that it would be possible for any Government audit to assume the character of an annual supervision of the accounts of each municipality. Even supposing a Provincial auditor was appointed, he thought the most he could do would be to make an inspection in cases where the Municipal Council had an idea that fraud existed.

Col. Matheson thought that if the resolution were passed it would do great harm. It would prejudice, he said, the sale of municipal debentures in Europe.

Mr. Davis, after the discussion had continued for some time, said he had only brought up the matter for debate in order that the House might express an opinion. Having achieved what he desired he would withdraw the motion.

The Attorney-General introduced a bill respecting the chartering of trust companies. It provides certain regulations for the governing of these institutions which are not covered by the general act respecting joint stock companies. It requires that capital to a stated amount shall be paid up. It further provides that three-fourths of the shareholders of the company shall be resident in Ontario. Another provision is that when an application for a charter is made the applicants must satisfy the Government of their fitness in every respect for the duties devolving upon such a company.

Sir Oliver introduced another bill providing that where a sheriff or registrar of deeds dies without leaving a deputy the county crown attorney shall fill the office temporarily.

Hon. Mr. Gibson introduced a bill to amend the Ontario Game Protection Act, shortening the close season for game.

Mr. Howland introduced a bill that is of interest to loan companies generally. Its object is to prevent what may be called speculative building. The bill provides that no loan company shall, after July 1, advance any of its funds upon the security of mortgage upon dwelling houses in course of erection or intended to be erected or completed with such advances, and upon the site of such dwellings unless such advance is collaterally secured by other lands or chattels of a value actually equal to the full amount of such advance. A proviso is made, however, which does not prevent advances by building or loan societies to members thereof for the construction, alteration or completion of a single house or semi-detached pair of houses, such houses or one of them is bona fide intended for the actual use and occupation of such a member. The provisions of the bill are also made to apply to insurance companies.

Replying to Mr. Carpenter, Hon. Mr. Ross said the Fifth Form was never prohibited by the regulations of the Education Department in the Public schools of Ontario. For some years the trustees of Public schools in cities, towns and incorporated villages in which High schools were established were allowed the option of withdrawing the Fifth Form if they saw fit to do so. This option has been withdrawn, and a Fifth Form is now compulsory, providing there are pupils qualified to take up Fifth Form work. This obligation holds irrespective of the certificate held by the teacher.

These bills were read a second time: Respecting the Georgian Bay Aqueduct Co., Mr. St. John; respecting the city of St. Catharines, Mr. Hiscott; respecting the city of Toronto, Mr. Crawford; respecting the Township of York, Mr. Richardson.

The Attorney-General's bill respecting the legal meaning of expressions relative to time passed the third reading.

Mr. Field's bill to amend the act to prevent the profanation of the Lord's Day was read a second time.

"What is it?" asked Mr. Gibson. In reply, Mr. Field said that it brought farmers within the jurisdiction of the act, and by way of explanation, he added: "I understand that in some sections of Ontario there are farmers who work on the Lord's Day."

Mr. Stratton's bicycle bill was also read a second time. It will be considered by the Municipal Committee this morning. The chances of its being reported are infinitesimal.

Mr. Flatt's bill respecting tolls on toll roads, etc., will be considered by the Municipal Committee on Friday of this week, at 9.30 a.m., when delegations will be heard pro and con.

Mr. Howland will move that it is in the interests of the people of this province that measures shall be taken towards the establishment of a consumptive hospital for the cure of incipient consumption; and also a consumptive home, or homes, for the care of other cases, with a view to the prevention of contagion.

The fares to be taken by the company for each passenger shall not exceed five cents for any distance not exceeding three miles, and shall not exceed one cent per mile for any additional distance. Children under ten years of age shall be carried for three miles for three cents and for any additional distance at the rate of half a cent a mile.

The rates hereinbefore limited shall apply wherever the passenger is carried only within the limits of the municipality; where he is carried from one municipality into another, or others, a fare double the said rates may be charged, unless the company and any municipality otherwise agree; provided that in no case shall a greater charge be made than at the rate of three cents per mile for adults and one and a half cents per mile for children. Children in arms to be in all cases carried free.

Municipal corporations in this province may subscribe for any number of shares in the capital stock of, or lend any sum of money to the company, and may assess and levy from time to time upon the whole rateable property of the municipality a sufficient sum for them to discharge the debt so contracted, and for the like purpose may issue debentures payable at such times and for such sums respectively, not less than $20, and bearing or not bearing interest, as such municipal corporation thinks meet.

The Mayor, Warden or Reeve, or other chief officer of such municipal corporation subscribing for and holding stock in the company to the amount of $5000, or upwards, shall be ex-officio one of the directors of the company, in addition to the number of directors authorized by the special act, and shall have the same rights, powers and duties as any of the directors of the company.

A Somewhat Complicated Case in Montreal

Montreal, April 2.—A complicated and somewhat serious case was developed today by the prosecution of one Charles Dion, a bartender in the Broadway Hotel, opposite the Bonaventure Depot. He was charged in the Police Court with stealing from one Dame Paquette, wife of the proprietor of the Broadway House, the sum of $315.

One Laflamme had been insured in January last for $9000 in the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company and for $10,000 in the Equitable Life, but as the former company learned that the risk was not as represented they issued a seizure of revendication, and on Saturday last recovered their policies.

The Equitable recovered theirs by consent the day previous, by repaying the premiums. These were given to Laflamme, who should have handed them over to Madame Paquette, but instead of doing so he divided with Bartender Dion and the pair skipped the country.

Dion was arrested in Burlington, Vt., and pleaded not guilty this morning to the charge of theft. He will come up for enquete to-morrow. Laflamme has not been arrested.

The policies were placed by L. C. Paquette, a son of the beneficiary, and he represented Laflamme as a temperate man, keeper of a butcher shop and drover in St. Margaret-street. He was simply runner in Paquette's Hotel, and has been drinking ever since he was insured. In December, 1890, he was sentenced to four years in the Penitentiary for stealing a horse and wagon and his regular life in prison built up his system, which had been wrecked by dissipation, so that the doctors adjudged him a good risk in December last, a few days after his release, when the policies were applied for.

Application was made in the first instance to the New York Life for $10,000, but it was refused. In applying for this Laflamme filed a statement showing that he owed $3000 to Paquette, sr., as an explanation as to why Paquette should be made the benificiary of the policies.

DESPERATE AFFRAY AT HASTINGS.

Prisoner Shot Three Times Before Arrested—Constable Seriously Injured.

Hastings, Ont., April 2.—Henry Sharp, jr., was arrested yesterday for assaulting Constable Shafton last fall. Constable Wright was stabbed in the arm by Sharp, who received a bullet in return. The desperado took refuge in a garret, where he rained bricks on the head of a posse of specials sworn in to capture him. Constable Wright planted two more balls in Sharp's body, and only after a desperate struggle was the arrest made. The constable was attacked by Sharp's father with an ax handle and knocked down. Constable Wright's condition is serious.

Changes in Space for Cattle on Shipboard—Dominion Rifle Association Meets—Ontario Timber Resources Alleged to Be Over Estimated—General Ottawa News.

Ottawa, April 1.—The enquiry into the ocean rates on cattle which Mr. Mulock provoked by his action in the House last session has led to a kindred investigation, with action bearing upon it, which could not have been anticipated by the cattle exporters who primed Mr. Mulock into introducing his bill. It appears that the amount of space allowed for cattle on Canadian vessels is two feet eight inches all over, while the United States regulations restrict the space to two feet six inches on the spar deck. The attention of Mr. Magee, the commissioner appointed to enquire into the matter of freight rates, was called to the difference between the Canadian and the United States regulations, as affecting space. Information has been sought in all quarters and there is a universal consensus of opinion on the part of the experts that two feet six inches on the spar deck is ample, and in fact preferable in rough weather, as it ensures greater protection for the animals. Under these circumstances no order in council has been passed reducing the amount of space for each animal on the spar deck to two feet six inches. On other decks the space will remain as at present, namely, two feet eight. This change will be of great advantage to the steamship people, representing to one firm alone on vessels which they control in the cattle carrying trade a sum of $26,000 on a season's work.

The Department of Agriculture has been notified of the existence of a disease among cattle in Cape Breton. In view of the present circumstances, calling for greater vigilance in respect to any cattle disease, the Minister of Agriculture caused Mr. Jakeman, V.S., veterinary inspector of Halifax Quarantine, to visit the animals said to be affected. He found that one animal had died from impact of the third stomach, the animal having been fed on meadow hay and water. This incident is mentioned in order to show from what causes reports of contagious diseases among cattle will sometimes arise.

The tenders for the Peterboro and Lakefield division of the Trent Canal have been extended and to-morrow it will be decided as to who the successful tenderer is. The contest lies between the firm of Brown, Love & Aylmer of Jarvis-street, Toronto, and George Goodwin of Ottawa, as to which shall get the contract. These two tenderers are within a few hundred dollars of each other. The approximate value of contract is $350,000 for six miles of canal work. By the change of route which Mr. Schreiber suggested, and which Mr. Haggart approved, a saving of $100,000 has been effected, and double the amount of work will be put in the tender for the route as originally laid down, and which it was thought would go to Hogan & McDonald of Montreal, being $450,000 for three miles of the canal.

Hon. Mr. Dickey is to-day Minister of Militia and Defence. He was sworn in as such at Rideau Hall at 1 o'clock this afternoon by Mr. McGee, clerk of the Privy Council, in the presence of His Excellency Lord Aberdeen, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir A. P. Caron, Hon. Messrs. Costigan, Angers and Haggart. Mr. Dickey will assume charge of his new department in a day or two.

The attention of a prominent fishery officer was to-day drawn to a cable in Saturday's issue concluding with the statement that "whatever Canada may desire, the decision of the Paris arbitration will be strictly adhered to during the ensuing season." He replied that Canada's objection "was not to the decision of the Paris arbitration, but to the 'regulations' whereby it was proposed to have this decision carried out, and which in reality imposed conditions upon Canadian sealers neither justified nor contemplated by the tribunal of arbitration." "Unfortunately," he said, "Great Britain assented to these regulations at the instance of the United States in 1894, and Her Majesty's plenipotentiary at Washington seemed willing to have a similar regulation re-enacted for the season of 1895. Against the latter proposal the Government of Canada has entered a vigorous protest, and it was while this protest was under consideration that our fleet sailed for Japanese waters. Then the Canadian vessels now on the high seas have not been served with the regulations for 1895."

"No, they are duly licensed, and to each license is attached an extract from the award of the Paris tribunal, setting forth the conditions under which sealing is permitted, as to the method of catch, limit of the protected zone and the close season. These terms are also set forth in the Imperial Behring Sea Award Act of 1894, which prescribes the penalties for infraction, etc."

The proposed regulations provide for the carrying of fire arms under seal while hunting in Behring Sea, when the use of fire arms is prohibited. The season opens in Behring Sea on Aug. 1. During the spring and early summer, particularly in June and July, the Canadian sealers operate in the open waters of the Japan Sea, working eastward towards the 180th degree of west longitude, which marks the Behring Sea limit. In these open waters seals are hunted with rifles and shot guns. Now having hunted along to the Behring Sea limit, which they do until the latter part of July, the vessels under these proposed "regulations" are obliged to back hundreds of miles to Japan or Alton Island to have their guns put under official seal so they may enter Behring Sea, where hunting is allowed with spears only. This, of course, they cannot do and return to Behring Sea in time to hunt at the opening of the season. The Paris award certainly never contemplated regulations that would thus prevent sealing vessels from legal hunting in Behring Sea after August 1.

Speaking of this matter my informant said: "Where the British authorities seem to have been hoodwinked by people at Washington, is in accepting these regulations at the face value of their official title, namely, that it is designed 'to protect from mercenary interference' the Canadian sealers. As a matter of fact its effect is to make the possession of unsealed arms in Behring Sea prima facie evidence of violation of the law against sealing with guns. And I believe that is the view which Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper takes of the subject. I am informed that the Minister protested to the Imperial authorities in pretty strong terms against this regulation. The reply was that the sealing up of arms was 'voluntary.' Now, admit that our sealers are only ensured against interference and molestation at the hands of the United States cruisers by submitting to have their firearms placed under lock and seal during the open season in Behring Sea, and you make it so that no sealer will dare enter those waters without having complied with the 'sealing up' regulation. There is thus nothing voluntary about it. To have this 'sealing up' officially done, vessels will have to retrace their course hundreds of miles, instead of being free to go into Behring Sea on Aug. 1, and spear seals. It should not be considered prima facie evidence of a breach of law to be found in Behring Sea after Aug. 1 with loose arms on board that were in use outside the limit before the open season. The American cruisers are there, or ought to be, to see that seals are only taken in the legitimate way, namely, with spear or harpoon. That was all the Paris award contemplated.

"As to the distinguishing flag, I quite agree with Sir Charles Tupper that our sealers should not be obliged to fly such an emblem of piracy and pestilence as the black and yellow ensign prescribed by the proposed resolutions."

The council of the Dominion Rifle Association met here to-night, there being a large and representative gathering. Col. Henshaw, president, occupied the chair and among the officers present from a distance were: Lt.-Col. Massey, Hood and Starke, Majors Blaiklock and Ibbotson of Montreal, Major Mason, Hamilton; Major Hughes, M.P., Lindsay. The annual report, as prepared by the secretary, was approved. A letter was read from Colonel the Hon. J. M. Gibson, president of the association, regretting his inability to be present. It was decided to notify the first 20 men of the Bisley team to signify immediately whether they are prepared to go to England, and if an affirmative response, to forward therewith a medical certificate of good health. Major Markham of the 8th Hussars, New Brunswick, was confirmed as commandant of the team, and Captain C. N. Mitchell of Winnipeg as adjutant.

D. Ansell, Consul-General for Mexico at Montreal, was in town to-day and had an interview with Sir Mackenzie Bowell in reference to official representation of Canada at the International Exhibition to be held in the City of Mexico next year. Consul Ansell takes great interest in the proposed fair and thinks it a grand opportunity for Canada to work up an excellent trade with the republic.

The Dominion some time ago took action in the Exchequer Court against the Montreal Woolen Company for about $16,000 damages done to the Lachine Canal through the erection of their mill. The company put in a counter claim for $12,000 damages from the Government for damages caused by the canal to the mill. To-day Justice Burbridge threw out the counter claim, on the ground that he had no jurisdiction. The case of the Government against the company has not yet been disposed of. If the Woolen Company want to go on with their case against the Government they will have to do so by petition of right.

In Dominion Statistician Johnson's latest publication, "Forest Wealth of Canada," there appears this sentence: "From this explanation it appears that the estimate submitted to the Ontario Legislature in 1893 is in excess of what it should be by 24,000 million feet in quantity and by $60,000,000 in value."

The explanation referred to is a letter from Mr. Burgess, Deputy Minister of the Interior, published for the first time in Mr. Johnson's work. Mr. Burgess states that in making out the estimate of the timber in the disputed territory he wrote 26,000 for 2000 million.

BIBLES IN SCHOOL ILLEGAL.

Judge Gunster Declares Secular Education Against the U S. Law.

Scranton, April 1.—By a decision today of Judge Gunster in the Waverley Borough school case, the reading of the Bible in the Public schools of Pennsylvania was practically declared illegal. In his opinion, Judge Gunster said: "Denominational religious exercises and instruction in sectarian doctrines have no place in our system of common school education. They are not only not authorized by any law common or statutory, but are expressly prohibited and forbidden by our constitution, the fundamental law of the commonwealth."

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal."

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

The Pekin (China) Gazette, a journal that was 200 years old when the Normans conquered England, has the further distinction of having had 1,600 of its editors beheaded.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mayor Strong, of New York, was recently asked by a committee of Gentlemen to appoint a clergyman a School Commissioner, but he refused and stated that he was of the opinion that the other Commissioners could not work harmoniously with anyone who is a clergyman or a religious enthusiast, no matter of what denomination. The first constitution of New York adopted Sunday, April 20, 1777, contained this clause:

"Whereas, The ministers of the gospel are, by their profession, dedicated to the service of God and the cure of souls, and ought not to be diverted from the great duties of their function; therefore no minister of the gospel, or priest of any denomination whatever, shall, at any time hereafter, under any pretence or description whatever, be eligible to or capable of holding any civil or military office within this State." The disability was continued in the revised constitution of 1821, but was expunged in the revision of 1846. The early constitutions of other States included similar clauses and in Mississippi and Tennessee ministers of the Gospel were bracketed with those "who deny the being of a God, or a future state of rewards," as ineligible for election to the Legislature. The New York Sun advises Rev. Dr. Parkhurst to "hold a session with the Mayor."

One very interesting phase of the years progress in the study of social science is the attempts made by the students of the two great Canadian universities, Toronto and McGill, to get on some kind of a footing with representative Labor leaders and thereby get into sympathy with and attain to a practical understanding of the Labor movement. In Toronto the movement was apparently shipwrecked by the pedantic conservatism of a bumptious Faculty that objected to the students assembling to hear lectures by Mr. A. Jury and Mr. Phillips Thompson. Mr. Jury has been described by Prof. Baldwin, late of Toronto University and now occupying a chair in one of the great American universities, as the subtlest thinker and ablest reasoner on economic and social problems that he had met in America. Recently the men of McGill held a conference with representatives of the Montreal Labor bodies.

At a meeting of the Pleasant Sunday Sunday Afternoon Society in Montreal 1 st Sabbath Dr. Chas. W. Colley, of McGill, delivered a lecture on "Democracy." The lecture was a direct outcome of conference between the students of McGill and representative labor men of the city. The speaker urged the value of study of history in dealing with the questions of the present. It was the want of consideration of the past that made the weakness of the systems of Rousseau, Jeremy Bentham, John and James Staurt Mill, Grote any many others. Democracy, he said was the directing tendency of the present social and political ferment. The best definitions of modern democracy were those of its political side given by Abraham Lincoln, and of its ethical side given by Theodore Parker. The former said: "Democracy is the government of the people, by the people, for the people'; and the latter wrote: "Democracy, does no mean, 'I am as good as you,' but, 'You are as good as I am.'"

MAN AND MONEY.

dulled. When he emerged from this state of languor his despair had lost its first vehemence; it was no longer a frenzy, but a fever.

It was only then that the thought of Gaillot came to his mind. His whole course of conduct was now explained. By deferring his nephew's marriage he knew that he rendered it impossible, and the marriage not taking place the contract he had just signed was rendered void. Severin's first thought was to frustrate this odious calculation by hastening on the marriage; but how to explain to the lovers this sudden change? And, then, would this not be to make their separation more painful, and to render them more necessary to each other at the moment when they must part forever? Would not death appear to them more horrible in the midst of the first transports of possession; Why add the tie of felicity to that of love, when all ties must be broken? How could Anna then die? how could Elie survive her? Now, at least, they had nothing in common but their future. Life had not yet commenced for them; they were awaiting it; they were still in that dream of youth which may come a second time. The survivor would not retain the poignant memories of transports interrupted, of joys realized only to be snatched away, but only the remembrance of a beautiful vision which had vanished. Ah! why prepare for them sharper regrets; why show them a corner of Eden to shut it from them so soon? To what end present the cup of earthly joy to lips that were not to drain it? Should he not rather separate their clasped hands, pluck from their brows the wreathed hopes that crowned them, strip life of all its bloom before their intoxicated gaze? Moved by these thoughts, Severin decided to attempt no change in the plan that had been arranged.

But this was not enough. He must leave to the lovers these last days of ignorance and happiness; he must conceal from them the anguish which would have awakened their fears. He collected all his strength, summoned all his courage, and resolved to make this sublime effort.

And no disquieting thought came to disturb the felicity of Anna and Elie. Seeing nothing, hearing nothing of what was passing around them, they soared above the earth on the wings of love, enveloped in the atmosphere of their joy, like two angels borne gently along by a cloud, unconscious of the tempest brooding in the air.

Their days were spent in going over all the past, in confiding to each other every thought and feeling since they had first met, trying to determine the moment when they had begun to love each other. Forgetting the world in these enrapturing confidences they built in imagination the nest which was soon to shelter them; they planned their future together, furnishing each other in turn some tender inspiration, some sweet image, and this divine poem, in which the souls of two beings were interwoven, grew day by day in their thoughts.

Then there were those eternal contests of lovers in which each one seeks to appear unworthy in order to exalt the other, that boundless idolatry in which all things are called upon to render homage to the beloved being to whom all nature but serves as an adornment. Time blissfully squandered, adorable idleness of youth, with which no leisure of after years can compare!

Alas! who could disturb those celestial illusions and mark out a grave in the midst of so many blossoming hopes?

Anna grew weaker day by day, but neither she nor Elie perceived this. Wrapped in ecstatic dreams they had forgotten all things earthly, and no longer believed in unhappiness. It seemed as if God wished to lavish on the young girl, in compensation for the life he was about to take from her, all the ideal joys of love. No suffering came to disturb her painless dissolution; she gradually became detached from life, like the butterfly from the chrysalis. Even the very languor which gradually took possession of her whole being was full of a strange charm.

"I cannot describe what I feel," she said to Elie, "but I seem to tread on air; I no longer breathe; I feel at times as if I had wings."

"It is happiness," responded Elie, smiling.

And Severin, who was present, smiled also; while his hand, hidden in his bosom, convulsively clutched the flesh.

And how many paroxysms of anguish was he thus obliged to conceal, how many transports of grief to repress! How many times did he hurry away to shut himself up in his own room to relieve his bursting heart! How torturing the sight of the calm and smiling bliss which he must appear to share, for it was not enough to clinch his teeth to keep back his groans, to press down his eyelids to keep back his tears, he must also listen to the happy lovers' plans for the future, approve of them and even occasionally add some suggestion of his own. And while Severin was acting this terrible part the fatal end was fast approaching. He already began to count the hours that remained to Anna; every time she left his sight his despairing gaze followed her as if to take a last farewell; every time the door opened more quickly than usual he started to his feet expecting to hear the cry, "Your daughter is dead!"

The winter thus came to an end. Gaillot had pretended that, some difficulties having arisen, he would be obliged to delay the liquidation; Severin made no objection and the lovers armed themselves with patience.

But, as Dubois had foretold, the pernicious influence of the early days of spring soon made itself felt, Anna's health rapidly declined.

In his blind confidence Elie saw in this progress of the malady only the transitory effect of the change of season on an enfeebled organization. But her danger suddenly revealed itself to the young girl; she experienced the recoil of all who are drawing near the abyss of eternity; she felt its icy wind blow over her, and the instinct of self-preservation natural to the dying awoke within her. Hitherto she had neglected Dubois's directions, she now began to follow them scrupulously; she counted her pulsations and studied all her sensations. She even cautiously questioned the health officer and her father—both affected a tranquility which surprised without reassuring her. Far from this, as her weakness increased her anxiety also increased. Her pallid lips no longer smiled; her large black eyes, always fixed upon Elie, at times filled with tears; a vague terror possessed her.

De Beaucourt perceived this and it froze him with terror. He questioned her, spoke of sending to Brest or Morlaix for another doctor; Anna refused; she hoped nothing more from science.

One evening, when Anna found herself weaker than she had been before, Gaillot arrived unexpectedly and announced that the documents relative to the liquidation were almost ready.

Severin looked at his daughter.

"Yes," he said, mournfully.

"You knew it?" asked the banker with astonishment.

The manufacturer bent his head without making any response.

Gaillot sat down and tried to begin a conversation but a gloomy sadness seemed to oppress all present; Severin looked out of the window at the drizzling rain; de Beaucourt was sitting on a low seat beside Anna who, reclining in her father's easy chair, appeared to be struggling against an overpowering drowsiness.

Suddenly the young girl's face grew very pale, a shudder ran through her frame, and she stretched out her hands, clutching wildly at the air in an effort to raise herself. Elie and Severin sprang toward her.

"What is the matter, Anna? asked the young man, terrified.

Assisted by them she sat upright in her chair.

"Elie—father!" she cried. "Oh, my God! I am afraid.

"A doctor, a doctor!" cried de Beaucourt.

"No, stay—I want to see you."

Her look wandered from one to the other and, finally resting on Elie, she gave a cry in which all her ebbing strength was concentrated:

"I do not want to die!"

"To die!" repeated Elie, wildly, clasping his arms around her. "What do you mean by talking of dying, Anna? You to die! It is impossible!"

"Is it not? Oh, no, I do not want to die!"

She clasped her hands with delirious fervor.

"My God!—let me live. I am so young. I want to make him happy—I love him so dearly, my God! Ah, you do not know much I love you, Elie—Elie! I did not mean to tell you, Elie!"

She rested her head on the young man's shoulder with a tender grace which struggled against death.

He clasped his arms about her. For an instant the name of each uttered by the other in convulsive accents was the only sound heard; then the young girl's voice ceased.

De Beaucourt, terrified, staggered to his feet and aided by Severin made a movement to carry her to the bed.

Then she revived, put her arms around her father's and her lover's necks and, drawing their heads together on her bosom, kissed them, murmured a few unintelligible words and fell back heavily in the chair.

"Father!—she is dying!" cried Elie, falling on his knees in an agony of grief.

There was a moment of terrible silence. But suddenly Severin let his daughter's hand, which he had seized, fall, started wildly to her feet, and perceiving Gaillot, who was looking on:

Sir," he said, pointing to Anna's lifeless form, "you may now close you account.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

The bell had ceased to toll; the people were slowly leaving the church, the tapers smoked around the humble catafalque; the weekly mass for the repose of Anna's soul had just ended.

Two men in deep mourning, with pale and tear-stained faces, were ascending one of the hillside paths; they were both silent and avoided looking at each other as if they feared that a word or a glance would cause their grief to break forth afresh.

The elder, especially, seemed to have exercised every power of self-control to maintain the stern calmness under which he concealed his sorrow.

They walked on thus until they reached the top of the hill where, at the intersection of the cross-roads, stood a granite cavalry.

Here the elder man paused.

"Elie," he said, in a low but firm voice, "here our paths separate; I go no further."

"Do you mean this?" asked the young man, astonished.

"Yes," replied Severin, "the hour has come when we must part."

"What do you say?"

"It must be so, Elie; I will never go down to the valley again."

"And why not?"

"Why not? You ask me why not? Because it has swallowed up all I loved; because I have left fragments of my heart on every one of its thorns; because it is accursed, and I hate it!"

He stopped as if ashamed of his vehemence, clasped his hands, and looking down into the valley, "Do you not know, then, that all my past is there?" he said, in a voice choked with tears. "Ah! once before I stood in this spot, and I saw the valley lying before me as it lies now; I came then to entrust to it all I had—the poor possessions of a successful tailor, the beloved wife, whose hand I held, the child she carried in her arms! That was twenty years ago, Elie, and I stand again on the same spot, despoiled of everything, like a shipwrecked traveller cast by the waves upon the strand."

He paused for a moment, oppressed by his recollections.

"No," he resumed at last, "I will never return there! I wished to accompany you thus far, Elie, but only to bid you farewell!"

"I will not leave you," cried de Beaucourt; "a common misfortune unites us; we have need of each other—to talk of her. I will follow you wherever you go; your fate shall be my fate."

"That cannot be, Elie; you have a family."

"I have henceforth no one but you; were it not for you I should not now be living. I have lived only in order to fill a son's place to you. Ah, my God! Have you forgotten that in her last moments she clasped us together to her heart, that she united us by a last kiss, that she bequeathed us to each other? Ah, I shall never leave you; for us to separate would be to outrage her memory."

Severin was moved; he took the young man's hands and pressed them in his.

"Why recall to me these memories?" he said with emotion; "how did she, a child, know what path each of us was to tread? She united us in her love—her thoughts went no further. What we owe to her memory is to seek assuagement of our grief and for this, Elie, I must go away and I must go alone; to see you would keep my grief alive, reminding me ceaselessly of the past. You are a part of my memories and I wish to leave them all behind me; the place you would occupy in my heart would make the void beside it all the more felt."

"Ah, I will try to console you," said the young man.

"To console a grief is to keep it in the mind, and I wish to forget that I have loved, that I have lived. I wish to seek, far from here, a spot where nothing will remind me of what I have lost, where I shall no longer see the same verdure, the same sun, where I shall no longer hear the same tongue. I wish to learn to live a new life, full of toil and danger, which will occupy me so completely as to leave me no time for thought, in which the repose that follows fatigue will bring me oblivion."

"And why should not I seek the same remedy for my grief.

"You—you are young and your grief may be cured; let hearts whose grief is incurable tear up by the roots all that attaches them to this world; let the old, who have lost hope, make a desert around them. You are surrounded by life as by the air. It envelopes you; you cannot separate yourself from it. Larry awaits you in his peaceful settlement; go join him there. He has suffered; he will know how to console you. There you will dissipate your sorrow in action; you will aid Antoine in doing good. Happiness is contagious, and by force of sympathy with that of others—who knows?—you may, perhaps, one day be happy yourself."

"Why do you not try that means for yourself?" asked Elie quickly. "You know Larry's noble projects and admire them; why do you not give them the benefit of your experience? Those days that you wish to waste far away—give them to a noble cause; come and carry the banner of the future, you, martyr-saint of the past."

Severin shook his head.

"The banner of those who labor for humanity should not be borne by one who is dead," he said gently: "your standard bearer must be eager to lead the way to noble achievements. There can be no zeal for goodness without a belief in happiness, and this I have lost. What would a disappointed old man whose heart is corroded with grief do among you, youthful optimists? Chill your enthusiasm; tarnish your hopes; hinder you in your devoted and courageous labors. Give you the benefit of my experience, you say! Do you not

CURIOUS BEDSTEADS.

Although the majority of mankind is content with the conventional bedstead, manufactured either from wood, iron or brass, there exists certain individuals whose tastes, as regards this necessary article of domestic furniture, are by no means so simple.

Such, for instance, was the Parisian gentleman who, a short time ago, ordered from a firm in Paris a golden bedstead, every part of which, even down to the laths, was made of this precious metal. At first sight this certainly looks like a piece of unwarrantable extravagance, yet who knows but that the gentleman looked upon it in the nature of an investment, which he could at any moment realize, if he felt so inclined.

Equally uncommon was the bedstead which an old lady, who certainly had only tasted the Pierian spring of scientific knowledge, order to be constructed for her use. She had read somewhere that glass insulators placed under the casters of a bedstead were conducive to the retention of electricity in the body, and so she argued that a bedstead composed entirely of glass would prove a still better contrivance. Accordingly, she had such a glass bedstead constructed, which on completion proved to be by no means an inartistic piece of furniture.

Apropos of electricity, early in the present century a Dr. Graham, a quack who made and lost a large fortune over the "Temple of Hygiene," was in the habit of selling electric bedsteads at the price of $200 apiece, the property of which beds, he advertised, was to rejuvenate the persons who slept in them, as well as to give them beauty and health.

As a matter of fact, these bedsteads were nothing more than ordinary brass ones, with a battery attached, while all that could be said in their favor was that they were perfectly harmless.

But by far the most curious kinds of bedsteads are to be found in what we may term mechanical bedsteads, which some people of eccentric habits have, from time to time, ordered to be made.

A retired sea captain, who, although not actually mentally deranged, was what one may call "on the borderland," declared to his friends that he could not sleep unless he felt the motion of the sea. Night after night this unfortunate gentleman kept awake, thereby causing considerable damage to his health. At last it occurred to his medical adviser that something might be done in order to produce, by mechanical means, the movement which his patient so much desired. A consultation with a practical engineer resulted in the production of a bedstead which, by means of machinery, moved the mattress upon which the captain was to sleep up and down, producing, in every way, the effect so much desired. The bedstead proved a great success and the captain was no longer troubled with insomnia.

Without wishing to detract from the charms of music, yet for the purpose of inciting sleep we cannot help thinking it to be a failure, for if the music be good one keeps awake to listen to it, while if it be of the contrary nature, anger rather than sleep is apt to be engendered. This, however, was evidently not the opinion of a certain Indian prince who, a short while ago ordered a musical bedstead. Attached to the bottom of the bedstead was an instrument, something between a musical box and a piano organ. This musical Hindu had but to lie in bed, press a knob, and lo! the band struck up. The repertoire of this instrument, we are informed, was decidedly varied, containing all the latest tunes; so that on awakening from a dream the prince had but to press the knob and be lulled to sleep by the strains of "Cavelleria Rusticana," "Knocked 'me in the Old Kent Road," or whatsoever other tune suited his momentary humor.

Japan has Earned Formosa.

Formosa, which Japan will claim and probably get as part of her war indemnity, lies about one hundred miles off the Chinese coast, between the 20th and 21st degrees of latitude, almost within hailing distance of the cities of Canton, Amoy and Tuchan, and will be surrendered by China with more reluctance than any amount of money she is obliged to pay over. The island is about 400 miles long and 50 wide, inhabited by a mixture of races, some of them not yet emerged from their primal barbarism, and if Japan gets it her first duty will be to give it a civilized administration and bring its wrangling tribes into subjection, which the Chinese have never been able to do. It is in the main a mountainous and rugged territory, not very fertile nor otherwise valuable, but is of great stragetic importance, lying between the China and Eastern Seas, and will give important naval advantage to the country that possesses it. France has interests in those regions, and may have something to say about the transfer, and perhaps other countries will be represented in the discussion. But Japan has earned it; it is important to her, and she will probably get it.—New York Tribune.

Keeping Shoes in Order.

A woman hates to get her nice new shoes wet because it spoils them so, but with care the wetting will not hurt them much. As soon as you can remove the wet shoes do so, and rub them well with a soft rag, to get some of the dampness out, and to take off all the mud; then rub them with a cloth saturated with kerosene. Get as much of the oil into them as possible, and then fill them as full of dry oats as you can and set them aside for a few hours, when apply another coating of kerosene. The stiffness will have disappeared and the shoe will be in good shape when you want to don it again. Never try to put on a low shoe unless you have a shoehorn; you will be sure to stretch it out of shape in the back and make it ill-fitting. Keep the buttons sewed on your shoes and good strings in your laced boots, unless you want the men to say you are a "slouch." Have a paste patch put over the first sign of a break in your shoes and they will keep in shape and last twice as long. Cheap shoes and cheap gloves are a snare for the unwary. They get out of shape, are ill-fitting, and do not wear well. It is false economy to buy cheap feet or hand shoes.

Ladies Costumes

Ladies have a great deal of trouble in selecting dress goods. The variety is great. The quality is various and the merit claimed is sometimes more than the possession. When ladies are desirous of obtaining the finest grade of Black Dress Goods, they should ask to see Priestley's dress fabrics. These, as is well known, are the ne plus ultra of durability, beauty and delicacy of texture. They have long been the favorite dress goods of well dressed English women. The Americans prefer them to French goods. Canadian ladies can obtain them from reliable dealers. Ladies should always ask for Priestley's Dress Goods.

HAIL TO BISMARCK.

Seven Thousand Students Visit Friedrichsruhe.

ON THE CHANCELLOR'S BIRTHDAY

The Prince's Reply to the Students—Congratulatory Address—The Town Like a Country Fair—200,000 Messages Received and a Thousand Presents

Friedrichsruhe, April 1.—Hundreds of bouquets, the gifts of the numerous friends of Prince Bismarck, were sent to the castle this morning, with numerous laurel wreaths tied with ribbons, with the German colors attached, and bearing mottoes and inscriptions, "In Memory of April 1." These were hung from the branches of the trees around the front of the castle.

Prince Bismarck arose at 9.45, and Dr. Schweninger was the first to congratulate him, and presented him with a bouquet of roses and a cask of Pschorr beer. Prior to the reception of the students by the Ex-Chancellor, Prince Bismarck gave an audience to delegations of university professors, headed by Rector Pflederer, of officers of the Zedlitz Cuirassiers, of which the Prince is colonel; a number of representatives of the State of Hamburg and several other deputations. The Prince briefly thanked each deputation for their congratulations.

After the cheering had subsided the students' address to Prince Bismarck was read, as follows: Upon this happy day, when all Germany is resounding in jubilee, it is the sacred duty of the German students to present their homage to Your Highness. With thankful hearts the students celebrate the anniversary of the man who raised the Fatherland from long disunion to the glorious height of a united and powerful empire. What was achieved on the battlefield under the victorious banner of our fathers has fallen to the present generation an unearned harvest, but the German youth hope to bravely sustain and advance the work to which Your Highness devoted a lifetime, replete with great results. To this we heartily pledge ourselves. May God bestow upon Your Highness happiness and abundant blessings.

Prince Bismarck replied: I have just received from the rectors a recognition of what has been done in the past, but of a very much higher value is your welcome. It is a promise of the future, and is of greater worth for a man of my age, because the national feeling you evince is evidence of a continuance of my work. It is very satisfying to me to find a prospect that the German character will remain steadfast to the old principles. In politics it is much easier to know what to avoid than what to do. The guidance policy in politics can be compared to the navigation of a ship in unknown seas. The principal aim is reach a safe harbor. If it is reached, we ought to be thankful. One is never perfectly independent in guiding politics, but is always more or less dependent upon the decisions of others. Therefore, if we have succeeded partly we ought to thank God, and not complain because we have not achieved what we hoped to. Man proposes, but God disposes. Let us foster and guard what we have secured, and be thankful therefor. We mean to keep a fast hold upon the German empire as it is. Germany was powerful under the Carlovingians. The Saxon Hohenstaufens losing her position, it took nearly 600 years to regain it. Political developments proceed as slowly as geologic formations, so the work of leaders ought not to be judged hastily. The world will have to get a sight of the middle of the next century before I can be judged unbiased in history, or from the impartial standpoint of bygone times.

I am glad to feel your enthusiasm; glad to think that the German does not abandon in his age what enthused him in his youth. The seed laid in your hearts by William I. is certain to bear fruits in later days. I trust that you will always remain as German and as national as you are to-day. Men do not tear out of their hearts such a plant as national feeling, not even if Germans emigrate can it be uprooted, for I have proofs, especially to-day, that hundreds of thousands of Germans in America, Australia, Africa and elsewhere are still attached to the Fatherland, for which many of them fought hard battles. They remember me and send me greetings, recalling the hard fights for German unity, beginning with Schleswig-Holstein, that was the prologue of the greater struggle with Austria, which was of national consequence. These, with Sadowa and the war with France, were all necessary to obtain unity.

After Sadowa the principal point with me was that war with the French was not to come too soon, and that we should not be forced to begin it without proper preparation. After the French war many thought that we would be obliged to renew the contest within five years of peace. Indeed, it was to be feared, but it was the exclusive task of my life to prevent a renewal of hostilities. Germany had obtained what she needed. The Germans do not yearn for conquests. They have no aspirations toward what I should like to call Bonapartism. The profligacies of conquest do not belong to the German character. Preferring equity and justice we always are for peace, and ready to make minor sacrifices to preserve peace. The powerful can recede or make concessions. Neither Samoa nor the Caroline Islands were worth the war that lesser nations might have carried on for their sake. German sovereigns and princes made the greatest sacrifices for the erection of the empire. Let us be thankful that these sacrifices resulted in Germany unity. Holding fast to what we have, let us not fear those who are annoying us on account of our unity, or the internal factions that are quarrelling. Disputes have long been existent in Germany. These quarrels once prevailed between the guilds and the patricians, between the peasants and the lords, during the Bauernkrieg, and at other times. Without internal disputes we would arrive at a state of Chinesedom. We would petrify. Without a fight we would have no quickening for growing life, but in all our struggles we must have a point of concentration, and that point of focus is the German Empire. Let us stand by our Imperial Emperor. In this sense I call upon you for three hearty and thundering cheers for His Majesty Emperor William. Hoch, hoch, hoch!

Seven thousand students with six brass took part in the demonstration to-day. After the reception Bismarck went to his room and rested for two hours.

Jumped to Her Death

Boston, April 2.—Mrs. E. J. Jewett, wife of Henry L. Jewett, secretary of the International Trust Company, committed suicide to-day by throwing herself from a bridge into the Charles River.

COTTON PICKING.

One of the most remarkable mechanical devices recently introduced in Georgia is a cotton-picking machine. The dimensions of the machine are approximately nine feet in height. It is mounted on four metal-carrying wheels and in general appearance is not unlike a road engine, except that it is hauled by horses and receives the power to propel the working mechanism from the traction wheels. The rear wheels are four feet in diameter. The tires are eight inches wide and cleated on the rim, to provide traction, ample to operate the mechanism for picking the cotton from the plants and the stripping devices and elevators in motion.

The object of the elevators is to deposit the cotton in large sacks located at the top near the rear end of the machine. The total weight of the machine is about 1,600 pounds, and of extremely light draught, and it can be drawn and operated by one pair of horses. The cotton-picking apparatus can be readily and almost instantly raised or lowered to suit the condition of the cotton and the surface of the ground on which it is operated. The picking and stripping mechanisms are entirely incased with light metallic cases, except the elongated slots, through which the picking needles protrude. The needles are mounted on suitable bearings in vertical carriers, 34 in number, 17 on each side, being linked together, working simultaneously. The gears are incased within the carriers. Each carrier in making the circuit of its oblong course, making nearly one turn on its own axis, and each needle while in the plant makes 15 revolutions, and five revolutions in the opposite direction while being stripped.

The needles are inserted longitudinally into the plant to an extended position, then rotated rapidly and moved backward at a speed corresponding to the forward rate of travel of the machine, thereby avoiding any movement of the needles in relation to the plant except a rotary motion. The needles are withdrawn longitudinally from the plant and pass between yielding stationary strippers, whereby the cotton is deposited in elevators. The capacity of the machine is from six to eight acres per day, and from two to four bales per day, according to the yield. It takes 15 ordinary hands a whole day to pick one bale, averaging about 100 pounds each, or 590 pounds of lint after it is ginned.—Chicago Times.

Eternity of To-Day.

There are many heroic souls who sit enduring patiently the trials and tribulations of their lives and who find their only consolation in a persistent looking forward to the joys of eternity, which they expect to gain when their experience here is over.

It is a pathetic thing to consider the efforts of these patient, well-meaning waiters, who are trying to find comfort, warmth and joy from their contemplation of the dim future.

Sometimes this dreary fortitude seems mistaken as well as woeful, not because the hope cherished in the waiting hearts is delusive, but because such a persistent living in the future blinds the sufferer to a great deal of to-day's present good, which he might realize without losing his future advantage.

There is an immense amount of commonsense to be found in the theory that after all, eternity is now, and now is all the eternity we shall ever get. To day is part of our eternity quite as much as to-morrow will be, or next year or next century. We talk much of "eternal happiness," and this "eternity," we say, "has no beginning or end," yet the inclusive fact that to-day is part of our eternity, and that if we do not get some eternal happiness out of each to-day we will never get any at all. This we do not realize or act upon.

And when we have waked thoroughly up to the fact that this painfully strained living in the future is a mistake, we may find to day is not so barren as we thought. As its possibilities unfold, and the hidden eternal happiness it holds comes to light, we begin to find out how much eternal happiness we have thrown away because we have not taken each day what the eternity of every day brought us. The eternity of to-day holds something for each of us. What is it?—Harper's Bazar.

He Was Not Ashamed of His Color.

Fred Douglas, though very sensitive on the subject of any distinction drawn between negroes and mulattoes to the disparagement of the former, was always ready to crack a joke on his own color. He often laughed over the witticism of Mrs. Fred Grant's at his expense, when they met at the Chicago convention of 1888. "The convention had been in session several days, and there had been some balloting the day before," he said, relating the story to a friend. "I was sitting with Mrs. Grant and her party, watching the balloting. To my surprise one vote was cast for me for president of the United States. It had no sooner been announced by the tellers than Mrs. Grant turned to me, and said: 'You must be the dark horse of this convention, Mr. Dauglass.'" At a meeting of the free religionists in Boston some years ago, he was among the speakers. Referring to the rule of the assembly which limited the time of speeches, he said he never made a short speech that he was satisfied with, and never made a long one that anybody else was satisfied with. "I came here," said he, "not to speak, but to listen, to learn, not to teach; in fact," he added, "I came here merely to give color to the occasion.—Kate Field's Washington.

A Substitute for a Jardiniere.

If you lack a jardiniere in which to put a blossoming plant that is to be placed on the dinner table or in other conspicuous places, you can always make it fine enough for the occasion by wrapping the plant crock in creped tissue paper and tying it with a satin ribbon. Bring the edge of the paper above that of the crock and pass it over the fingers to stretch it, so that it will form a frill. Tie in place with a band of satin ribbon, with the ends made in a pert bow. Moss green and white papers are both good colors to use for the purpose, and the color of the ribbon must be decided by the complexion of the flower and its surroundings. In banking a mantel with potted plants, the best effects with many plants is secured by turning the plant crocks over on the side, so that the projecting plant only is visible.

HOW WOMEN WORK.

And How Their Entry Into Business Life Is Regarded.

It will occur to impartial observers that if women are not as persistent in business as men it is because they regard business as a possible stepping stone to something better and higher, while to a man it is the end and aim of existence. A man starts in life as lawyer, merchant, doctor, architect, clerk or what not; if he be a serious person all his soul is consecrated on the effort to succeed in his calling, and social life, political ambition, even love, are side issues, because he sees no hope for future ease and comfort except by means of that calling. A woman, on the other hand, has always two strings to her bow. Success in the employment at remunerative pay, which probably increases with the years, but, until she grows too old to consider matrimony among the possibilities of life, she never loses sight of the chance that a man may pass her way whom she could love and who could make her a happy wife. Thus with her there is no concentration of potential energy on a single object, but always a withholding from her labors of a reserve force which is only called into play when the man appears on the horizon. There are women whose toil is at least as unceasing as that of men—wives who get up early to light the fire and cook breakfast for themselves and their husbands, who despatch the children to school with washed faces, hurry down to the desk where their business is conducted, toil over figures all day, and when night falls drag their weary legs home to cook the family dinner. Such women work as hard as men and exhibit a persistency more enduring than the average man can boast of. But they are probably exceptions.

The average shop girl, saleswoman, milliner, typewriter, bookkeeper or cashier of the female sex is often lacking in concentration and absorbing devotion to her work. Other concerns flit across her mind like light clouds skimming the surface of her sky. She thinks of her dress, and whether she can afford a new hat; of a girl with whom she is intimate and whom she secretly hates; of a man whom she has met, of what he said and what he meant; of a party to which she had been invited and of the prospect of her having a good time there. For the moment these topics of thought divert her mind from the business in which she is engaged, and consume some share of her energy. A young man of the same age, that is, a poor thing, never allows matters of this kind to intervene between him and his business; he is trained to consider them after business hours.—San Francisco Argonaut.

THINGS WELL SAID.

Hatred is the madness of the heart.—Byron.

Fidelity is seven tenths of business success.—Parton.

There is an oblique way in reproof which takes of the sharpness of it.—Pope.

The mind is its own place, and in itself can make a heaven of hell, a hell of heaven.—Milton.

Two persons cannot long be friends if they cannot forgive each other's failings.—Bruyere.

If there be any truer measure of a man than by what he does, it must be by what he gives.—South.

If any man seek for greatness, let him forget greatness and ask for truth, and he will find both.—Horace Mann.

Envy is a passion so full of cowardice and shame that nobody ever had the cowardice to own it.—Rochester.

It is much safer to reconcile an enemy than to conquer him; victory may deprive him of his poison, but reconciliation of his will.—Feltham.

Whatsoever that be within us that feels, thinks, deserves, and animates, is something celestial, divine, and, consequently, imperishable.—Aristotle.

Football Salaries.

Some of the well-known clubs keep the salary list a secret, but as far as is known the distinction of paying the highest retaining fee belongs to the Everton Football Club, which, in one case of a professional leaving the Blackburn Rovers to join their club, agreed to pay him £250 down and £5 a week. The Sutherland Club is not far behind, and to secure a Scotchman, a player of repute, gave him his own terms, which were £160 down, £150 a year and a situation of £70 a year in a shipbuilding yard.

Then two clubs, at present the leading clubs of the Association Football League, have the reputation of paying the highest retaining fees, and also securing the biggest gates. Most, if not all, of the league clubs find it requisite to pay substantial sums to secure professional players, of which their respective teams for league matches entirely consist. There are 450 registered professionals in connection with the league clubs whose wages range from £2 10s to £5 a week.—Tit-Bits.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

"I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs, and I did what is often done in such cases, neglected it, thinking it would go away as it came; but I found, after a little while, that the slightest exertion pained me. I then who found, on examining my lungs, that the upper part of the left one was badly affected. He gave me some medicine which I took as directed, but it did not seem to do any good. Fortunately, I happened to read in Ayer's Almanac, of the effect that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral had on others, and I determined to give it a trial. After taking a few doses my trouble was relieved, and before I had finished the bottle I was cured."—A. LEFLAR, watchmaker, Orangeville, Ont.

Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

IN AID OF THE HOSPITAL

The W C A's Promenade Concert and Sale of Work in the B B C a Success

The W. C. A. held their first concert and sale of useful and fancy articles in aid of the Hospital in the B. B. College last night. There was a fair attendance and a good programme was carried out. The interior of the college was handsomely decorated with flags, bunting and flowers, and presented a charmingly inviting appearance. There were booths erected for the sale of work and presided over by different members of the Society. Everything imaginable was dispensed from those curtained recesses by the fair clerks from circus lemonade to a bottle of pickles. Pretty dressed little girls went through the crowd with grab bags and jim-cracks. The program, though not long, was excellent and was rendered during a breathing spell in the promenade concert. Mr. J. Flint acted as chairman. —The Haines Brothers opened proceedings with a musical selection in their usual good style; Master Leo Riggs followed with a clarionet solo. Mr. J. N. Doyle rendered one of his popular solos. Mr. W. S. Lalonde followed with a violin solo and had to respond to a well merited encore, Miss Kenyon gave a recitation which pleased the audience, Miss Casswell gave a vocal solo which received loud applause. Miss Emerson gave a very pleasant rendering of piano solo. Miss Garratt concluded the programe with a vocal solo which she rendered with her usual sweetness of tone and expression which never fails to move and enrapture her audience. Mrs. Colin Campbell and Miss May Price acted as accompanists.

A Good Thing is Always Desirable

So it is with the visits of Prof. Dorenwend to Belleville. On his last visit he was so busy that many ladies and gentlemen were unable to be attended to—he is therefore returning to give all who desire it another opportunity of procuring his art goods for the head. Prof. Dorenwend is undoubtealy one of the leaders of his Profession on this continent—his skill in arranging the coverings for the head of either lady or gentleman is well known. His goods are acknowledged to be perfect and in every way true to nature. They are the best protection to the head besides giving a refined and youthful expression to the face. Call and examine these marvels of his art and have them fitted in order to judge of the effect. Consult him about your hair, he will (free of charge) give you advice as to the preservation of it. He will be at Hotel Quinte on Thursday 11 April 1895.

BEAT THE RECORD

On Friday last such a March hurricane struck New York that made Gothamites dizzy and brought joy to the hearts of the architects of high buildings. The New York Sun telling of the blow, says in part:

The wind record was smashed yesterday For two minutes, from 10:51 to 10:53 o'clock, the anemometer on the Manhattan Life building measured 75 miles an hour, There was never an anemometer in New York that had such a chance before—that is, never one that was so high up and so much 'in it' when a gale was blowing. The gale drove all the mechanics and laborers out of the tops of the big buildings in the course of construction. It tore down sign boards, blew over chimneys, smashed street show cases, had half the walking population busy chasing hats, and raised Cain generally. It pushed against everything and everybody at the maximum rate of 28,18 pounds a square foot, and it gave the Manhattan Life building a million-pound shove without budging it.

The wind's highest previous record in the city was 72 miles an hour. That was made in 1876. The trouble yesterday was that there was a high pressure in Chicago, and the wind from a whooping big New England storm struck it, glanced off just as if it had been Chicago cheek instead of high pressure, and dashed back at us; we being on the edge of New England storm's low pressure. For twelve hours between sunrise and sunset the average gale was 55 miles an hour, which is also a record breaker for New York. It blew harder here than it did at Rock Island, which, outside of Chicago, is the windiest spot in America. It was just an ordinary wind at sunrise, and it went up at the rate of ten miles or more an hour. It was just a steady increase until the record was smashed at 10.51 o'clock. It decreased by fits and starts after that, and an hour before sundown it had fallen to 43 miles.

When work was resumed on the various tall buildings in the morning the wind averaged about 38 miles. That isn't so bad to encounter in the street, but up above the tops of the buildings it pulled like a team of horses, and the men had to hang on with one hand while they worked with the other. As it increased the mechanics quit work. The contractors kicked about it, but the men said they wouldn't take chances. Some of them stood it up to 60 miles an hour. Then they had to crawl around to keep from being blown away, and they gave it up. There wasn't a stroke of work doing on any of the down-town buildings at 10 o'clock in the morning.

In the street the gale was kicking up a frightful dust. It swept around corners with force enough to knock pedestrians over if they were not sure of their footing. At the corner of Dey street it picked a thin man up and threw him at a thick man's stomach. The thick man wouldn't accept an apology. The thin man kept to windward of him, though, and the thick man couldn't hit him hard,

The women had a hard time of it. Their skirts gave the gale a purchase, and they slid along until a lamp post or some other obstacle stopped them. There were a good many embarrassing situations. Altogether the hour from 10 o'clock to 11 o'clock was an unhappy one for everybody —except architects and builders.

The men who have planned and built the tall steel-frame stone-veneer buildings have been anxious for a high wind for some time to see the effect it would have on their buildings. They went up on the top floors and hung cobble-stones and granite blocks from the ceilings in order to discover whether or not there was any vibration. There was a company in the United States Weather Bureau Office in the tower of the Manhattan Life building when the record was broken. They had a ten-pound granite block hanging from the ceiling. There was a roaring going on outside so loud that it almost drowned the voices of the men inside.

It was the wind striking the tower. At the height of the gale the granite block swayed imperceptibly. The architect was immensely pleased. There was hardly any vibration to speak of in any of the big buildings. As yesterday's breeze wouldn't be equalled more than once in twenty or thirty years, it is reasonably certain that the big buildings won't blow down.

The highest wind ever recorded in the country was at the top of mount Washington, where it blew once at the rate of 186 miles an hour:

At the top of the flood tide in the morning the tumult in the bay, so the veracious old boatman said, was greater than they had ever seen it before. Gale and tide were in conflict, and there were picturesque results. The tide struggled to push its usual volume of ocean into the Hudson and the East river. But the north-west wind was too much for it and lashed it so vigorously that it began to retreat oceanward half an hour before the schedule. Off the Battery at 9 a.m the battle of tide and blast sent high into the sunlit air countless fountains of spray on which the sunshine painted rainbows. It was all pretty enough to the spectator ashore; but folks afloat didn't admire it so much.

Third Line of Thurlow Reports.

The snow is going fast and wheels are taking the place of runners.

There is a slight boom in the horse trade. The demand for stylish, high stepping drivers is in excess of the supply. There is no enquiry for commoners but the chaps that can lift their knees are quick of sale at good prices,

Herbert Rottan will remain in Prince Edward Co. another summer.

Our popular cheesemaker, Mr. Bell, is preparing for business. He expects to open his factory about the 15th April.

If you want your saws sharpened or a beautiful residence built call upon our neat carpenter, Mr. John Cooley, sr., who will be sure to please you.

Our young orator, Mr. John Cooley, jr., held the audience spell bound for one and a half hours with his speech at the Patron's meeting held in the school house last Monday evening, 25th inst. so I am informed.

Our popular young minister, Rev. Mr. Nevill, preached to us a very interesting sermon last Sunday.

The Sabbath services and week night prayer meetings are very well attended considering the bad state of the roads. We have a beautiful church, a new organ, good organist and choir, comfortable sheds and two excellent ministers.

TORONTO, March 1.—Among the thousands of orders which weekly pour into the offices of the Dodd's Medicine Co. Ltd., in this city, are many from Austria, Great Britain, Germany, and other countries. The curative properties of Dodd's Kidney Pills in cases of Bright's disease and concomitant ailments have been brought to the attention of friends abroad by patients who were cured here, they in turn have called the attention of their acquaintances to the marvellous effects resultant from the use of the pills until now there is a steady and growing demand for the specific and each foreign mail exhibits an increase in he orders.

DEATH OF MRS THOS DACY

An Early Settler and Exemplary Wife and Mother Gone to a Glorious Reward

Mrs. Thomas Dacy died at her home near Marysville, Tyendinaga, on Friday last and the funeral took place Sunday afternoon to the R C. Church, Marysville. Her late father, John Sweeney, an Irishman, was one of the earliest settlers in this country and in his time one of the most influential. He had a large family and at one time he and his sons owned in a block upwards of a thousand acres of the best land in Tyendinaga.

Mrs. Dacy was the youngest child and inherited the homestead. A noteworthy fact is that she was born, was married and died in the same house. Mrs. Dacy, who at the time of her death was sixty-five years of age, was a woman that in a more than ordinary degree was respected and esteemed. As one of the earliest settlers she was known throughout the county and her funeral brought together a large gathering of all creeds and classes, from almost every part of the county. The procession was over a mile long and it was one of the largest funerals ever held in this district. An acknowledgment of the superior qualities of the deceased was the theme of Rev. Father Quinn's funeral discourse "the bringing up of a family."

The pallbearers were Jas. Darcy, P. Farrell, Geo. Anderson, Jas P. Magher, B. McGinnis and J. M. Hurley.

The heartfelt sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereft husband and family of whom out of four girls and two boys, one son and three daughters are living.

BELLEVILLE'S DELEGATION

Sent to Toronto to Petition the Government to Reject the Bill of the Patrons

Mayor Walmsley, Solicitor Henderson and L. W. Yeomans go to-night to Toronto to join with the municipalities to oppose the bill of the Patrons, brought before the legislation to abolish market fees. They take with them a large petition signed by a large number of farmers in this vicinity against the proposed bill. What the farmers ask for is that the market be kept clean and heated during the winter months. This has always been complied with and they are satisfied with the service given and do not object to the market fee.

News From Darkest Africa

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lake received a letter last evening from their daughter Mr. C. W. Bird dated Jan. 21, saying Mr. Bird was "rapidly improving and able to move about. Although very much reduced in flesh. The Lord is good. A stronghold in the time of trouble. As the wet season lasts from December till May we will not be able to move or start for England till it is over. We would much rather go back to our work in the interior but Cyril's health will not allow of it. We are hard at work at the language and we are pleased to write Cyril has the first primer in the printing press and eleven hymns. I have written one and are anxious to send it back to Kavoungwa as soon as printed. I am very well myself. Praise His name".

Doing Great Business.

The Box and Basket Co. are running full blast at present. They have just shipped three car loads of axle grease boxes to Toronto and Peterboro. They also have large orders for berry boxes. They have received a contract for a large number of lard boxes. The old tin boxes formerly used for lard are going out, the reason being the lard becomes rancid. This order alone is sufficient to keep the factory running all summer. The firm propose to enter into the manufacture of all kinds of bee keepers supplies. It is thought the factory will be double its size before the end of the present year.

Died at Portland, Oregon

Mrs. J. C. Mullett who with her husband moved from this county to Portland, Oregon, some ten years ago, died at her home in that city Saturday, March 23rd. of cancer in the heart, She was a daughter of Mr. John Geary of Madoc where she was born. She has been ill for nearly four years and for twenty weeks previous to her death was confined to her bed. The remains were interred in Portland. Mr. Mullett is foreman in a box factory. They had only one child, a girl. Several of the sisters and friends of Mr. Mullett live in Belleville.

Thought he had Quarters.

A funny thing about the Sinclair and Ostrom burglary is that the thief thought he was getting quarters instead of coppers and was making a haul of about $50. The coppers were done up in packages about the size of the usual $10 packages of silver, and he regarded as beneath his notice some loose coppers that were lying in the till. The police it is said have a clue that may lead to the detection of th thief.

Died in Toronto

Mrs S. Eustace returned from Toronto this morning where she had been attending the funeral of the late Mrs. E. B. Clancey who died there on Friday the 29t inst. Mrs. Clancey contracted grip which led to inflamation and resulted in her death. She leaves a husband and four children to mourn her loss. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon to St. Michael's cemetery there. Mrs. Clancey was well known here.

The Last Sad Rites

The funeral of the late Sister Monica, who died at Loretto Convent on Monday evening took place this morning to St. Michael's church where requiem mass was sung for the repose of her soul. The case of death was heart failure. Sister Monica was Miss Mary Creighton before she left the world. She had been in religion about thirty-eight years.

Mr D Creighton's Position

Mr. David Creighton, formerly Manager of the Empire, has been appointed Deputy Receiver-General in Toronto, in place of Mr. C. J. A Kicker

Mayor Walmsley this morning received a letter to which the author forgot to affix his signature. The writer is a kicker of the first water and he not only finds fault with the City Council and the streets of the city, but with the Dominion and Provincial Legislatures as well. There are forty different complaints all of which he asks a speedy and efficient remedy for.

THE IRON AND STEEL INDUSTRY

The Industrial Com't Confer With Members of the Board of Trade and Decide Upon an Offer

The Industrial Committee met yesterday with Messrs Thos. Ritchie, U. E. Thomson, Walter Alford, and Harry Corby, M.P. from the Board of Trade to consider the offer submitted to the city by the iron and steel men. The Board of Trade representatives were not at all favorably impressed with the financial backing of the new company, or at least their presentation of it. Accompanying the offer was a letter from the solicitor of Dun & Co's commercial agency regarding the character and responsibility of the men interested.

The proposition of the company was that the city should give them a free site of sixteen acres, free water, exemption from taxation, and purchase a certain amount of the Company's twenty-year bonds, in other words give the company a twenty-year loan.

It was the last item that all the discussion was over. Ald. Robinson was dead against the company. He thought they wanted to hoodoo the city out of the loan. The Mayor though and the other members of the committee were forgetting the industry here if possible. The company promises to erect a $500,000 plant with a capacity of 262 tons of iron and steel a day. Instead of accepting the proposition for a loan, the Committee passed a resolution offering the other concessions, but substituting for the loan a bounty per ton on the output of the mills, and this was forwarded at once to the Company's representative.

THE WORLD GROWS BETTER.

Substance of a paper Read by Rev. Mr. Marshall Before the Ministerial Ass'n

At the regular meeting of the Ministerial Association Monday, Rev. Mr. Marshall read a paper on the present comparative social condition of humanity, with a view to deciding whether the aggregate tendencies were upward or downward. Following is a brief summary of it:

Is the world growing better?

1. There is less physicial suffering today than ever before in the world's history. The noblest men and women in the world are laboring to lessen suffering amongst the poor and helpless. Consider our hospitals and orphanages in the civilized world.

2. There is less crime in the 19 century than ever before in the world's history, that is in proportion to the world's population. The moral step of the British imperial is known and its crime is registered.

This is the testimony of Dr. Martineau, Dr. Seekey in History of European Morals. There are more fine moral women in a city like Belleville in fifty years than there were in the whole of Greece in 500 years. Let us remember Greece stood higher in morals than any other nation outside of christianity. If we require proof we can have them from our national life—power and position. The Anglo-saxon are the most advanced in civilization and education and are growing faster than any other people. 200 years since, the Anglo-saxon people were 6 millions, 90 years since they were 20 millions, to-day they are 111 millions. These 111 millions govern 400 millions and they posses one third of the whole earth.

Mr. Gladstone says one third of the world is under the Anglo-saxon people, They have the physical and intellectual forces to govern the whole world. See his introduction to the Pictorial Bible now being published.

3. The spiritual life of the world is higher to-day than ever before. One hundred years since there was one Foreign Missionary Society in the world. It had two men in the Foreign Field. To-day there are 50 strong missionary societies. Consider what has been done by the men in these societies. Think of Moffat or Carey and names to many to mention. There was no bible society till 100 years since. 100 years ago there was 1 Christian communicant to every 14 of the population in the United States. To day there is 1 communicant to every 4 of the population of the United States. These are given in the Chicago Standard for January, 1895. If Christian men studied their bibles faithfully to see what God has said and consider fully what is being done there would be more faith in the churche's vitality.

The brotherhood of man was never so fully set forth as to-day.

The unity of the human race was never taught so fully in the past 2000 years as it is to-day.

The great commission of Jesus Christ in carrying the gospel to the heathen was never so fully obeyed as it is done in this 19th century.

We pity the people who are without hope for the redemption of the world.

WHY REV MR MARSHALL RESIGNES

The Rumored Launching of Another Baptist Cause East of the River

Rev. R. Marshall, pastor of the Baptist church, was seen to day by a reporter of the ONTARIO. In reply to the scribe's question as to whether or not he had tendered his resignation the rev. gentleman replied he had sent in his resignation on Sunday morning last and it was to take effect at the end of June. He gave as his reasons that there was a probability of a Baptist cause being established on the east side of the river and he could not countenance another cause as the present Baptist church, although independent, was being helped by the Home Mission Board.

It is very well understood that the other cause is to be started by Rev. W. W. Weeks, When Mr. Week's left his congregation to come west he was told that they would give him an advance of $500 on any offer of salary he might get. The climate of New Brunswick however does not agree with either Mr. or Mrs. Weeks.

DIED

MULLETT.—At Portland, Oregon on the 23rd of March, of Cancer of the breast, Clara J., beloved wife of J. C. Mullett and daughter of John Geary of Madoc.

An old Resident Gone.

Mr. P. Highley who has been confined in the Belleville Hospital for the past three months died yesterday morning from inflamation of the lungs. He was 72 years of age and had lived most of his life in this city. When the late Geo. Taylor was appointed Sherriff Mr. Highley entered his office as a bailiff and continued with him until the Sheriff's death. Mr. Highley, for a number of years, was interested in mining in North Hastings and spent much time and money developing different mines, but declining health forced him to give this up. Mr. Highley was also a horseman and his judgment on an animal was considered sufficient. In his time he owned many good horses, which he trained himself. Deceased was a man of reserve, and was considered the soul of honesty and uprightness.

Mrs. Tobias Meyers, who is 84 years of age, and resides with Mrs J. N. Lazier, is his sister. The funeral took place this afternoon from Mr. Lazier's residence.

A Belleville Boy's Success

We are pleased to note that Mr. F. G. Wallbridge of this city has passed his final examination as M. D., C. M. from Trinity University, Toronto. He was among the eight who were awarded certificates of honor. It is all the more gratifying to note as Mr. Wallbridge has graduated in three years when the ordinary term is four years.

Much of life's misery is due to indigestion; for who can be happy with a pain in his stomach? As a corrective and strengthener of the ailementary organs, Ayer's Pills are invaluable, their use being attended always with marked benefit,

The Best Pill.—Mr. Wm. Vandervoort Sidney Crossing, Ont., writes: "We have been using Parmelle's Pills, and find them by far the best Pills we ever used." For Delicate and Debilitated Constitutions these Pills act like a charm. Taken in small doses, the effect is both a tonic and a stimulant, mildly exciting the secretions of the body, giving tone and vigor,

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.

Yellow as a guinea.—The complexion, in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick head ache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation, These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURES which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels there after to become regular. High professional sanction has been accorded to it; and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00, Sample Bottle 10 cents, Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-smile of their signiture. Sold by all medicine dealers.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich it, every bodily function fags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, its contamination by bile, or other causes, serious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery

EDISON'S LATEST.

The Kinetophone Will Show Life Size Figures That Talk.

The kinetophone is the name decided upon by Thomas A. Edison for his latest contrivance. It is a combination of the well-known kinetoscope and the phonograph. The new machine resembles the kinetoscope closely, with the addition of rubber tubes and ear pieces, by means of which the voices of the subjects shown in the pictures may be heard. The matter of combining the two machines was, according to Mr. Edison, very simple, the only obstacle being to get them to work in perfect accord. That is, the kinetoscope and phonograph had to be started at exactly the same time, or the action and sound would not come in together. The machine in its present state is small, and the pictures produced are only the ordinary small ones of the kinetoscope. The problem that Mr. Edison has now set to solve is the production of life size figures, and he says he will have the machine in working order in three months. His idea is to throw the life size pictures of the kinetoscope upon sheets by means of the stereopticon, and produce the sounds through trumpets atached to the phonograph. In experimenting for the production of life size pictures many obstacles have been encountered. The machine requires a larger film and a more powerful light, and the pictures produced must be flawless. In the small machines slight flaws are not noticeable, but when these pictures are magnified 500 times to make them life size, the deviation of a hair's breadth will amount to an inch when shown on the sheet. The slightest waver will spoil a picture. Mr. Edison is enthusiastic over the kinetophone, and he says he will be able to produce grand opera with it, besides many other things. "In fact," he said to a reporter to-day, "the field of usefulness of the kinetophone is without limit."

Fortunes From Fancy Risks.

The underwriters who were not afraid to take flyers on the cargo of La Gascogne, in spite of the fact that when she was six days overdue she had become what they term in insurance circles a fancy risk, are at present reaping the rewards for their daring. In one case some thousands of dollars clear profit was made by the turn of a couple of hundreds. It looked on the seventh day as if nobody in the business could be induced to take La Gascogne on any terms, and but three hours before the staunch ship was sighted off Fire Island an insurance man went all over the street literally begging his confreres to help him out of the hole he was in by consenting to relieve him of a share of his risk. But could not get rid of his policies on any terms, although the rates he offered were very tempting.

In fact this business of reinsuring risks when they have in the course of events become "fancy" has developed into something of a lottery, and the returns in not a few instances have been very profitable. La Gascogne, after every man in the profession had in his heart of hearts given her up as lost, has shown that a ship may be overdue more than a week from purely natural causes, and the alarm felt in similar cases will be much diminished hereafter. It is noteworthy that Captain Baudelon refused all aid in his distress, a fact which saved many thousands of dollars to his employers. In fact, the ocean liner captains are not permitted aid except in tremendous emergencies, as it is too costly, and the captain who comes into port without it is more highly esteemed than the one who brings his ship in home in better condition, but with the aid of tugs and tramps of one kind and another.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

LESS MOUNTED POLICE.

The Force to Be Cut Down by 150 Men.

NEWFOUNDLAND DELEGATES HERE

Ottawa, April 3.—The total strength of the Nortwest Mounted Police for the present year will be about 800 men, a reduction of 150 as compared with the last year. This reduction will not, however, impair the efficiency of the force. The usual patrols will be sent out and the work hitherto performed will not be curtailed. The changes which Commissioner Herchmer has introduced are calculated to strengthen the force by getting rid of those men who are not amenable to discipline. Thus, for instance, if a constable is guilty of an infraction of the rules, gets drunk, or otherwise misbehaves himself, he is allowed to go. Dismissal of some constables of this class has had a most salutary effect. No recruiting is going on at present to make up for the time-expired men, but if a good armorer, blacksmoth or saddler offers, and he comes up to the physical requirements, he is not refused enlistment. Recently the force captured some horse-thieves near the international boundary. They were thought to be white men from the States, but turned out to be a Canadian Indian and his squaw. They entered American territory, stole some rifles, a saddle and horses, returned to Canada and then when pursued doubled back again. They were finally captured near Lethbridge.

Mr. W. F. King, International Commissioner for delimitation of the boundary between Alaska and Canada, will be at work here most of the summer collecting reports of the survey parties which have been working on the northwestern frontier for the past two seasons. Only one party will likely take the field this year. It will be in charge of Mr. Wm. Ogilvie, who recently returned from Alaska. He will leave for the Pacific Coast again about the end of this month.

Chief Justice Davie, before leaving Ottawa, secured the consent of Sir Mackenzie Bowell for the appointment of a British Columbian to act in an advisory capacity to the Canadian commissioner, inasmuch as British Columbia is greatly interested in the speedy settlement of this question.

The Minister of Agriculture is taking a great interest in the proposed Territorial Exhibition, which is to be held at Regina from July 29 to Aug. 7, and towards the expenses of which the Dominion is paying $25,000. If their Parliamentary duties permit Mr. Angers and Mr. Daly will visit the exhibition. His Excellency Lord Aberdeen has promised to open the fair and five governors from the Western States will be guests of Lieut.-Governor Mackintosh during the week. The exhibition itself will afford a great opportunity to Alberta, Assiniboia and Saskatchewan, the three great provisional districts, to vie with one another in proving the industrial, agricultural and stock-raising capabilities of that wonderful country. During the week Prof. Robertson and his assistants will deliver lectures upon dairy farming and Mr. Gilbert upon poultry-raising. Added to this prizes will be offered for the best essays not more than four foolscap pages in length upon "Irrigation," "Gopher Destruction," "Dairy Products and Cheese-making," "How to make the farm pay," etc. Lieut.-Governor Mackintosh is at the head of the enterprise and is pushing the project with his usual energy.

Hon. Robert Bond, Colonial Secretary of Newfoundland, wired Sir Mackenzie Bowell to-day that the Island delegation will arrive here at noon to-morrow. It is expected that the first conference will be held on Thursday. A meeting of leading citizens was held this morning, at which arrangements were made for tendering a banquet to the distinguished visitors.

The High Commissioner is asking for an additional supply of "Handbooks of Canada," to be sent to his office for distribution in England. He says he has repeated demands from schoolmasters for large numbers of these books and encloses to the department a letter from one headmaster of a Public school asking for five dozen copies of the book to be used as a reader by the senior class in his school.

G. T. Cox, a Government Homestead Inspector in Manitoba, furnishes an interesting report to the department in reference to the location of a number of Massachusetts people in that province. Nine delegates from Massachusetts, in charge of Mr. Cox, visited Manitoba in 1893. As a result of this visit three of the men took up homesteads and have induced many others to settle there, the colony, so to speak, now numbering 84 persons, of whom 52 are adults. They have 27 homesteads amongst them.

The following cases were dealt with by the Supreme Court to-day: In Lundy v. Lundy argument was concluded, judgment being reserved.

Timothy Eaton & Co. v Sangster was argued. The respondent, a young child, was hurt by a portable mirror in appellant's store falling on him, and brought an action for damages. The appeal sought to have restored a non-suit granted at the trial, but set aside on appeal. Respondent's counsel was not called upon, but the appeal was dismissed, the court holding that there was evidence for a jury, and it was for appellants to disprove negligence whether the mirror fell of itself or by the act of the child. Shepley, Q.C., for appellants. McGregor for respondent.

In Murray v. Jones the appeal was dismissed with costs. Ferguson, Q.C., stated on behalf of appellants that the case was settled, but Smythe, for respondent, denied it and urged disposal of the case.

Donohue v Hull was argued. The appellant, a married woman, sold land belonging to her separate estate, and the creditors of her husband garnished purchase money, claiming that the land was held in trust for her husband and that appellant had no right to sell. The appellant argued that fraudulent conveyance could not be inquired into on garnishee proceedings, nor could the money be followed. Judgment was reserved. Mr. Armour, Q.C., for appellant; Mr. Gibbons Q.C., for respondents. This concluded the hearing of appeals for this term. Court adjourned until Monday, May 6, when judgments will be delivered.

James Fitzsimmons has been reinstated as deputy-warden of New Westminster Penitentiary, satisfactory evidence being forthcoming to show that Fitzsimmons had been misrepresented in connection with the investigation before Judge Drake and accordingly Sir Charles H. Tupper has given him his old position.

The law prohibiting throwing mill rubbish into navigable streams was to go into effect on May 1, but it was ascertained to-day at the Department of Marine and Fisheries that it is not the intention of the Government to enforce the law until such time as the matter is dealt generally with during the coming session.

"It will be remembered," said Mr. Costigan to your correspondent to-day, "that last session a short act was passed, simply repealing the right given to the Governor in Council to exempt rivers from operation of the act prohibiting the throwing of sawdust or mill refuse in rivers, and providing that it should take effect on May 1. But at that time it was intended that a bill should be introduced at the next session dealing with this subject specially, any mills desiring exemption to apply for it. However, owing to the lateness of the session, the matter cannot now come up in Parliament before that month, and in consequence the Government will not, through their officers, enforce the law, as it will stand after May 1 until a course of action is decided upon during the approaching session.

Mr. Douglas Stewart, inspector of penitentiaries, leaves for St. Vincent de Paul to-morrow, accompanied by Prof. Saunders, director of Experimental Farms. Stewart thinks that farms attached to penal institutions can be put on a more economical basis, and with the consent of the Ministers of Justice and Agriculture Prof. Saunders accompanies him to give instruction to the farm foreman. Some of the penitentiary farms include several hundred acres. From Quebec the two officials go to Dorchester, N.B., and subsequently to western penal institutions.

The statement that the Government has ceased the collection of 12 1-2 per cent. royalty on British copyright works is not correct. The time was originally fixed for last week, but before Parliament adjourned last session the law was changed and the royalty will be collected until the end of the present Parliament.

NEWFOUNDLAND DELEGATES.

The Anti-Confederation Agitation Declared to Be Exaggerated.

Montreal, April 3.—The delegates from Newfoundland to treat with the Canadian Government in regard to confederation, Hon. R. Bond, Hon. E. P. Morris, Hon. George Emerson and Mr. W. H. Harwood, arrived in this city this morning, and will leave for Ottawa to-morrow morning by special train over the C.P.R. They were met at the depot by Mr. J. A. Cantlie, President of the Board of Trade, Mr. James E. Rendell and Mr. Stewart Munn of Stewart Munn & Co., Montreal and Harbor Grace, and escorted on 'Change at noon. At a subsequent meeting of the Board of Trade Council, it was decided to tender the delegates a complimentary banquet on their return from Ottawa.

The distress in the Ancient Colony, Mr. Bond says, is very acute, but it was alleviated somewhat by the success of the seal catch this spring. Speaking of confederation, he said: "I think the intelligence of Newfoundland is prepared to wait until the terms of confederation have been ascertained before expressing any opinion pro or con. The little display of opposition at the present time just gives a foundation for the exaggerated reports that are being sent broadcast to the press of the United States and Canada. The respectable-thinking portion of our population are not mixed up in the present opposition; they will await the return of the delegates before taking sides one way or the other. Most people look upon it as a question of terms. If the present Whiteway party are placed in a position to show the people of the colony that it will be to their advantage for Newfoundland to enter into a Federal Union, there would be little doubt of the result."

He denied a statement attributed to him in The Witness that they had been given power by both branches of the Legislature to negotiate a treaty. Before confederation could be consummated it would have to be submitted in some form to the people.

A TIGER HUNT IN CANADA.

An Exciting Time Among Prince Edward County Farmers.

Belleville, Ont., April 3.—Yesterday a tiger was killed in Prince Edward County. The animal measured 9 feet 8 inches from tip to tip, and was a beautiful specimen. For weeks the farmers have been missing hogs and sheep, uneaten portions of the carcases showing that a wild animal had done the killing. Saturday one farmer found two cows killed and partially eaten, and a party of hunters tracked the beast to a thick swamp. The first shot wounded and enraged the tiger, which attacked the hunters. As he jumped a hay fork was buried in his side, whereupon five shotguns were emptied into him, and a club did the rest. The tiger, which had evidently escaped from some menagerie, will be stuffed.

A Bomb in the Rabbi's Parlor.

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 3.—An attempt was made last night to assassinate Rabbi Wise. A reception was being held in his parlor, at No. 55 Mound-street, when suddenly there was a loud explosion, followed by dense smoke and a shower of glass. The guests escaped injury except one, who was painfully hurt by flying glass. Investigation showed that a bomb of gunpowder with a time fuse had been placed in a jardiniere in the parlor.

Toronto, April 3—Flour—Little demand; prices unchanged. Straight rollers are reported as having sold at $3, Toronto freights.

Bran—Trade quiet and prices unchanged at $16, Toronto freights. Shorts $17.

Wheat—No change in the situation. Red and white are quoted at 67c on the Northern and spring at 68c to 70c on the Midland. Manitoba grades are firm, with sales of car lots of No. 1 hard at 84c, grinding in transit, and at 84 1-2c, North Bay.

Barley—Trade quiet; No. 1 is quoted at 48c to 49c. Feeding qualities are quoted at 45c to 46c.

Oats—The market is steady, with sales outside at 33 1-2c for mixed and white. Cars on track are quoted at 37c.

GREENWAY'S DECISION.

Will Stand by National Schools No Matter What Comes.

NO COMMISSION, NO COMPROMISE.

All Considerations Will Be Duly Weighed and the Best of Advice Taken, But There Will Be No Receding From the Present Stand.

Winnipeg, April 3.—Those who had the idea that because Premier Greenway delayed before making answer to the Remedial Order, he was weakening, will probably find themselves mistaken. The Tribune, which speaks with authority, being the organ of Mr. Greenway's Government, says to-night:

"There is not the slightest truth in the report of a division in the local Cabinet on the school question. Each member is resolute in his determination to stand by the National schools, no matter what the issue may be. To yield any suggestions as to the appointment of a commission, or making a compromise, would, it is considered, be perfectly suicidal and would never be approved by the public. The Government fully recognizes that it has a mandate from the people of Manitoba to stand by the Public schools system, and there is no more intention of departing from that mandate than there is of handing over the government of the province to the Roman Catholics. Manitoba counts upon the hearty support of Ontario in the struggle, as Ontario must recognize that if the clergy of Quebec are allowed to force Separate schools on Manitoba that a blow will be struck at equal rights in Canada from which the country will never recover. It is felt by our Government that the right-thinking people of Canada will never permit the French people of Quebec to have their way in this case and trample provincial rights under their feet. While the Government will take the very best advice it can obtain in the case and give due weight to all considerations, still there will be no weakening, and when the time comes it will be seen that the Government will stand resolutely by the national schools."

Editorially The Tribune calls on the Liberals of Ontario to pronounce on the school question and stand by national schools. It warns them that they are wasting time to suggest compromise, and adds: "Commissions of investigation and all the other proposed compromises need only be mentioned to be dismissed. It is no time for compromises. The national schools must be maintained in their integrity, or the strife that is now raging will be intensified and perpetuated."

Premier Greenway is still very weak from his recent illness, and on the advice of physicians he will go out to his country home to rest until the Legislature reassembles in May.

Stewart Mulvey of Winnipeg will probably run against Hon. Mr. Daly in Brandon. Mulvey is an ex-grand master of the Orangemen, and will run as a McCarthy candidate.

Let Manitoba Catholics Ter-remble!

Boston, April 2.—The Journal says: Preparations are being made in some cities and towns throughout the state by members of the Orange Order to move toward Manitoba, in case of a clash over sectarian schools, at very short notice. It has been discovered that in cities and towns of Massachusetts where there are known to be Orange lodges, strangers have made their appearance lately, and always find their way to the rooms of the order. An Orangeman told a reporter yesterday that there were more than 4000 Orangemen in Massachusetts, and a large majority of them, he said, could be depended on in case of war. When asked if there were emissaries trying to organize Orangemen to go to Manitoba, should trouble arise there, he was silent. He made the statement, however, that if England did not reverse the decision regarding the division of the Public school money there would undoubtedly be trouble. He said the Orange Order was for the protection of the country in which it was located, but that it considered the protection of the Public schools as paramount to the saving of the country.

VERCHERES BYE-ELECTION.

Bissaillion, Q.C., of Montreal Nominated in the Conservative Interest.

Vercheres, Que., April 2.—Mr. F. J. Bissaillion, Q.C., of Montreal, was chosen to-day to contest this county for the vacant seat in the House. After the convention, a large meeting was held, addresses being delivered by Hon. A. J. Ouimet and Hon. L. P. Pelletier and Hon. P. E. Leblanc. The Minister of Public Works said it would be a great shame if Protestant Haldimand supported Sir Mackenzie Bowell's policy and Catholic Vercheres condemned it.

Hon. L. P. Pelletier said he did not come there as a Protestant minister, but as a citizen of the province, to thank the Ottawa Government for rendering justice to the Catholics of Manitoba.

Election Excitement in Haldimand.

Cayuga, April 3.—A mass meeting of the electors of Haldimand opposed to the acts and policy of the Dominion Government, respecting the Manitoba school question, will be held in the Court House on Friday, 5th inst., at 2 o'clock, for the purpose of nominating a candidate to represent their views in the pending bye-election. D'Alton McCarthy, Q.C., M.P., and E. D. Armour, Q.C., will address the meeting. The notices are being rapidly distributed throughout every part of Haldimand County. Excitement is becoming intense. A great many doubted the report that a McCarthyite was entering the field.

A. D. Stewart of Hamilton announced yesterday that, while sure a McCarthyite candidate would be brought out, he would not be the man.

Woodville's Alleged Firebugs Arrested.

Woodville, Ont., April 3.—County Constable Crawford of Lindsay has arrested Alexander Carley on suspicion of having been implicated in the setting fire to the Royal Hotel here on March 3. Michael Malone, ex-proprietor of the Queen's Hotel, was also arrested in Cannington as an accomplice.

U S. Secretary Gresham to Retire.

Washington, April 3.—Another vacancy in the Cabinet, it is rumored, may occur within the next few days. Secretary Gresham is the official who is slated for voluntary retirement. He has more than once expressed his desire to return to the practice of law, if not to the bench. Judge Gresham, it is stated, has not found the State Department as congenial to his tastes as he had expected. He will retire before July 1.

Representative Donovan has introduced a bill in the Michigan Legislature to require railroad companies operating in that State to issue mileage books which shall be good on all roads in the State, and shall also be redeemable and interchangeable.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles ! Piles ! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelle's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money.'

Germany reports 289 instances of suicide among school children during the last six years.

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal.'

For Over Fifty Years

AN OLD AND WELL-TRIED REMEDY.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by Druggists in every part of the World. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

She (bitterly)—Before you married me I was an angel. I'll never be that again I suppose. He (sarcastically)—Well, I live in hopes.

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

The Pekin (China) Gazette, a journal that was 200 years old when the Normans conquered England, has the further distinction of having had 1,600 of its editors beheaded.

Beyond Dispute.

There is no better, safer or more pleasant cough remedy made than Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cures Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles.

THE SPECTATOR'S PATRIOTISM

With a maudlin persistence and repitition that would countenance the conclusion that it was a sweet reflection, the Hamilton Spectator, a journal that otherwise is usually busy with some brilliant device for raising itself by its boot-legs, designates the leader of the Opposition as "French Mr. Laurier." We compliment the Spectator with the supposition that the use of the epithet is inspired by a purpose. Certainly the Spectator is not given to eulogizing Mr. Laurier and the only reasonable assumption is that its intent is to discredit him in the minds of the English speaking people of Ontario. It is a base, mean snivelling mode of pandering to the prejudiced sentiments of those would be loyalists that carry their patriotism, their love of British institutions on the tips of their tongues.

In the first place, however, as might be expected from the Spectator the epithet is false. Mr. Laurier is not French but French-Canadian; and in the second place Mr. Laurier is proud of his nationality, proud not only that he is a Canadian, but a French-Canadian, and proud that he is a British subject. And where is the honest Canadian, whose first criterion of manliness is love of country, love of nationality, love of mother-tongue, that will think less of Mr. Laurier because he is inspired by them all in a marked degree? And where is the honest, loyal Canadian who would delegate him a great public trust if he had them not?

There is no man in the Canadian Parliament more devoted than Mr. Laurier to British institutions and British Liberalism, and of a surity no man in the Bowell cabinet so enthused with the spirit of British justice honesty and national integrity.

For a century and a quarter the best minds and noblest spirits of British North America have been intent upon the building up of a united people and the culturing of a broad liberal heartfelt national sentiment and now forsooth this journalistic babbler, that heralds its loyalty at every turn, and poses as a supporter of a party whose password is "The Old Flag" attempts to discredit one of the ablest men that ever graced our national politics because he is a Canadian.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mr. McCarthy has now an organ. It is called the North Simcoe Free Lance and its motto is: "From the Atlantic to the Pacific, one language, one school, and one homogeneous people. No French ascendency, no exemptions from taxation, no clan or creed privileges. A lasting connection to the British Empire."

The Intell is vexed because the evidence of its sugar expert, Robt. H. Lawder, is questioned and says, "perhaps the ONTARIO knows more on the subject than does Mr. Lawder." Well, perhaps we do, but it isn't our own personal opinion, but that of the housewives and people who eat sugar that we voice. Let the Intell use a little common sense instead of expert evidence and tell us how many boarding-house keepers in the city would venture to put on their tables No. 16 Dutch Standard or find us a good housewife that will use a pound of it in her canning operations next season.

The Intell is now playing the part of a political Darwinian and is engaged in a vain search for the missing link that would identify the Liberal policy with Free Trade. Its latest bluff is a paragraph from the Napanee Express that requires a much more fertile imagination than ours too see it as an argument for Free Trade. It's good, just read it. "The sooner we shut up these mushroon factories that cannot live without protection the better for all concerned. It will make room for the shrewd, independent and resourceful manufacturer, at present handicapped by these parasites, who will conduct his factory on a business basis. The abolition of the N. P. will break the power of the combines and stimulate healthy and legitimate trade."

MAN AND MONEY.

know that the only experience of the unhappy is despair? To combat by your side the mildness of the lamb and the courage of the lion would be needed, and I have only the rage of the tiger. I am no longer just, I am no longer good; I suffer, I hate, I curse. Ah, do not ask me to join your ranks—my place is no longer among men. I am a leper who seeks a solitude where I may find a corner in which to lie down and die—that is all I ask for now.

And seeing that de Beaucourt was about to answer:

"Do not insist," he said with sombre energy: "I might promise you to-day to remain, but the need to depart would return to-morrow. It is a feverish desire that drives me on, an insensate desire, if you will, but all opposition would be in vain; I must carry out my purpose."

"And where will you go?" asked the young man.

"I do not yet know; chance will decide; I shall go to some seaport; the first vessel that sails for any distant land will bear me away. I am in haste to see France fade on the horizon, and to the hear the sea roaring around me. But I must depart this very day, and time is passing. Adieu, Elie."

He held out his hand. Elie threw himself into his arms.

"There is no hope, then!" he cried. "I must lose you too; what is to become of me alone? In comforting you I would still be doing something for her, I should continue to love her in you, but now——"

"Now," said Severin, "love her in all that is good and noble; defend the weak, console the unhappy; let her be the conscience and the guardian angel of your virtue. Take up the earthly work she was unable to complete; add to the good you would do the good she would have done. Let her name, through you, be known and blessed. That is a mission beautiful enough to consecrate a life to."

"Ah, I will accomplish it," cried Elie.

Severin clasped him to his heart.

"Adieu," he said at last, pressing his lips to the young man's forehead; "we shall see each other no more. Think of her, think of me. Wherever I may be, in the desert or among men—so long as I live there will be a heart devoted to you, lips which will murmur your united names."

"My father, oh, my father!" cried Elie, choked with tears.

"Yes, your father," said the old man, "for I loved you almost as much as I loved her; yes, son of my adoption, be happy!"

He gave him a long and close embrace, then hastily released him, and disappeared behind the trees which shaded the road leading to Morlaix.

Elie saw him once more after he had passed the grove of firs.

He slowly uncovered his head before the tomb in which all his affections lay buried, stretched out his arms as if he would have clasped it to his heart in a last embrace, then, bowing his head, he disappeared behind the hill.

THE END.

The Punishment of a Soldier.

Mr. H. C. Frick, who is at the head of the great Carnegie interests, was shot and stabbed by an anarchist on Saturday, July 23rd. Mr. Frick has been actively concerned in the recent strikes, and has been regarded by the workmen with no friendly feeling, although the strikers passed resolutions condemning the action of the would-be murderer.

When the news of Mr. Frick's wounding reached Homestead, where the Pennsylvania militia are encamped, a private of K Company, Tenth Regiment, Thomas Iams by name, suggested that three cheers be given for the man who shot Mr. Frick. His remark was overheard by Lieutenant-Colonel Streator, who was in temporary command of the regiment. Colonel Streator turned to Private Iams, and asked him what he meant. Iams repeated his remark, saying thaa he was glad of it.

The Colonel warned him of the danger of such a speech, and gave him an opportunity to retract; but Iams was obstinate, and the Colonel walked away.

Before long the regiment was ordered to assemble without arms, and the captains of each company called out that the man who suggested three cheers for Mr. Frick's assailant should step forth. When Company K was reached, and no one responded to the order, Colonel Streator said that he knew the man, and he might as well come forward. Thereupon Iams stepped out from the ranks. The Colonel asked him if he was guilty. Private Iams said that he was.

At this admission the buttons were cut from the soldier's uniform, and Colonel Streator ordered that he be taken to the guard tent, attended by surgeons of the regiment, and strung up by his thumbs until he could stand it no longer. This was done. For nineteen minutes Iams hung by his thumbs, his toes just touching the ground, while the surgeons felt his pulse, until it was seen that further punishment would be dangerous. Iams complained of feeling sick after this, and lay in the guard tent all the night.

The case was reported to the higher commanding officers, who approved it, General Snowdon, division commander, further ordering that Iams should have one-half of his head shaved, after which he should be dishonorably dismissed from the service and drummed out of camp.

So, on Sunday morning at 9.30, the entire brigade assembled, and the disgraced private appeared. One-half of his head was closely shaved, and his regimentals were replaced by an old shirt and overalls. Colonel Hawkins, commanding the brigade, rode up to Iams, and warned him against appearing in camp again.

A corporal and a file of men then came forward, and led the way towards the edge of the camp. Then came the drum corp of the regiment, playing the "Rogues' March," followed by Iams. Immediately after him marched the regiment he had been expelled from. When the borders of the camp were reached, a freight train was slowly passing, and the disgraced man, leaping aboard, was hidden from his old comrades.

This punishment is criticised generally as having been too severe; but the officers say that such a course was necessary to preserve discipline.

SWAGGERING STUDENTS.

Trying to Raise a Row With the Gendarmes.

A riotous spirit is still prevalent in the students' quarters in Paris. The associates and nonassociates have been at onts some time owing to the theatre privileges enjoyed by the former, and which the latter insist upon sharing. The music hall and theatre proprietors have told them to settle the matter among themselves, but beyond holding stormy meetings, and calling each other names the students have done nothing. The association says its doors are open to those without the pale, but the latter retort that they want nothing to do with so aristocratic an institution.

Meantime there is an extra body of police in the neighborhood of the Sorbonne, whose officers are afraid that the 20,000 students may at any moment inaugurate a reign of terror. The Paris student is a great deal of a swaggerer. He imagines himself a privileged being in more ways than one and conducts himself accordingly. There have been one or two attempts at riot which have been promptly suppressed. The students rather like the notoriety the present difficulty has brought upon the Latin quarter and seem to be inviting a conflict with the gendarmes.—Paris Cor. Chicago Times-Herald.

THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

INTERESTING FEATURES OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST FINANCIAL HOUSE.

Scales to Weigh a Wafer—The Operation of Making a Bank of England Note Minutely Described—Constant Police Surveillance.

One of the first objects of interest upon entering the building is the bullion office, where all the gold and silver that enters or leaves the bank passes through to be checked, says a writer in Harrison's Magazine. To the right is the gold; on the left the silver. The prominent feature of the room is the "grand balance," or scales, constructed by the Messrs. Napier. This marvelous instrument is a ponderous and peculiarly-built weighing machine, standing nearly seven feet high and weighing about two tons. The whole is under a huge glass case, access being gained thereto by a sliding panel. The scale is worked by hydraulic power, and is the most sensitive weighing maching in existence. On each side of the scales are fitted with weights amounting to 400 ounces. The gold is made up in 400-ounce bars, and the difference of one-thoutandth part of an ounce can be detected. By the manipulation of the machine, so tiny a thing as a postage stamp can be weighed, for on the same being placed upon the scale the index will jump a distance of no less than six inches. It is the only balance of its kind in the world, and cost about $10,000.

THE SILVER SCALE.

The silver scale is not so finely balanced and the two are respectively christened "The Lord Chief Justice" and "The Lord High Chancellor." In another room are several machines for weighing sovereigns and half sovereigns. Each machine consists of a complicated system of counterweights, and it is not unlike a sewing machine as to its lower half, the whole being completely inclosed in glass. A long feeder, like a tube cut in half down its length, and made of brass, is set at an angle of 45 degrees, and is filled with a long roll of sovereigns. These turn as they slip down on to a circular movable plate, slightly larger than a sovereign. If the coin is of the right weight, it slips down a metal tube into a till below. Should, however, it prove to be lighter than the standard, the delicate machine turns to the left, and condemns it to the guillotine. These machines weigh coins at the rate of 26 per minute, and a day's weighing at the bank amounts to about $500,000.

TONS OF DEFUNCT CIRCULATION.

Another interesting feature is to be found in the vault containing the defunct circulation of the bank. Some idea can be gained of the quantity when we say that they are over 77,000,000 in number, and that they fill 1400 boxes, which if placed side by side would reach two and a half miles. If the notes were placed in a pile they would reach a height of five and a half miles; or if joined end to end, would form a ribbon 12,455 miles long. Their superficial extent is little less than Hyde Park; their original value was over £1,750,000, and their weight exceeds ninety and a half tons. Among them is a note for £1,000,000, also the first bank note ever issued (one for £500), and another for £250 left at the bank for 111 years, whose accumulated interest raised its value to £60,000.

MAKING A BANK NOTE.

The printing of the existing paper currency is an interesting process. The notes are struck off two at a time on hand-made paper, which, upon being cut, gives three rough edges and one smooth one to each piece of paper—a distinguishing feature of a Bank of England note. The paper is manufactured at the bank's own mill, and the production of it is intrusted entirely to the members of one family. The ink used in printing the notes is made from the charred stem of the Rhenish vine, which is believed to produce the richest black of any ink in the world. Each strip of paper has to be strictly accounted for, the whole process being under effective supervision. The bank can boast of possessing the wealthiest room in the world, in the shape of a kind of vault surrounded from floor to ceiling by iron safes containing rows upon rows of gold coin in bags of £10,000 each, and pile upon pile of bank notes. The amount of specie contained in this room is not less than £80,000,000 sterling.

Not the least interesting feature in connection with the bank is the fact that the whole system from beginning to end is under constant police espionage, in addition to the military protection, and the electric arrangements are so complete that communication with all parts of the building can be effected at a moment's notice.

Woman and Poverty.

It is hard to the woman of small means and luxurious tastes to keep within her income and abreast with the times, but a little sound sense, in the way of finding out short cuts to economy will work wonders.

The woman who has learned to make a good appearance upon next to nothing becomes an object of envy to her less fortunate sisters. It is largely a question of investigation, of watching sales, of shopping properly, of making $1 buy $1 worth of goods. And only that severe teacher—experience—will teach all this. A woman can be dignified even if she is poor, nor should she feel that because poverty hasflung its somber cloak about her she should draw its folds still closer and hide herself from the pure sunshine of the door or the kindly friendship of her friends.

Too many women are inclined, when poor, to withdraw into a shell, snail fashion, and become crabbed and poverty spoiled. Poverty is not the greatest of crimes, as many suppose. There are lots of things worse that that, and wealth is not the alpha and omega of happiness.

The woman of fine nature will accept this fact gracefully, and by her example help many a disheartened woman to look on the bright side of life, to look her finances squarely in the face and avoid laying out her money in unnecessary expenditure. By a bit of forethought a small sum of money can work wonders, as the active, fine natured woman who has learned it all well knows.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

They are used as a general family medicine with the best results.

CURIOUS BEDSTEADS.

Although the majority of mankind is content with the conventional bedstead, manufactured either from wood, iron or brass, there exists certain individuals whose tastes, as regards this necessary article of domestic furniture, are by no means so simple.

Such, for instance, was the Parisian gentleman who, a short time ago, ordered from a firm in Paris a golden bedstead, every part of which, even down to the laths, was made of this precious metal. At first sight this certainly looks like a piece of unwarrantable extravagance, yet who knows but that the gentleman looked upon it in the nature of an investment, which he could at any moment realize, if he felt so inclined.

Equally uncommon was the bedstead which an old lady, who certainly had only tasted the Pierian spring of scientific knowledge, order to be constructed for her use. She had read somewhere that glass insulators placed under the casters of a bedstead were conducive to the retention of electricity in the body, and so she argued that a bedstead composed entirely of glass would prove a still better contrivance. Accordingly, she had such a glass bedstead constructed, which on completion proved to be by no means an inartistic piece of furniture.

Apropos of electricity, early in the present century a Dr. Graham, a quack who made and lost a large fortune over the "Temple of Hygiene," was in the habit of selling electric bedsteads at the price of $200 apiece, the property of which beds, he advertised, was to rejuvenate the persons who slept in them, as well as to give them beauty and health.

As a matter of fact, these bedsteads were nothing more than ordinary brass ones, with a battery attached, while all that could be said in their favor was that they were perfectly harmless.

But by far the most curious kinds of bedsteads are to be found in what we may term mechanical bedsteads, which some people of eccentric habits have, from time to time, ordered to be made.

A retired sea captain, who, although not actually mentally deranged, was what one may call "on the borderland," declared to his friends that he could not sleep unless he felt the motion of the sea. Night after night this unfortunate gentleman kept awake, thereby causing considerable damage to his health. At last it occurred to his medical adviser that something might be done in order to produce, by mechanical means, the movement which his patient so much desired. A consultation with a practical engineer resulted in the production of a bedstead which, by means of machinery, moved the mattress upon which the captain was to sleep up and down, producing, in every way, the effect so much desired. The bedstead proved a great success and the captain was no longer troubled with insomnia.

Without wishing to detract from the charms of music, yet for the purpose of inciting sleep we cannot help thinking it to be a failure, for if the music be good one keeps awake to listen to it, while if it be of the contrary nature, anger rather than sleep is apt to be engendered. This, however, was evidently not the opinion of a certain Indian prince who, a short while ago ordered a musical bedstead. Attached to the bottom of the bedstead was an instrument, something between a musical box and a piano organ. This musical Hindu had but to lie in bed, press a knob, and lo! the band struck up. The repertoire of this instrument, we are informed, was decidedly varied, containing all the latest tunes; so that on awakening from a dream the prince had but to press the knob and be lulled to sleep by the strains of "Cavelleria Rusticana," "Knocked 'me in the Old Kent Road," or whatsoever other tune suited his momentary humor.

Japan has Earned Formosa.

Formosa, which Japan will claim and probably get as part of her war indemnity, lies about one hundred miles off the Chinese coast, between the 20th and 21st degrees of latitude, almost within hailing distance of the cities of Canton, Amoy and Tuchan, and will be surrendered by China with more reluctance than any amount of money she is obliged to pay over. The island is about 400 miles long and 50 wide, inhabited by a mixture of races, some of them not yet emerged from their primal barbarism, and if Japan gets it her first duty will be to give it a civilized administration and bring its wrangling tribes into subjection, which the Chinese have never been able to do. It is in the main a mountainous and rugged territory, not very fertile nor otherwise valuable, but is of great stragetic importance, lying between the China and Eastern Seas, and will give important naval advantage to the country that possesses it. France has interests in those regions, and may have something to say about the transfer, and perhaps other countries will be represented in the discussion. But Japan has earned it; it is important to her, and she will probably get it.—New York Tribune.

Keeping Shoes in Order.

A woman hates to get her nice new shoes wet because it spoils them so, but with care the wetting will not hurt them much. As soon as you can remove the wet shoes do so, and rub them well with a soft rag, to get some of the dampness out, and to take off all the mud; then rub them with a cloth saturated with kerosene. Get as much of the oil into them as possible, and then fill them as full of dry oats as you can and set them aside for a few hours, when apply another coating of kerosene. The stiffness will have disappeared and the shoe will be in good shape when you want to don it again. Never try to put on a low shoe unless you have a shoehorn; you will be sure to stretch it out of shape in the back and make it ill-fitting. Keep the buttons sewed on your shoes and good strings in your laced boots, unless you want the men to say you are a "slouch." Have a paste patch put over the first sign of a break in your shoes and they will keep in shape and last twice as long. Cheap shoes and cheap gloves are a snare for the unwary. They get out of shape, are ill-fitting, and do not wear well. It is false economy to buy cheap foot or hand shoes.

ONTARIO'S PARLIAMENT

An Amendment to the Succession Duties Act.

SCHOOL BOOKS TO BE MADE CHEAPER

The Changes in the Act Respecting the Shipment of Fruit—Mr. Hardy On New Industries—Sault Ste Marie Electric Energy Company.

Toronto, April 3.—With the object of preventing persons evading the payment of succession duties, a number of cases having recently come to light, the Provincial Treasurer introduced a Government measure at yesterday's session of the Local Legislature. The new bill makes all property situate within this province, whether the deceased person was domiciled in Ontario at the time of his death or was domiciled elsewhere, liable to succession duty.

The second section of the act makes the property of persons domiciled in this province or elsewhere at the time of their death liable for succession duty, when it is at the time of death in another country, but is afterwards brought into Canada for administration and distribution.

The Commissioner of Crown Lands, in moving a resolution approving of an agreement between the Government of the first part and Edward V. Douglas of Philadelphia, manufacturer, and Francis H. Clergue of Bangor, Maine, manufacturer, of the second part, announced the establishment of an important industry in the province with American capital. Mr. Hardy explained that the agreement referred to the purchase by the Americans named of the stock held by the town of Sault Ste. Marie in "The Ontario and Sault Ste. Marie Water, Light and Power Company" for the purpose of developing and utilizing the said water power by the erection and operation of a pulp and paper mill and industries allied thereto. The parties, he said, had agreed to erect mills costing not less than $200,000 before Dec. 31, 1895, of sufficient capacity to employ 300 hands at least 10 months in each year, and a further sum of $200,000 to add to and enlarge the mills within one year thereafter capable of employing an extra 100 hands. In consideration of this the Government had, he said, granted the right to cut spruce, poplar and other pulp woods for 20 cents per cord, as to spruce and hardwood—a reduction of 5 cents; and 10 cents per cord as to other woods—a reduction of 2 1-2 cents. Fifty square miles of unoccupied public land was to be selected where the said woods could be obtained. The prices are to remain the same for eight years and the Government promises to supply sufficient pulp wood for a period of 21 years, the price at no time to exceed that charged to the general public.

Mr. Howland thought no one could have any objection to increasing the industries of the country, especially such an important one as that of paper; but the agreement was such an important one that he felt called upon to ask the Government to have it printed and hold over the ratification until members had had an opportunity of studying the same.

To this request Mr. Hardy acceded, but Mr. Whitney could not refrain from congratulating the Government for having realized the necessity and propriety of aiding and helping deserving industries in this country. (Laughter.) Mr. Hardy replied that there was a distinction between the protection of industries and as it were taking certain persons into a partnership in our new territory with a view to making use of our natural resources, and by so doing giving employment to a large number of people.

On moving for the ratification of an agreement made with Hunter, Rose & Co., the Canada Publishing Co. and Copp, Clark & Co., for the publication of certain text books authorized to be used in the Public and High schools, Mr. Ross intimated that some important changes in school books were to be made. For instance the euclid and algebra text books, which in the past had cost $1.25, would, he said, be supplanted by others containing sufficient information to pass their junior leaving examinations and to cost but 25 cents. The French text books were also to be changed. Formerly they had been imported, but now Messrs. Squair and Fraser had prepared a French grammar which would be authorized, and would cost much less than the old works. A new High school arithmetic would be used in future at a reduction in price of 15 cents. In the past there were eleven text books on writing; this number had been reduced to six, and the cost reduced one cent per book. The companies named were to have the exclusive right to publish the new books for two years.

At the request of Mr. Ryerson, the Minister of Education allowed the matter to stand over for a few days.

Hon. Mr. Gibson introduced a bill to amend the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, '94, so as to render it unnecessary to renew mortgages or conveyances given to secure the debentures or bonds of companies.

A long discussion arose in Committee of the Whole on the bill of the Minister of Agriculture for the prevention of fraud in the sale of fruit, providing that all cases shall be marked either "No. 1," "No. 2" or "ungraded." Mr. Hiscott of Lincoln set the ball rolling. He asserted that the bill had been condemned from one end of the province to the other. It was going to do a great injury to the fruit growers of the province. He thought the Minister of Agriculture had taken wrong advice. It had been pressed upon him by the dealers, who had not considered the grower at all. Taking the whole bill he did not see one solitary clause that was going to be a benefit to the fruit growers.

Mr. Dryden replied that every deputation he had heard, and a great many had waited upon him, were in favor of legislation upon these lines. Even the Fruit Growers' Association had passed resolutions exactly on the lines of his bill. The bill did not compel a farmer to grade his fruit, for if he chose he could mark it "ungraded."

Mr. Whitney, referring to Mr. Dryden's statement that the bill was drawn up on the lines of a resolution passed by the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association, said that he had been given to understand that the association was actually engaged in fruit dealing with agents in different parts of the province.

After a protracted discussion the bill was reported.

Mr. Hardy's bill allowing ten jurors to give a verdict in civil cases was read a third time.

The Government are rushing business in order that the work may all be got through by Easter. At the evening session yesterday, extraordinary progress was made, and the Attorney-General has given notice of a motion, that Government business shall have precedence over all other business, except private bills, on each day of the session, on and after Friday next; and that there shall be a meeting of the House Saturday next, for Government business only.

The Electric Railroad bill passed the second reading, on the motion of Mr. Bronson, who made a long speech in explanation of the measure. Mr. Whitney, Mr. Conmee and Mr. Haycock criticized the bill, the latter raising objection to the clause providing that when a passenger is carried from one municipality into another a fare of three cents per mile may be charged, arguing that the boundary lines were only imaginary.

Hon. Mr. Ross' bill to amend the School Law was also read a second time. It provides for the teaching of agriculture, cooking, etc., and also for the remission of fees where pupils whose parents pay taxes attend a school in an adjoining section.

Hon. Mr. Harcourt's bill respecting the public health passed the second reading. The main feature of the bill is that which provides that local boards of health shall have an official existence of three years.

These Government bills were read a second time: Respecting the relations of landlord and tenant, Attorney-General; to amend the Industrial Schools Act, Mr. Gibson; to correct a clerical error in the schedule to the act respecting mortgages of real estate, the Attorney-General.

Mr. Awrey's bill to establish fire insurance bureaus also passed the second reading, as did a number of private bills of minor import.

Dr. Sippi, bursar of the London Asylum, yesterday told the Public Accounts Committee that during Inspector O'Reilly's term he had been instructed to buy from "our friends," but now, he said, he bought from Conservatives and Liberals alike. Asked how the system of buying butter by contract worked, Dr. Sippi did not favor it, owing to the fact that contractors tried to palm off an inferior article. He said that on one occasion a couple of kegs of poor produce was delivered. He returned them after placing a private mark on them, only to find the next day that they were again sent by the contractor. He favored the purchase of good creamery butter, stating that he bought such for his own use at 18 cents when the contract price for the asylum was 19 1-2 cents.

The Municipal Committee considered the Toronto city bill, passing everything with the exception of the clause for the holding of municipal nominations on Christmas Day and polling on New Year's Day.

Mr. German does not intend to press his bill for the taxation of telephone and telegraph wires this session.

The strong efforts which the wheelmen put forward to defeat the bills before the Local Legislature empowering municipalities to license and regulate bicycles have been partially attended with success. The Municipal Committee who yesterday considered the whole question decided almost unanimously against the taxation of cyclists, and only in the case of Toronto did they grant the power to regulate and govern "persons using bicycles and other vehicles not drawn by horses."

WHY HE DOES NOT WISH TO GO BACK.

"Diamond Charlie" Is One of the Most Notorious Swindlers and Burglars of the West—His Pal Arrested.

Toronto, April 3. — The Attorney - General has decided to drop the charge against Tobias Hutton, alias Smythe, alias Abe Rothschild, for swindling jewelers at St. Mary's, and he will be held for extradition. It is understood that Rothschild will make a bitter fight against returning with either Detective Dodge of the Wells-Fargo Company or Sheriff Rowntree of Georgia. And for a good reason. Not only is he wanted for numerous swindles, but he is known to be a member of the gang which during the last few months robbed a bank at Elgin, Tex., a wholesale house at Baton Rouge, La., and who also executed the $10,000 jewelry steal from Hickok & Hickok of El Paso, Tex.

Advices were received yesterday of the arrest of a pal of Rothschild in the person of the notorious John McGowan, who has an unserved term of four and one-half years in Joliet hanging over him. McGowan is in custody at Jackson, Miss., charged with robbing the jewelry store of Alfred Bourgeois of $7000 worth of jewels.

Jamaica Declines to Tax U S. Goods

Washington, April 3.—The Department of State has received a report from Consul Quincy C. Eckford at Kingston, Jamaica, announcing the defeat of the customs amendment introduced into the Legislative Council of Jamaica in February last. One leading feature of the measure was an increase of the duties upon those articles almost exclusively imported from the United States. The Governor, in his annual message to the Legislature, said that the withdrawal of the United States from the reciprocal arrangements with Jamaica and the reimposition of the duty on sugar would leave the colony free to restore to its tariff some of the sources of revenue abandoned under the reciprocal arrangement of 1891. An attempt was made to reimpose these duties, but the newly-elected members defeated the project, and the consul thinks it will not be renewed.

Used Dynamite to Avoid Arrest.

Dunkirk, N.Y., April 2.—Officer Walters went to the house of Joseph Schmudo to arrest the latter on a charge of murderous assault, preferred by Mrs. Schmudo. As the officer entered the door Schmudo threw a stick of dynamite into the stove, and an explosion followed, which completely wrecked the house, threw the policeman 20 feet and hurt him badly. Schmudo was buried in the debris, the calf of his left leg torn off and otherwise mutilated, but not fatally hurt. The reason for the assault on his wife was that she asked him to look after some bread she had put in the oven while she was absent. The woman was going out to work.

Slander in Prayer Is Actionable.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 3.—In a decision rendered to-day in connection with the suit for slander brought by Miss Tesea L. Kelso, librarian of the Public Library here, against Rev. J. C. Campbell Judge Clark overruled the demurrer of the defendant that his statement was privileged because it was uttered in the course of a prayer before his congregation in the First Methodist Episcopal Church. The court holds that no prayer containing a slander publicly uttered can be exempt from the legal consequences, and that no communication made by a pastor to his congregation is privileged because of such relation.

Not an Upright Judge

Foxcroft, Me., April 2.—Elias J. Hale, judge of probate for many years, who shot himself last Thursday, is a defaulter as treasurer of the town of Foxcroft, to the amount of about $100,000.

HOW WOMEN WORK.

It will occur to impartial observers that if women are not as persistent in business as men it is because they regard business as a possible stepping stone to something better and higher, while to a man it is the end and aim of existence. A man starts in life as lawyer, merchant, doctor, architect, clerk or what not; if he be a serious person all his soul is consecrated on the effort to succeed in his calling, and social life, political ambition, even love, are side issues, because he sees no hope for future ease and comfort except by means of that calling. A woman, on the other hand, has always two strings to her bow. Success in the employment at remunerative pay, which probably increases with the years, but, until she grows too old to consider matrimony among the possibilities of life, she never loses sight of the chance that a man may pass her way whom she could love and who could make her a happy wife. Thus with her there is no concentration of potential energy on a single object, but always a withholding from her labors of a reserve force which is only called into play when the man appears on the horizon. There are women whose toil is at least as unceasing as that of men—wives who get up early to light the fire and cook breakfast for themselves and their husbands, who despatch the children to school with washed faces, hurry down to the desk where their business is conducted, toil over figures all day, and when night falls drag their weary legs home to cook the family dinner. Such women work as hard as men and exhibit a persistency more enduring than the average man can boast of. But they are probably exceptions.

The average shop girl, saleswoman, milliner, typewriter, bookkeeper or cashier of the female sex is often lacking in concentration and absorbing devotion to her work. Other concerns flit across her mind like light clouds skimming the surface of her sky. She thinks of her dress, and whether she can afford a new hat; of a girl with whom she is intimate and whom she secretly hates; of a man whom she has met, of what he said and what he meant; of a party to which she had been invited and of the prospect of her having a good time there. For the moment these topics of thought divert her mind from the business in which she is engaged, and consume some share of her energy. A young man of the same age, unless he is a poor thing, never allows matters of this kind to intervene between him and his business; he is trained to consider them after business hours.—San Francisco Argonaut.

THINGS WELL SAID.

Hatred is the madness of the heart.—Byron.

Fidelity is seven tenths of business success.—Parton.

There is an oblique way in reproof which takes off the sharpness of it.—Pope.

The mind is its own place, and in itself can make a heaven of hell, a hell of heaven.—Milton.

Two persons cannot long be friends if they cannot forgive each other's failings.—Bruyere.

If there be any truer measure of a man than by what he does, it must be by what he gives.—South.

The old scriptural sobriety was effectual doing; and the sobriety is effectual dullness.—H. W. Beecher.

If any man seek for greatness, let him forget greatness and ask for truth, and he will find both.—Horace Mann.

Envy is a passion so full of cowardice and shame that nobody ever had the cowardice to own it.—Rochester.

It is much safer to reconcile an enemy than to conquer him; victory may deprive him of his poison, but reconciliation of his will.—Feltham.

Whatsoever that be within us that feels, thinks, desires, and animates, is something celestial, divine, and, consequently, imperishable.—Aristotle.

Football Salaries.

Some of the well-known clubs keep the salary list a secret, but as far as is known the distinction of paying the highest retaining fee belongs to the Everton Football Club, which, in one case of a professional leaving the Blackburn Rovers to join their club, agreed to pay him £250 down and £5 a week. The Sutherland Club is not far behind, and to secure a Scotchman, a player of repute, gave him his own terms, which were £100 down, £150 a year and a situation of £70 a year in a shipbuilding yard.

Then two clubs, at present the leading clubs of the Association Football League, have the reputation of paying the highest retaining fees, and also securing the biggest gates. Most, if not all, of the league clubs find it requisite to pay substantial sums to secure professional players, of which their respective teams for league matches entirely consist. There are 450 registered professionals in connection with the league clubs whose wages range from £2 10s to £5 a week.—Tit-Bits.

These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

A JOURNALISTIC OSTRICH

It Swallows a Huge April Fool's Joke that Some Prince Edward Boys Put in Its Way

April Fool's Day has not passed unnoted in Belleville for it discovered to the citizens a splendid specimen of a very rare species—the journalistic ostrich, a newspaper that swallows everything in sight. The species is very rare because active newspaper works developes whatever acumen and faculties of discernment lie latent in a man, but what is not cannot be developed.

On Monday evening the Sun published a story about the killing of a lion or Bengal tiger in Prince Edward and the story created considerable amusement about town. But the man who laughs the loudest is a resident from the peninsula county that was in the city to-day and heard that the bait had been swallowed. He thought it a huge joke and told an ONTARIO reporter how it had happened. Some of the boys over in his vicinity concocketed the yarn and sent it to the Sun. He said they knew the old papers wouldn't bite. To-day he was in a hurry to get through with his business that he might hurry home and tell the boys.

As each day so swiftly flies,
That we cannot hope for riches
If we fail to advertise.

All is quiet in police circles at present.

The Windsor, Detroit and Soo line of steamers have purchased the Carmona. The Campana has been sold to Montreal parties.

The Philharmonic's practice last evening was the most satisfactory one of the season and the rendering of the glees and chorus from Tannhauser showed how great had been their progress in shading and giving the delicate touches so much valued in chorus singing. They have taken up another operatic chorus "O thou with might supreme" from "The Bohemian girl" and attacked it in their usual successful style. After the practice the committees for the concert arrangements were appointed one for decorating and one for advertising.

W C A WORK

The Hospital's Record—The City Charities

The meeting of the W. C. A. held yesterday was an interesting one.

The receipts from patients in the Hospital since October 1st amounts to $1369.05, an increase of $176.80 over last year, 150 patients have been admitted during the six months, 28 being city poor and 24 operations have been performed. There are at present 28 patients in the Hospital and 20 of whom were admitted during March. The Hospital is over crowded and several patients have been refused admittance. We see every day the absolute need of increased accommodation.

The Dorcas Society have distributed 19 articles of second class clothing, some new garments and have made 10 night shirts for the Hospital during the month, and although the meetings are discontinued the ladies are making at their own homes 12 new night jackets for the inmates of the Hospital.

The ward visitors reported having assisted 58 families and individuals during last month and $168 50 was voted for this good work. Many cases of reported distress had been investigated one case—a woman said to be starving and freezing—when the ward visitors called unexpectedly, the house was found uncomfortably warm—roaring fires in two stoves. Many visits had been paid to homes where there was sickness and both comfort and relief were gladly given. There were several requests for work from general servants, sewing girls and char women.

CENSUS TAKING BEGINS

IMAGINARY CONVERSATIONS OF THE COP AND THE HOUSEHOLDER

Every Policeman Has an Election District to Sift—Be Good to Him, as It's Hard Work

[NEW YORK SUN.]

When the enterprising sneak thief is not sneaking, is not sneaking,
And the burglar is not tapping of the till, of the till,
Then your name, age, nationality, we are seeking, we are seeking,
From Morrisania down to Cherry Hill, Cherry Hill ;
And in spite of all evasions and pretences, and pretences,
We're bound to get you down in black and white, black and white
For the chief has sent us out to get the census, get the census,

(Sotto voce)—I don't t'ink! Be the t'ree laves av St. Patrick's shamrock had I knowed whin I foist got me buttons that I'd be traipsin' t'roo Noo York wid a note book in th' wan hand av me an' a shtubby pencil in th' other, makin' a livin' picter av an interrygayshin p'int out av myself I'd a shtuck to th' ash kyart, I wud that! Look at the questions in that book. I'm nigh crazy tryin' to get them straight in me head. What's yer name? Where was yez born? Are yez married or single, an' if so how mony children hav' yez? Where d' yez live an' whin an' why? Can yez read, write, an' cipher? Where do yez attind school? What's—yer—religion —do—yez —drink—an— why— not— does —yer—folks—kape—a—pig— what— was —yer—father's—name— befoor— he—was —married—an—hav —yez—ever— been — arrested—befoor! Oh, but it's a sick man I am av this job. Show me a good ditch an' a few Dagoes to boss an' I'll give in me shield this day. Oh——

(Chorus.)

When there's duty on the census to be done, to be done,
A policeman's life is not a happy one.
Nit!!

(The New Policeman's Chorus.)

The trouble began yesterday. Armed with two note books and a pencil each, 1,141 protectors of the peace went forth to begin the work of taking the census. Each had an election district assigned to him, from which he was supposed to make full returns of every resident, giving name age, sex, nationality, and other details. One of the books was for the enumeration of children only, and it contained space for statements regarding the schooling and employment of the children. By the method of assignment in the work the possible fitness of certain officers for certan localities was not considered, as it frequently happened that the German policeman got Double alley or Washington street, the Irish policeman struggled with the Chinese of Doyer street or the Italian of Mulberry bend, the fat policeman got the tenement district with seven flights of stairs to climb, the athletic policeman got Broadway and did their climbing on elevators, the little policeman got Hell's Kitchen and the big, sturdy ones Fifth avenue, and one and all of them raised up their voices when the days work was done and announced in no uncertain tones the sooner census taking was over the better they would be suited. Yet some of them had an easy time compared with others, though in almost all localities there were some difficulties to be over come ; take it on Murray Hill, for instance.

Policeman I want to see the owner of the house.

Policeman—The lady of the house then.

Butler—She haren't receiving.

Policeman—Oh, she harn't, harn't she? Well, my bloomin' British chappy, you chase yourself up stairs and tell her that the officer is here to take the census, and he wants to know her full name, age, her husband's name and age, and how many children they have, where the children go to school, and about four dozen more things. Now, chase yourself quick, or I'll put a decoration on your mug and pull you in for interfering with an officer in the performance of his duty. (Whirls his club intricately beneath the butler's nose.)

Butler—'Elp! 'Elp! 'Ere's a bobby gone dotty. 'Elp! He flees. Mistress of the house presently appears and gives policeman full answers to questions, after which she sends him down stairs for certain refections.)

Policeman (wiping his mouth as he emerges)—It ain't all bad, this census business ain't. That's the way to fix their fly butlers.

[On Cherry Hill it is quite different. Policeman enters Double alley, which is crowded with urchins and bare-armed women. Every window frames a head.]

The Cop—What's your name?

Mrs. Murphy—Mud. What's yure's? Dennis?

The Cop—Don't git gay, I'm taking the census.

Mrs. Murphy—Av ya take any centses off av me I'll have ye broke. Me mother' nevvy is husband to th' Alderman's dahter in this ward an' I'll hav th' Alderman——

The Cop (going up stairs and entering Mrs. Murphy's room)—Where are you?

Mrs. Murphy (from beneath the bed)—Murder! Help! I wasn't into the scrap. It was on the floor benath this. Lave me go. Lave me go.

The Cop (hauling Mrs. Murphy out)—Now, shut up and answer these questions. (Succeeds after half an hour's argument in discovering that Mrs. Murphy has thirteen children whose age she doesn't know. He enters this upon the note book and proceeds to the next room. where he finds the door barricaded. His day's work pans out seventeen families and not one complete in the answers.)

Chorus of Chinese—Makka hi!

The officer—Which av youse runs this dope joint? (Sounds of scurrying are heard in the rear and the place is empty, save for the proprietor, who comes forward with a sickly smile.)

The proprietor—How do? You look for man?

The Officer—What's your label, Chink? What do they call you when they don't have time to whistle?

The Proprietor—My name Ding Bang Bong. Have card? [Hands officer a card and slyly slips an opium pipe, which has been lying on the floor, up his trouser's leg.]

The Officer—Two rings and an explosion, eh? I'd like to hire that name out for chimes. How old are you?

The Officer—Married or single?

The proprietor (sadly)—Got only two gal now. Have more bimeby. (Kicks a slungshot under a lounge and throws a whisky bottle out of the back window.)

The Officer (sarcastically) - Keep a Sunday school here, I s'pose. How's the dope and fan-tan biz?

The Proprietor (earnestly) - No dope. No fan-tan. Fiends come in to see. Gone now. Good, good place. No dope. (Makes gestures of denial and loses his balance, drops fan-tan chips and opium pipe.)

[In the annexed district. Short, fat policeman much out of breath rings bell of 271 East 137th street. Maid servant comes to door.]

The Policeman—I've come to take the census.

The Maid—Sure you'll have to see the master.

The Policeman—Where can I find them?

The Maid—At 758 East 169th street.

The policeman—Good Lord! (Fans himself.)

The Maid (encouragingly)—Or you can see the missus. She's at 878 East 183rd street.

[In Baxter street. Small cop enters second hand clothing shop. assisted by two pullers-in. Proprietor greets him with enthusiasm.]

The Cop—What's your name?

The Proprietor—I'm derorichinal Carris Honen. All der oders is vakes. Led me sell you a goat.

The Cop—How old are you?

The Proprietor—Fifdy-dree. Vat you vant is a new univorm. I gan sell you one cheab. (Seizes cop by coat and rips three buttons off.)

The Cop—Married or single?

The Proprietor—Both. I vas a vidower. (Saws on bottons with lightning-like rapidity). Vivity cends blease for rebairs to zlodings.

The Cop—Take your hands off. (Blows whistle for help, and with the aid of three fellow officers succeeds in getting away without buying anything.)

[In Essex street. The lazy policeman has just climbed six flights of stairs in a tenement through pitch darkness and an atmosphere that rendered breathing a painful duty. The door opens at his knock and a frowsy head appears.]

The Lazy Police—What's your name?

The Frowsy Head—Morritz.

The Lazy Policeman—What's your other name (The head delivers itself of seventeen consonants without a single vowel to lighten them up.)

The Lazy Policeman.—Spell it out.

The Lazy Policeman—Go slow. I'm getting tangled. (His pencil breaks in two.) There, you ve did it. Look-a-here, my Polish exile, your name's John Smith, and if you say it ain't I'll break your face open. Now, what's your wife's name?

The Head—Kitzsch——

The Lazy Policeman—If you say that word again I'll run you in for profanity, Smith it is. See? (Completes record of Smith family of Essex street and proceeds with next door neighbor on a Jones basis.)

[In Hell's Kitchen. The arrival of the officer occasions a stampede for the roof of the first tenement he approaches.]

Chorus of feminine voices from the roof—Cheese de cop. Ah there buttons. (Two bricks and a paving stone land uncomfortably near the officer.)

Buttons (producing his revolver)—Answer these questions or I'll shoot. What's your name?

In chorus—Go to hell! [Two broken chairs and a stove lid emphasize this remark by their simultaneous arrival].

Buttons (dodging into a doorway)—Are you married?

Split Chorus—Yes No.

Buttons—Where's your husband?

Buttons (after receiving other information of an equally valuable character in answer to his questions)—I'll be back later with a squad and pull the house. He departs, gets a Hunter's Point directory, cribs the names, adds details from his imagination, and presents his report.)

His Sergeant—That's a corkin' census report you handed in, Terence. The old man's dead stuck on it. You'll be a round one of these days.

TWO OPERATIONS.

BOTH FAILURES

A Case of Kidney Complaint that Would Not Yield to Surgery or Medicine until B. B. B. Was Tried.

GENTLEMEN,—After having undergone two operations for Kidney Complaint without securing the least relief, and hearing of some remarkable cures made by B. B. B. in our neighborhood, I decided to try it. I was given up by the doctors after the operations failed, and it was providential that I heard of B. B. B. After the use of six bottles I experienced so great relief and so great a change for the better that I felt the good effects would be lasting, as indeed they have been. The seventh bottle perfectly cured me, and I am now stronger and better than I ever was before. People who saw me before I took B. B. B. and who see me now can scarcely believe that I am the same person.

An Address on Spraying

TO THE EDITOR OF ONTARIO,

SIR :—I desire to call the attention of every farmer and fruit grower, and particularly the members of our local Farmer's Institutes, to the announcement that a representative of the Minister of Agriculture will be in Belleville, presumably at the City Hall, to lecture and conduct certain spraying experiments on the 10th of April inst., at 2 o'clock p.m. In view of the necessity of acquiring all information possible regarding the preservation of our fruit from its many insect enemies it is to be hoped that every person interested who can find it possible to attend will do so.

J. C. HANLEY,

GILEAD GLEANINGS

Mr. and Mrs. E. Wagner, of Big Island, visited their daughter Mrs. Ransom Hagerman last week.

Mr. Morley Shibley, of Napanee, finds it very convenient to spend an occasional Sunday in Gilead. No doubt he is welcome.

Sugar-makers have commenced operations. All they lack is some sap to operate on.

Bronk Cheese Factory is expected to reopen on April 16th. Mr. Anson Latta is engaged for the coming season.

Mr. Thomas Kelly wears a broad smile these days on account of the fine present he has received He awoke from his slumber last Thursday morning to find that he had a visitor who intended to stay awhile. The said visitor proved to be a boy who greeted his dad with a squall.

A Good Thing is Always Desirable

So it is with the visits of Prof. Dorenwend to Belleville. On his last visit he was so busy that many ladies and gentlemen were unable to be attended to—he is therefore returning to give all who desire it another opportunity of procuring his art goods for the head. Prof. Dorenwend is undoubtedly one of the leaders of his profession on this continent—his skill in arranging the coverings for the head of either lady or gentleman is well known. His goods are acknowledged to be perfect and in every way true to nature, They are the best protection to the head besides giving a refined and youthful expression to the face. Call and examine these marvels of his art and have them fitted in order to judge of the effect. Consult him about your hair, he will (free of charge) give you advice as to the preservation of it. He will be at Hotel Quinte on Thurday 11 April 1895.

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

LITTLE LOCALS

For book-binding go to Tammadge opposite the City Hall.

Much of life's misery is due to indigestion ; for who can be happy with a pain in his stomach? As a corrective and strengthener of the ailementary organs, Ayer's Pills are invaluable, their use being attended always with marked benefit.

The Best Pill.—Mr. Wm. Vandervoort Sidney Crossing, Ont., writes: "We have been using Parmelle's Pills, and find them by far the best Pills we ever used." For Delicate and Debilitated Constitutions these Pills act like a charm. Taken in small doses, the effect is both a tonic and a stimulant, mildly exciting the secretions of the body, giving tone and vigor.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.

Yellow as a guinea.—The complexion, in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick head ache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURES which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels there after to become regular. High professional sanction has been accorded to it : and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00, Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-smile of their signiture. Sold by all medicine dealers.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich it, every bodily function fags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, its contamination by bile, or other causes, serious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery

THE DESIGNS of our spring wall papers are beautiful and the colorings exquisite. The effects they produce upon the wall have been studied with intelligent sympathy, and the "long-felt wants" of a few years ago have been provided for with cultivated taste. A judicious employment of any of our papers leaves little to be done in a room—a few ornaments according to the taste or wealth of the occupant are all that is necessary to contribute to its beauty and comfort. Our papers thoroughly represent the standard of the prevailing taste in interior decorations.

SWAGGERING STUDENTS.

A riotous spirit is still prevalent in the students' quarters in Paris. The associates and nonassociates have been at outs some time owing to the theatre privileges enjoyed by the former, and which the latter insist upon sharing. The music hall and theatre proprietors have told them to settle the matter among themselves, but beyond holding stormy meetings, and calling each other names the students have done nothing. The association says its doors are open to those without the pale, but the latter retort that they want nothing to do with so aristocratic an institution.

Meantime there is an extra body of police in the neighborhood of the Sorbonne, whose officers are afraid that the 20,000 students may at any moment inaugurate a reign of terror. The Paris student is a great deal of a swaggerer. He imagines himself a privileged being in more ways than one and conducts himself accordingly. There have been one or two attempts at riot which have been promptly suppressed. The students rather like the notoriety the present difficulty has brought upon the Latin quarter and seem to be inviting a conflict with the gendarmes.—Paris Cor. Chicago Times-Herald.

JAPAN IS RICH.

Prices Are Low, but She Has Plenty of Money.

There is a general belief that Japan is a poor country; that a long war would exhaust her more than many other countries—China, for example. Probably the idea originated in the extreme lowness of prices in Japan, but that is no criterion. Living is cheaper in London than in Hong Kong, but nobody calls London a poorer place on that account. As a matter of fact, Japan is now rapidly becoming self-supplying, and, therefore, need have little fear of exhaustion. She has money enough for all requirements her taxation is very light, yet her revenue leaves a surplus over expenditure every year; her imports about balance her exports, and both ae increasing yearly, and are not suffering in the least from the war. When the accumulated surplus (about 40,000,000 yen) had all been voted away in war expenses, a war loan of 30,000,000 yen, and now another one of 150,000,000 have been readily raised without causing any appreciable dislocation. Government bonds were about 6 per cent. premium in the beginning of the year, when there was a distinct boom in the market; now, when the war has gone on three months, the surplus been spent, and the loans raised, they are still at a 3 per cent. premium, with an upward tendency. The country is not poor in any sense of the word. The land, though of hardly larger extent than England, and in some parts too mountainous for cultivation, supports a population of 40,000,000, and produces a rice crop which is usually larger than the whole grain crop of Russia.—Ledger.

PLEURO IN KANSAS.

Precaution Against Bringing the Disease Into Canada.

NEW BALLOT TO BE INTRODUCED

Ottawa, Ont., April 4.—Hon. Mr. Angers has caused a circular letter to be sent to all quarantine officers, urging them to exercise the greatest possible vigilance in regard to examining and quarantining all cattle from the Southwestern portion of the United States. This caution is not meant to imply that vigilance is not always used by Government veterinary officers, but to call special attention to a local circumstance of great importance. The circular is the outcome of information received by the Department of Agriculture from a reliable correspondent at Pueblo, Col., that the disease of pleuro-pneumonia exists in the Western States. Prof. Mayo, veterinarian of the State of Kansas Agricultural College, reports that in his judgment the disease of pleuro-pneumonia has found a footing in Kansas. Eight head of cattle affected with it have died, that about 50 head are now suffering from the disease, and about 200 head have been exposed to contagion.

A rigid quarantine, the correspondent further says, is declared to have been established against infected portions of three counties in Kansas, and the local authorities have hopes that they may be able to stamp out the disease. Gov. Morrill has notified the Department at Washington of the existing state of affairs and has requested that an expert be sent to verify Professor Mayo's diagnosis.

The Department of Agriculture has learned from another communication that the chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry at Washington reports that the disease is being investigated by the United States Department of Agriculture, but he considers it almost impossible that there can be an outbreak of pleuro-pneumonia in Kansas.

A despatch has been received from the Colonial Office enclosing a letter from General Lyons, Governor of Bermuda, explanatory of the action of the island authorities in seizing the Dominion red ensign belonging to Captain Dixon of the schooner Emma S. of Yarmouth. He says the Bermuda authorities acted in ignorance. The letter proceeds: I have the honor, therefore, to express my regret to Your Lordship at the incident, and to inform you that I have issued instructions that the flag in question be returned and the owners of the vessel reimbursed the amount expended here on their behalf in purchasing a red ensign to replace the flag seized.

By proclamation of the Governor-General the act respecting inspection of electric light went into effect last Monday. Certain formalities have yet to be arranged before the measure will be fully in operation. It is proposed that the present inland revenue inspection divisions will apply as far as electric lighting inspection is concerned. The work of inspection will be performed by the present gas inspectors, without any increase of salary.

Under the act electric lighting companies are required to register at the department, and it is probable that a fee of $25 will be charged for registration purposes. The certificate of registration will be renewable from year to year from July 1. As announced, a special set of inland revenue stamps has been devised as receipts for payment of inspection fees. Canada is the first country, as far as is known, to legalize the inspection of electric light, and the present act is likely to be a most beneficial one. The statute provides that before commencing to supply electricity for illuminating purposes the contractor must declare to the purchaser the constant pressure at which they propose to supply energy at his place of business or residence, as the case may be. Contractors are made responsible for all lines, fittings and apparatus belonging to them being maintained in proper condition. If the purchaser is dissatisfied with the action of the company in furnishing the electric light, he can have his meter or apparatus tested at small cost.

An extra of The Canada Gazette was issued to-day containing a proclamation bringing into force sections 5 and 6 of the amendments to the Dominion Election Act passed last session. Section 5 provides for transmission of information by telegraph respecting elections in Gaspe, Chicoutimi and Saguenay. Section 6 adopts the ballot invented by ex-Mayor Durocher of this city. This ballot has been in use in Ottawa in municipal elections for the last two years. Its distinctive feature is the printing of the names of candidates in colors, and the space where the voter's mark is made is a colored square, with a centre-piece of white, in which the cross is placed. Durocher received $2500 for his patent.

At the request of the fishermen of Bay of Quinte, hoop-net fishing in the bay has been extended until the end of April, owing to the backwardness of the season and the delay of the ice in leaving the bay.

The Interior Department has received copies of a lecture delivered by Prof. Fuchs of the University of Grieswaldo, Germany, in Munich, last month. Prof. Fuchs visited Canada in 1893 and was greatly impressed with the resources of the country. Mr. Wagner, Land Commissioner, had him in charge, and the result of the professor's visit is a glowing account of Canada and its resources, delivered in a leading German city, before an audience of 1000 people.

The Marine Department was advised today that the Montreal Stock Yards Co. proposes to take live stock from their yards at Point St. Charles to ocean vessels down the river by means of lighters, in place of driving them along the wharves as heretofore. It is claimed that this change will entail less hardship upon the cattle. Mr. Telfer, secretary of the Live Stock Association, has communicated with Mr. Magee, Live Stock Commissioner, who will go to Montreal next week to examine the route over which the cattle will be driven from the stock yards to the lighters, and to ascertain what provision will be made for their safety and comfort on the lighters.

South Australia Militia to Be Abolished.

London, April 3.—The Times' correspondent in Melbourne says: South Australia has decided to abolish her militia, thus saving £10,000 annually. The colony will rely in the future for defence on the gunboat Protector, the forts and the artillery and naval brigades. This course is justified while England commands the sea. The only danger is from foreign cruisers.

THE BEATON LIBEL SUITS.

A Verdict for the Defendants With Costs in All Cases.

Hamilton, April 3.—The libel suits brought by Mrs. Beaton of Burlington against The Toronto Globe, St. Thomas Times, Guelph Herald, Stratford Herald and Strathroy Despatch were heard in the Assize Court to-day as one combined suit, and resulted in a verdict for the defendants, with costs in all cases.

Eighteen actions for damages for libel had been entered by Mrs. Beaton against Ontario papers, some of which were setteld, $501 in all being paid. The case against The St. Thomas Journal was heard last fall, a verdict of $1 and costs being awarded Mrs. Beaton. In this case Mr. J. S. Brierly, editor of The Journal, ably conducted his own case, but did not plead justification. The suits against The Toronto World and the Central Press Agency were thrown out by Justice Ferguson yesterday.

The alleged libel was contained in a news item, reproduced from The New York World in August, 1893, detailing the peculiar circumstances of the death of Cicero Harrison Case, formerly of Halton County, off the Old Dominion Liner Guyandotte on June 30. On that voyage he was accompanied by a woman who said she was his widowed daughter, Mrs. Oliver, but who disappeared on the arrival of the steamer at New York. The New York World traced "Mrs. Oliver" and identified her as Mrs. Beaton, who denied intimacy with Case, but admitted it in her sworn testimony.

WILDE VS QUEENSBERRY.

The Notorious Libel Suit Now Being Heard in London.

London, April 4.—At the Central Criminal Court trial of the action of Oscar Wilde against the Marquis of Queensberry for libel was begun.

The Marquis of Queensberry entered the dock, and pleaded not guilty, adding that the so-called libel was true, and had been made known in the interest of public morality.

Sir Edward Clarke reviewed the evidence taken in the Police Court, dwelling upon the writing on the card, which constituted the libel complained of. This writing alleged that Mr. Wilde had been posing immorally. The case was not concluded.

SHARP FIGHTING IN INDIA.

12,000 Hillmen Defeated With Heavy Loss—British Loss Slight.

London, April 3.—The Times correspondent in Calcutta says: The Chitral expedition stormed Malandri Pass on March 3. There was sharp fighting for five hours. The enemy, who were 12,000 strong, lost heavily, and ever since have been in full retreat. The British loss was slight. The First Brigade has crossed over into Swat.

Provincial Board of Health.

Toronto, April 4.—The Provincial Board of Health met at the Parliament Buildings yesterday. During the afternoon clause 4 of the proposed new Public Health Act, which comes before the Legislature to-day, and contains provisions against the feeding of offal to hogs, was mentioned. Dr. Bryce has issued to the different medical health officers in the province a circular inquiring as to the extent of practice in each district, and asking the opinions of the officials as to the prevalence, and the danger or not, of the practice. A large batch of replies were received. The consensus of opinion seems to be that considerable danger to the public health may arise. It is mentioned that tuberculosis, zymotic and parasitic diseases, including tape-worm, and many other diseases following the use of noxious animal food, may be caused by the practice.

Dr. Bryce presented a lengthy report, stating that municipalities are empowered to forego their powers in health matters to medical health officers appointed by the County Councils. The neglect of health matters in certain districts was referred to, and the inestimable advantage to the public health which would follow the appointment of a trained bacteriologist as county medical health officer dwelt upon. Such an officer would systematically vaccinate the children of county schools, keep on hand diphtheria anti-toxine, and diagnose any suspected case of tuberculosis in animals before the herds became infected. A suggestion is made in favor of obtaining permissive legislation, not only giving power to appoint such officers, but fixing their remuneration on certificates of efficiency being obtained in a course of study, to be fixed by the board. An accurate estimate of the health conditions of the province would then be possible, detailed scientific investigation carried on regarding local geology, underground water, rainfalls and relative incidence of disease. A high standard of scientific university work would be brought about by encouraging students to follow out special lines of investigation, such as water and food analysis, animal diseases, etc.

Local committees will act with medical societies and county councils in urging the adoption of the method recommended in the report.

The board, in Committee of the Whole, discussed provisions for the better supervision of the public health in unorganized territories, and the equitable distribution of public funds in the districts.

The board will resume at 10.30 this morning.

NEWFOUNDLAND WOGS

HERE TO KNOW CANADA'S OFFER

The Delegates Reach Ottawa and Will Have a Formal Conference With the Sub Committee To Day—One of the Delegates Interviewed.

Ottawa, April 3.—The delegates from Newfoundland, Messrs. Bond, Morris, Emerson and Horwood, arrived here from Montreal this afternoon, and were met at the station by Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir A. P. Caron and Hon. Mr. Haggart, representing the Government. There were also present at the station, Sir James Grant, M.P., Mr. Kavanagh, President of the Board of Trade. Formal conferences with the sub-committee of the council will commence to-morrow. The delegates were notified to-day of the appointment of this sub-committee.

Hon. Mr. Emerson, speaking this afternoon said that no decision had been reached as to nature of terms that Newfoundland would ask.

"We do not know, he said, even whether our people are prepared for Confederation at all, but the question of throwing in our lot with Canada has long been under discussion, and we, that is, the Newfoundland Government, thought that this would be a favorable time to ascertain on just what terms confederation could be arranged. You know some of our monetary institutions have come to grief and many of our people appeared to think that our financial troubles might have been avoided, or at least reduced, if we had been closer associated in a financial way with Canada."

"While this feeling was abroad we considered it would be the most advantageous time to ascertain what terms Canada was prepared to offer us to enter the Dominion, and if they were satisfactory, to submit them to the people, for you know the question of joining the Dominion would have to be submitted to the popular vote. By the way, the question has already been once submitted to the colonial electorate, and the plan was then defeated by an overwhelming majority. That was a long while ago, though, and in 1869, two years after the Act of Confederation was passed. No one can say just how public opinion has changed since then, nor what the changes in the terms offered our colony are likely to be."

"You have no offers to make to the Dominion Government, then?"

"No, we really have not; but, as we compose the majority of the Government, we shall be able pretty well to speak with authority as to the proposed terms as they are brought up for discussion. Of course we know perfectly well that there are certain settled terms laid down in the British North America Act for the admission of new provinces to the Dominion, but we also know that special terms were made, for instance, with Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Manitoba. You know, of course, that peculiar conditions exist in Newfoundland, and that many peculiar interests have to be considered."

Sir Mackenzie Bowell received the following cablegram to-day: St. John's Nfld., April 3.—According to Halifax newspaper interview with Newfoundland deputation misrepresents public sentiment regarding federation. There is intense feeling against it in town and on the island. The matter was not officially mentioned before the delegates' departure. Petitions expressing disapproval are now being signed everywhere. (Signed) Knowling, chairman.

The Council of the Board of Trade met this afternoon for the purpose of striking a sub-committee to co-operate with the City Council in tendering a banquet to the delegates.

The delegates dined at Government House to-night.

British Relief of Newfoundland's Distress.

London, April 3.—A Parliamentary report just issued contains communications with Newfoundland in regard to the financial conditions in the Colony. The correspondence includes the refusal of the Government to assist banks which are still solvent and authorizes the Colonial Government to draw from the Imperial Government £5000 for the purpose of relieving urgent cases.

The communications also announce that the sum of £15,000 has been placed to the credit of Mr. Herbert Murray in the Bank of Montreal. The decision of Mr. Murray, formerly chairman of the British Customs Department, who has gone to Newfoundland for the purpose of distributing relief, is to be final in regard to the disposition of this fund.

Election Excitement in Haldimand.

Cayuga, Ont., April 3.—The feeling in Haldimand is quite intense over the report that a McCarthyite is to oppose Hon. Dr. Montague. PRIDE OF THE OHIO BURNED.

"The Iron Queen" Passenger Boat Destroyed by Fire.

Pomeroy, Ohio, April 4.—This morning, while putting off freight at Antiquity, 12 miles above Pomeroy, the passenger steamer Iron Queen took fire and was totally destroyed. One chambermaid is missing. The Iron Queen left Cincinnati for Wheeling and Pittsburg at 5 p.m. Monday. When she passed here she was loaded nearly to the guards with freight and had a big passenger list. She was the pride of the Ohio River. The Iron Queen was built in Marietta in 1892, and was valued at $60,000. She was insured for about half that amount.

New Whatcom, Wash., April 3.—The steamer Buckeye, plying between this city and Friday Harbor, capsized in Bellingham Bay, south of Eliza's Island, yesterday. It is believed four of those on board were lost.

The city of Buenos Ayres has the largest street car system, in proportion to its population, of any city in the world. The total number of passengers carried last year was 71,345,564, while the monthly average was 5,955,547.

DEAN'S CURE.

Mimico, Aug. 20, 1894

Vm. Dean, Esq., Dear Sir:

le I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in his praise. Yours truly,

Walter Burgess.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.]

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

Symptoms. Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money.'

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

ONTARIO CONSERVATIVES.	QUEBEC CONSERVATIVES.
Toronto Mail and Empire—"The order calls for no interference with the Public Schools; it relates the complaints of the minority, and it casts upon Manitoba the responsibility of acting." Hamilton Spectator—"The action of the Judicial Committee has not in the least degree committed the Conservative Government or the Conservative party to any view whatever on the question of "Manitoba Schools." Toronto World—"Non-interference seems the wisest and safest course." George Taylor M.P. Chief Government whip in an interview: "The Dominion Government has no idea of interfering with Manitoba for its schools. All that it has done is to have transferred the matter over to Mr. Greenway to do with it as he pleases." Ottawa Citizen—It may be observed that there is no ground for the statement that "the Dominion orders the Province to abolish the Act."	L'Evenement—"If Mr. Greenway and his colleagues refuse to do what is right to the just demands of the Manitoba minority and the injunction of the Federal Government. Mr. Bowell, Orangeman though he be, will arrange, in spite of them, to give to Catholics the protection to which they have a right." Trifluvien—"Governments speak by their acts. That is what the Bowell Cabinet has just done declaring that so far as it is concerned it has decided to repair injustice and to impose respect to the constitution. It will be vilified, given over to the execration of fanaticism and intolerance. What does it matter? It has done its duty, it has risen in the esteem of honest people of every creed and of every nationality." The Minerve, the leading Montreal Conservative organ says: "The line of conduct of the Federal Parliament is simple and easy. The calling (of the House) is the corollary of the remedial order-in-council which was adopted Thursday. If this Ministerial order had been a simple invitation to the Legislature to consider the judgment of the Imperial Privy Council it is probable that dissolution would have taken the place of a session. The clearly remedial order addressed to the Legislature of Winnipeg makes every kind of pretext for delay disappear.

THE C P R AND THE NORTHWEST SETTLER

One of the indictments upon which our worthy contemporary arraigns the Liberal party is that of opposing the conditions upon which the C.P.R. was carried through, as it were, on the shoulders of the nation. It is the settlers in the North West who, now that they have had time to practically test the results, are best able to speak on the subject. In the statement of the Calgary Board of Trade before the Freight Rates Commission is the following:

"Without boasting, we have a country equal to any in Canada. We can make butter and cheese equal to any. Our grasses are rich, so that our cattle can pass from the prairie to the butcher. We can grow oats, barley and wheat equal to any in North America. Our sheep, our wool and our mutton are unexcelled. But all these avail us nothing. Of what use is our cattle if we have to pay $15 a head to get them to market? Our fine grass is more than counterbalanced by heavy freight. Of what use is butter and cheese if our markets are taken from us. Of what use is it to raise sheep if we are taxed to haul wool from Australia? What is the use of trying to raise oats when we are charged a third of its value for hauling 135 miles? Everything that we get in is paid for at the highest rate, while that which we have to send out is taxed a third. Our markets are exploited and given over to our rivals. No country, however, rich in natural resources can stand long such treatment. It would require a gold mine at each man's door to stand it long.

"The people of Canada built and paid for the Canadian Pacific Railway, and intended it to be part of a national highway from ocean to ocean. They intended it to be the means of opening up a great but unbroken country. The country has more than surpassed the dreams of the most sanguine, but the railway has failed to do its duty; a national highway paid for by by the people, yet a foreigner from Maine wishing to locate in Washington can travel over it cheaper than a Canadian wishing to settle in Alberta; but the Canadian is taxed yearly to pay interest on capital, doubly taxed to pay interest on bonds and shares, and all so that a foreigner can travel from one part of his own country to another cheaply.'

EDITORIAL NOTES

Two acts lately introduced into the Local Legislature by Hon. John Dyden will receive the commendation and support of the labor people. One is with a view to the further protection of employees in places of business other than factories by providing for the appointment of inspectors one of whom is to be a woman. And the other bill is to amend the Factory Act, and provides for the better fire protection; the reporting of accidents to the Minister of Agriculture; the better protecting of machinery while in motion; and the appointment of a woman inspector. Those who heard Miss Joussaye at the Humane society meeting some time ago will appreciate the need for this last provision.

CURIOUS CUSTOMS.

Odd Phases of Weddings Among the Foreign Population of Northern Michigan.

Many curious customs are in vogue among the foreign population of Northern Michigan, especially in social matters. When a French couple get married a carriage or a sleigh ride is inevitable, according to the season of the year. The couples are not packed together in one waggon or sleigh, but each fellow and his girl have an individual rig, the bride and groom taking the lead and the others following like a funeral procession; but there is nothing funeral about it, especially the pace set. After the procession has been riding for hours, a dance ends the festivities.

The Polanders have a curious wedding custom that is very ingenious as a money-getter, and takes the place of wedding presents. After the wedding feast follows a dance that sometimes lasts twelve to fourteen hours and even longer. The chief honor is to dance with the bride, and this is decided in a curious manner. The mother of the bride takes her place in one corner of the room with a plate in her lap, which she takes very good care shall be built after the plan of an eating house coffee cup. The gallant who wants to dance with the bride, and all are in honor bound to do so at least once, must pull out a piece of silver and endeavor to break or chip the plate by throwing their money upon it, and only those who succeed in chipping or breaking the plate are allowed the coveted honor. Let those who think it easy to break an ironstone plate try it. Few succeed in doing it for less than 50 cents, and it is not an unusual thing for the bride's money to amount up to $75 or $100, even where the crowd is apparently as poor as a church mouse, and it may go even higher when the bride is pretty and popular. All the money goes to the bride, and in a backwoods country $50 to $75 will start a happy couple nicely in housekeeping.—Detroit Free Press.

DO CHICKENS HAVE A LANGUAGE?

The Sun recently announced that a learned man in Baltimore has made the discovery that chickens have language. It must be interesting to the professor to find this out for himself, but the discovery of the fact is coeval with the discovery of chickens. Eve in Eden knew the eager cluck cluck which summons the chicks to their diet of worms, and the soft, caressing note of the mother hen as she gathereth her brood under her wings.

Of course they have a language. Everything that has voice has language. What else can we name the vocal expression of emotions! Had not Alfred Tennyson a language? And what was he? "An infant crying for the light, and with no language but a cry."

More can be learned in a chicken yard about speech than Garner could learn in his gorilla-proof cage in the African forests. There may be heard the language of love, announcements of discovery, invitations to dine, cries of alarm, shouts of defiance, challenges to combat, the cheer of victory, the muezzin's call and the hymn of the rising sun.

In beginning to study a language it is more difficult to distinguish sentences than single words. I am not sure, but I think I have found the words which being interpreted are: "Here is a fresh lettuce, children," and "Keep close to the coop, my dears;" and once I heard a cock cry, "A hawk! Sauve qui peut," so plainly that I knew what he said, although he was mistaken and had been frightened by a homing pigeon.

Emotional expressions form only the basis of a language, but there is in every company of well-bred fowls a multitude of low sounds which must denote interchange of idea; and when some student of gallinaceous physchology shall translate them into our language we shall find that a chicken yard is as full of talk as a woman's club—New York Sun.

Two Lincoln Stories.

Senator and Secretary Seward—or, as his friends generally called him, "the Governor"—like all good citizens, went home to vote, and the night before election made it a rule to have a "familiar talk with his neighbors." The familiar talk was always a carefully prepared and instructive speech—at least his own party thought so—which appeared in the papers all over the country the next morning. During the war he usually traveled in a private car, often with no company but his colored servant. Once he invited the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Auburn, the Rev. Dr Hawley, and three venerable elders of the same church to return to Washington with him as his guests as well as en route. One of the first things to entertain his friends was, of course, to take them to see the President. He introduced them in his formal way, not omitting in either case the title and the denomination to which he belonged. That "reminded" Mr. Lincoln, and he said:

"When I was a young man living in ——, a little town in the State of Illinois, there was but one church in the town, and that was a Presbyterian. There were a few Universalists in the town, who once in a while held a meeting in the schoolhouse. One Sabbath during the service in the church some one came up the aisle and handed the pastor a notice, and quickly retired. While the hymn was being sung the minister looked at the notice. He had never been asked to give such a notice before; but by the time the long hymn was ended he was ready. He got up and said: 'Brethren and sisters, I have been requested to give notice here to-day that a set of people who believe in universal salvation will hold a meeting next Lord's Day in the red schoolhouse in the northeast district. But, brethren, we believe better things!'"

Dr. Hawley told me the story at the time, and I have never seen it in print.

Mr. Seward was an Episcopalian, and this story is told: On one of the occasions when President Lincoln's patience was tried by a self-appointed adviser who got warm and used strong language, Mr. Lincoln interrupted him by saying, "You are an Episcopalian, aren't you?" and when asked why he thought so, said: "You swear just like Seward, and he is." That was Mr. Lincoln's way of getting rid of such advisers.—Springfield Republican.

Optical Parliamentary Ill-Luck.

Sir Richard Temple, in his book "Life in Parliament," gives a pathetic account of the trouble of a British member who is unfortunate in his efforts to catch the Speaker's eye. He says it sometimes happens that a member may rise time after time, night after night, till his heart grows sick, and yet is not called. He sees man after man, with less claims than himself, called before him, and he naturally wonders. On the other hand, the position of the speaker must be difficult, inasmuch as he has to balance many considerations unknown to the members generally. He is probably the only man who knows every member of the House, and he must always have some reason in his own mind. The House, though never seeking to enter into the reasons, accepts his conclusions. He is the Speaker for all the members—not for the best man only, but for the whole body. It does not follow that the ablest men or the most experienced are called first by him. The House contains members juvenile and aged, famous and unknown, able and insignificant, potent and feeble—he must be Speaker for them alike—and for voting in the division lobby, there is equality between them all. To each one of them in turn, sooner or later, he will impartially afford a chance of being heard, if time shall permit. But if by ill-luck a man happens to rise often before he is called, the mental process must be distressing in the extreme. He has a speech in his head, but it is modified again and again by other speeches. His faculties will be strung up to the point of preparation, and will then be suddenly relaxed. Once more for him the tension will be restored, but again there will be collapse. The repetition of the process must make his brain reel, and rack his aching head. When at last he is called to speak, his performance will lose half the verve it would have had at first. To crown all, there is something of the ridiculous in the whole affair, so the sufferer will never confess his sufferings.

The Growing of Raspberries.

Parmelee's Pills possess the power of acting specially upon the deseased organs, stimulating to action the dormant energies of the system, thereby removing disease. In fact, so great is the power of this medicine to cleanse and purify, that disease of almost every name and nature are driven from the body.' Mr. D. Carswell, Carswell, P. O., Ont., writes: "I have tried Parmelee's Pills and find them an excellent medicine, and one that will sell well.'

Florida hasn't a brewery.

If sick headache is misery, what are Carter's Little Liver Pills if they will positively cure it? People who have used them speak frankly of their worth. They are small and easy to take.

The harvester invented by Mr. McCormick in 1831 has been so improved that it is said it will cut and bind an acre of grain in 15 minutes.

Fever and Ague and Bilious Derangements are positively cured by the use of Parmelee's Pills. They not only cleanse the stomach and bowels from all bilious matter, but they open the excretory vessels, causing them to pour copious effusions from the blood into the bowels, after which the corrupt mass is thrown out by the natural passage of the body. They are used as a general family medicine with the best results.

Fagged Out.—None but those who have become fagged out, know what a depressed, miserable feeling it is. All strength is gone, and despondency has taken hold of the sufferers. They feel as though there is nothing to live for. There, however, is a cure—one box of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will do wonders in restoring health and strength. Mandrake and Dandelion are two of the articles entering into the composition of Parmelee's Pills.

If afflicted with scalp diseases, hair falling out, and premature baldness, do not use grease or alcoholic preparations, but apply Hall's Hair Renewer.

We often sneer at the Egyptians for being a slow people, but on the contrary, they must of been a very busy race. Even mummies appear to have been pressed for time.

Constipation, headache, Billiousness and Bad Blood, are promptly cured by Burdock Blood Bitters, which acts upon the stomach, liver, bowels, and blood, curing all their diseases.

As a remedy for internal use Hagyard's Yellow Oil is wonderful in its curative power. One or two doses cure Hoarseness and Sore Throat, Asthma, Bronchitis and Swelled Tonsi are quickly relieved. For Quinsy, Colds, etc., it is the best remedy.

The Genuine Merit

Of Hood's Sarsaparilla wins friends wherever it is fairly and honestly tried. A Humorous Fact

About Hood's Sarsaparilla—It expels bad humor and creates good humor. A battle for blood is what Hood's Sarsaparilla vigorously fights, and it is always victorious in expelling foul taints and giving the vital fluid the quality and quantity of perfect health. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, boils and other blood diseases.

The New Year in Railroading

"Any one may predict," said Chauncey M. Depew, in a recent interview, "but who can fulfil? I might tell you a dozen things that will make the year 1895 historical in railroading, but they may not materialize. Take, for instance, the New York Central Railroad. You know what its achievements have been. And yet how essential it is that we should be continually looking out for improvements. The roadbed must be studied, the coaling stations need attention; in a word, we must never be satisfied with the results that have been attained, no matter how good they are. So much for detail. Now for the general.

"You know that Engine 999 of the New York Central road has attained a speed unheard of in kind in the history of travel. Our trains might almost be termed flashes of lightning, but their rate is not a circumstance to the speed we are now aiming at. Then there is the matter of safety. I need not assure you that the safety of the passengers is the most important thing a railroad man has to do with. The coming year we expect to attain what some people may consider a chimera—namely, perfect freedom from risk in the transportation of human beings by rail. We have, we believe, solved the problem and that, I should say, will make 1895 an unequaled year in railroading."—The Railway Agent.

As to Snake Bites.

That no less than 23,000 people should have perished last year in the Indian province of Bengal from snake bites shows how little progress has been made by science toward the discovery of some antidote for the poison of these reptiles. The trouble is that the poison of nearly every species seems to affect a different organ of the body. Thus the bite of a cobra seems to paralyze the lungs, while the poison of the daboia produces terrible convulsions. From time immemorial physicians of every clime and race have devoted their energies to the discovery of cures for these bites; but judging from the heavy list of casualties from this source alone in Bengal, the most highly civilized province and possessed of the best system of medical supervision of all English colonial dependencies, it would seem that all efforts in this direction have been abortive.—New York Tribune.

Long Enough.

Stephen A. Douglas and Mr. Lovejoy were once gossiping together when Abraham Lincoln came in. The two men immediately turned their conversation upon the proper length of a man's legs.

"Now," said Lovejoy, "Abe's legs are altogether to long and yours, Douglas, I think are a little short. 'Let's ask Abe what he thinks of it?"

Then, turning to Lincoln, he said: "We're talking about the proper length of a man's legs. We think yours are too long and Douglas, too short and we'd like to know what you think is the proper length."

"Well," said Mr. Lincoln, "that's a matter that I've never given any thought to, so of course I may be mistaken, but my first impression is that a man's leg ought to be long enough to reach from his body to the ground."

Napoleon Portraits.

No face is better known through portraits than that of Napoleon, yet the best-known picture of the great Corsican is believed to be the least reliable. There are in existence over fifty portraits, taken in his own time, and the variance between them is so great that it is sometimes difficult to trace any resemblance. It is evident that the portraits by David are idealized, while the little known portrait by Trumbull represent him as a beefy, overfed man, with little intellectuality of expression. In youth and during the last few years of his life he was undoubtedly ugly; between 1800 and 1810, after his emaciation disappeared and before he became gross, he was only passably good-looking. There were in his face and manner a personal dignity and an air of command that inspired respect in all beholders.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Queer Origin of Two Fashions.

Marie Antoinette, history tells us, one day noticed on her toilet table some peacock feathers which had been placed there accidentally, being designed to decorate some fancy work. She stuck one of the feathers in her hair. Being pleased with the effect, she added another, and then called for some ostrich feathers. The next day she appeared in court with a beautiful headdress of feathers, a fashion which immediately spread throughout France and Europe, and which is followed in dress circles down to the present day.

Don John, of Austria, the son of Charles V., and the fascinating young hero of Lepanto, had a patch of hair on one side of his head which grew upright, and to conceal this peculiarity he used to comb all his hair back from his forehead. When he went as governor to the low countries, all the people of fashion imitated the mode, and from them it descended to our own day.

Dionysius was extremely short-sighted, and his flatterers, Montaigne tells us, "ran against one another in his presence, and stumbled at or overturned whatever was under foot, to show that they were as purblind as their sovereign."—Youth's Companion.

France and Germany.

Fortunately for Europe, the relations between France and Germany are becoming more friendly as the years pass by. No better proof of this has been given recently than the reception accorded to the article of Anatole Leroy Beaulieu, the well-known French writer, in one of the Paris reviews. M. Beaulieu declares that there is no hatred for the Germans in the breasts of the young Frenchmen of to-day. He advises them to form associations for the study of the German language and literature, and declares that of all the nations in Europe, Germany, so far as advanced knowledge is concerned, is most worthy of their attention. A few years ago it would have taken a brave man to give voice to these sentiments. With that we would not say that M. Beaulieu is not brave; but the day is past when the expression of such opinions is dangerous. The author's suggestions have been discussed dispassionately, and many commentators have praised them. This is a happy result for the lovers of peace—and the inhabitants of Alsace-Lorraine.—New York Tribune.

MEMBERS VOTE TO HOLD PASSES

Sixty One Majority Against the Patron Measure—Ladies Permitted to Act as Barristers—A Busy in the Ontario Legislature.

Toronto, April 4. — Yesterday's session of the Local Legislature was the most important and the most interesting that has been held this year. The House threw out, by a majority of 61, the Patron bill prohibiting members using railroad passes. Mr. Wood's bill allowing women to plead in courts of law was read a second time by a majority of 34; Mr. Howland's motion respecting the city's claim to the Old Upper Canada College grounds was defeated by a majority of 26, and a long and excited debate arose on Dr. McKay's bill to amend the Assessment Act, which was characterized as a "single tax measure."

The Patron pass bill did not come up until after 11. Mr. Haycock introduced it and a long discussion followed. Mr. Wood, Liberal, was the first speaker, arguing against the bill. He pointed out that the Legislature had practically no jurisdiction over the great railroads from which passes were secured; therefore, he did not understand the necessity of the bill.

Dr. Willoughby (Conservative) contended that the privilege was not extended by the railroad companies with a view to obtaining favors at the hands of members, and he did not see any reason for the introduction of the bill. He thought it cast a reflection upon the members of the House. It was a question that had been raised by an entirely new party; it was a question that would be short-lived.

Sir Oliver Mowat did not see any occasion for the bill. The only grounds for such a measure would be that some evil had taken place in the past in consequence of the passes, or that some harm was expected in the future. As a matter of fact, it had never been pretended that a single measure was passed owing to the granting of these passes; it had never been said that any act had been passed too favorable to the railroads. The passes were not restricted to those who were supposed to be friendly to the railways, but to all alike. He looked upon them as courtesies granted to the representatives of the people, and it was fitting that courtesies should be shown to the representatives of the people.

Mr. Whitney (Conservative) asserted that the bill absolutely invited rascality and was an incentive to political immorality of the worst possible kind. The bill provided that no pass should be received on account of membership of the House. What was to prevent members evading the law and obtaining passes, not as members, but as outsiders?

Mr. Haycock, in reply, contended that if his bill cast a reflection on members, then every amendment to the statute was a reflection. He quoted Lord Bacon's assertion that it was inconceivable and unnatural to accept a present from any body without being influenced thereby.

"I have it on the authority of railway managers, that passes are presented with a view to the obtaining of favors." "Name, name," shouted members. "I won't name them," said Mr. Haycock.

Continuing, the Patron leader said they had the press and the pulpit and the people on their side, and he predicted that within four years the Government themselves would have to bring in such a bill, however unpalatable the medicine might be.

"Why don't you send back your own pass?" asked Mr. Whitney. "I have," came the reply. Mr. Whitney said he knew what he was talking about, to which Mr. Haycock answered that he was "speaking from the depths of the most profound ignorance." (Laughter.)

The bill was thrown out on the division, the vote being: Yeas 13, nays 74; majority 61. The Patrons all supported the bill with the exception of Mr. Pardo. The Liberals and the Opposition voted solid against the bill with the exception of Mr. McLean (Liberal).

The advocates of the single tax have been very much in evidence around the lobbies of the House recently. The reason for their visits was made apparent yesterday. Just before 6 o'clock Dr. McKay threw a political bombshell into the House in the shape of a bill to amend the Assessment Act, providing that "any Municipal Corporation may change, reduce or abolish the assessment for taxation of all buildings and improvements on real estate, stocks of merchandise, machinery, personalty, securities, and income, or may assess for taxation any or all of such classes of property." It was an innocent looking bill, and it was not until Hon. Mr. Hardy characterized it as a single tax measure that the members awoke to the importance of the proposed Act. But when they were aroused there was no holding them in. Denunciations were the order of the day.

Only the leader of the Patrons had a word to say in favor of the bill. He thought it should go to the committee for discussion, because there was a general feeling throughout the country that the present system of assessment was unsatisfactory, a fact which was evidenced, he contended, by the large number of bills which had been introduced to amend the Assessment Act.

Hon. Mr. Hardy dealt with the bill in a vein of ridicule, arguing that the single tax was opposed to prosperity, and Mr. Whitney contended that there was no demand for the measure.

Mr. St. John protested against the bill "in the interests of the farmers," characterizing the principle underlying it as a vicious one.

The discussion would in all probability have gone on until next week had not Dr. McKay withdrawn the bill, it evidently having been introduced as a "feeler."

This interesting subject was followed by another quite as entertaining, if not equally as important, to wit, the admission of women to the study and practice of law. Mr. Wood, the genial whip of the Liberal party, is the father of the measure, which favors the "new woman." The fair sex are already allowed to practice as solicitors. Mr. Wood asks in his bill that the privilege shall be extended, so as to allow them to practice as barristers. He introduced his measure in an amusing speech, in which he expressed his assurance that the members dare not refuse to let it pass the second reading.

When he sat down there was a pause which was broken by Mr. Whitney, who asked why the Attorney-General did not divide the House. Sir Oliver thereupon took up the challenge. Women sang and spoke in public, said he, why should they not be allowed to plead in courts of law? At the same time he did not think many women would avail themselves of the privilege.

Mr. Richardson announced himself in sympathy with the bill, a statement which was received with laughter and after him arose the first member sufficiently courageous to oppose the measure. Mr. Awrey it was and a very finished speech he made. He opposed it because he wanted women to maintain the very high standard which they at present held. He believed that the sphere of women was not in the active walks of life, and he foresaw ladies sitting on the bench as judges if bills like this were passed.

The ice having been broken, others felt drawn to oppose the bill, and the debate grew exceedingly amusing. Mr. Howland was in favor of the measure and so was Hon. Mr. Ross, the latter contending that, when woman was first made, she was placed on the earth to compete with and struggle with man on a level basis. "After all," said he, "is it not a forte of woman to argue with and persuade everybody?" (Laughter.) He did not see why, if they were fit, women should not become judges or generals in the army. The Minister of Education's speech was a fighting one throughout.

A little before 11 o'clock a division was taken, with the result that the bill passed the second reading by a majority of 34, the vote being, yeas 61, nays 27.

A great deal of laughter took place when the next item of business was taken up. It was none other than Mr. Howland's bill to prevent the docking of horses, which was duly read a second time.

The old question of the city's claim to the Upper Canada College grounds occupied the attention of the House for nearly two hours in the afternoon. The matter was brought up on the following resolution, moved by Mr. Howland: "That a select committee be appointed to enquire and report as to the easement claimed by the inhabitants of the city of Toronto in Russell square, in the city of Toronto, with power to send for persons and papers and to examine witnesses upon oath."

Mr. Howland made a speech arguing in favor of the claim on the grounds of justice and legality. Sir Oliver Mowat saw no justice in the demand, but a great deal of injustice. It was an injustice to the province and an injustice to the University and to Upper Canada College. The Premier was backed up by Mr. Ross, whilst on the Opposition side, Mr. Whitney took part in the debate.

On a division the motion was lost, the vote being: Yeas 31, nays 57; majority 26.

Mr. Marter asked the Provincial Secretary whether Peter Shannon, lock master at Port Carling, and deputy game warden, Muskoka, was the P. M. Shannon whose name appears on page 38 of the Ontario Game and Fish Commission report, 1894, as having been convicted on three separate occasions for violations of the Ontario Game Protection Act.

Hon. Mr. Gibson replied that he was not able to give a definite answer, but there was reason to believe that he was the same man. His attention had not been called before to the matter. He thought it deserved serious consideration, and he would give it his attention.

The Private Bill Committee yesterday decided that municipalities should not be allowed to levy market fees except where warmth and shelter are provided. Mr. Richardson's bill for the entire abolition of market fees was thrown out.

THE CUBAN REVOLUTION.

Insurgent Forces Rapidly Growing — A British Merchantman Fired On.

Havana, via Tampa, Fla., April 4.—The streets of Havana and the fields and mountains of Cuba are filled with soldiers and revolutionists. The excitement all over the island is more intense than at any period since the revolutionists fired the first shot, on Feb. 21. This is because the insurgent forces are growing almost as rapidly as the reinforcements of loyal troops, and the latter are coming in on every maritime vessel sailing in this direction from Spain. Nearly one-third of all of the soldiers imported from Spain have been sick and many of them have died. They are unacclimatized, and as food is scarce they have eaten greedily green foods. The result has been disastrous and demoralizing. It is reported here that a company of regulars deserted the army and joined the insurgents near Puerto Principe.

Havana had 66 new cases of yellow fever yesterday. Of these the majority were Spanish soldiers. All Americans are leaving Cuba, fearing the fever.

Fired on a British Boat.

New York, April 3.—The Herald's special from Kingston, Jamaica, says: The British steamer Ethelred, which cleared March 27 from Boston, Mass., for Port Antonio, Jamaica, when off Cape Maysi, Cuba, was fired upon by a Spanish gunboat. The Ethelred stopped, and was boarded and examined by officers of the gunboat, after which she proceeded on her voyage.

Word has been received from Santiago de Cuba of a convention of revolutionary sub-chiefs and delegates. General Bartolome Masso was chosen provisional commander-in-chief of the Cuban revolutionary forces in the Province of Santiago, pending the arrival of General Gomez. Gen. Masso and his lieutenants in that province have from 3000 to 5000 men under arms. About one-fifth of the men are mounted as cavalry, but they lack arms and ammunition. Private advices from Port Au Prince, Hayti, indicate that President Hippolyte is lending active support to the Cuban insurgents. Jose Martis' agents are reported to be negotiating for the purchase of a vessel now used by the Haytian Government as a transport, having a speed of eight knots an hour.

POLITICS IN THE CHURCH.

Watertown, N.Y., April 4.—The differences of opinion between members of the Presbyterian church at Chaumont, this county, as to the retention of Rev. William N. Cleveland, as pastor, took on a new form last evening, when a meeting was held of those who are in favor of making a change in the pastorate. It is asserted that the meeting took such formal action as to indicate its desire that Pastor Cleveland should resign. The importance of the matter is enhanced by the fact that the pastor is a brother of President Cleveland, and is said to be a man of positive political opinions, with Democratic proclivities, though he has not been generally known as an offensive partisan. There are two factions in the church, one insisting on his continuance as their spiritual leader, and the other firmly opposed. It happens that those who think the church would prosper better under a new pastor are Republicans, and so a political cast is given to the affair, although Mr. Cleveland's opponents disclaim that as a motive.

HOW WOMEN WORK.

It will occur to impartial observers that if women are not as persistent in business as men it is because they regard business as a possible stepping stone to something better and higher, while to a man it is the end and aim of existence. A man starts in life as lawyer, merchant, doctor, architect, clerk or what not; if he be a serious person all his soul is consecrated on the effort to succeed in his calling, and social life, political ambition, even love, are side issues, because he sees no hope for future ease and comfort except by means of that calling. A woman, on the other hand, has always two strings to her bow. Success in the employment at remunerative pay, which probably increases with the years, but, until she grows too old to consider matrimony among the possibilities of life, she never loses sight of the chance that a man may pass her way whom she could love and who could make her a happy wife. Thus with her there is no concentration of potential energy on a single object, but always a withholding from her labors of a reserve force which is only called into play when the man appears on the horizon. There are women whose toil is at least as unceasing as that of men—wives who get up early to light the fire and cook breakfast for themselves and their husbands, who despatch the children to school with washed faces, hurry down to the desk where their business is conducted, toil over figures all day, and when night falls drag their weary legs home to cook the family dinner. Such women work as hard as men and exhibit a persistency more enduring than the average man can boast of. But they are probably exceptions.

The average shop girl, saleswoman, milliner, typewriter, bookkeeper or cashier of the female sex is often lacking in concentration and absorbing devotion to her work. Other concerns flit across her mind like light clouds skimming the surface of her sky. She thinks of her dress, and whether she can afford a new hat; of a girl with whom she is intimate and whom she secretly hates; of a man whom she has met, of what he said and what he meant; of a party to which she had been invited and of the prospect of her having a good time there. For the moment these topics of thought divert her mind from the business in which she is engaged, and consume some share of her energy. A young man of the same age, unless he is a poor thing, never allows matters of the kind to intervene between him and his business; he is trained to consider them after business hours.—San Francisco Argonaut.

This Dog Knows Money.

"A man named Harrison in Sioux City, has a setter dog that is a pretty valuable animal, and a good many people in Iowa would be willing to pay a good, stiff price for him," said W. W. McCann, of Des Moines.

"He has brought his master on several occasions money he has found in the street, and quite recently he came in with tail wagging proudly and a pocketbook with over $200 in it held in his mouth. Shot—which is his name—seems to be as familiar with the worth of articles he may happen to come across in his skirmishes around town as any human being, and it is the result of early training. His owner, when the dog was a puppy, patiently taught him to retrieve various articles, and frequently used bills and coin in this practice. In this way, probably, the animal learned to distinguish the peculiar scent of money, for it has an aroma that is acquired from being carried on the person. But no matter what the secret is, Shot is a lucky dog in every sense of the word, for he never comes across money that he does not eagerly pick it up and race home with it. And he'll bring lots of other things that evidently appear to him as useful. If there is an old cast-off hat in his course he'll carry it to Harrison, and old rags or clothing are as dutifully taken the same way. He's an excellent field dog also, but has never been known to retrieve a bird. So Shot is a sort of canine paradox in his run-and-fetch qualities."—Washington Star.

France and Germany.

Fortunately for Europe, the relations between France and Germany are becoming more friendly as the years pass by. No better proof of this has been given recently than the reception accorded to the article of Anatole Leroy Beaulieu, the well-known French writer, in one of the Paris reviews. M. Beaulieu declares that there is no hatred for the Germans in the breasts of the young Frenchmen of to-day. He advises them to form associations for the study of the German language and literature, and declares that of all the nations in Europe, Germany, so far as advanced knowledge is concerned, is most worthy of their attention. A few years ago it would have taken a brave man to give voice to these sentiments. With that we would not say that M. Beaulieu is not brave; but the day is past when the expression of such opinions is dangerous. The author's suggestions have been discussed dispassionately, and many commentators have praised them. This is a happy result for the lovers of peace—and the inhabitants of Alsace-Lorraine.—New York Tribune.

WILL THEY CALL BOTH WAYS?

A Possibility that the R. & O. N. Liners will Call at Belleville on the Down Trip.

It has been moted that the Richlieu & Ontario Navigation Co. intended this season making arrangements so that the Toronto and Montreal mail liners would call at Belleville on both the up and down trips instead of only on the up trip as in former years. If the change were accomplished it would be an undoubted advantage to the people of Belleville and would result in no less substantial advantages to the company. By the schedule of past seasons the boats arrived in Toronto at 7 a.m. and left at 2 p.m. waiting for the half dozen or so tourist passengers from the Falls. If the boats were to leave Toronto at 10 a.m. the tourists would make a point of stopping over night in Toronto instead of at the Falls and then the boat might make a run down the Bay of Quinte, calling at Belleville, and thereby affording the passengers an opportunity of viewing some of the most enchanting of Canadian scenery. By this course also the roughest part of the lake passage would be avoided and save the passengers much sea-sickness. The Company might lose something in victuals but they would more than make it up in increased traffic. The course down the Bay would also be considerably shorter than the lake course formerly taken.

George Taylor M.P. Chief Government whip in an interview: "The Dominion Government has no idea of interfering with Manitoba for its schools. All that it has done is to have transferred the matter over to Mr. Greenway to do with it as he pleases."

Ottawa Citizen—It may be observed that there is no ground for the statement that "the Dominion orders the Province to abolish the Act."

[illegible] cements a [illegible] eak their lots. That is what the Bowell Cabinet has just done declaring that so far as concerned it has decided to repair in justice and to impose respect to the constitution. It will be vilified, given over to the execration of fanaticism and intolerance. What does it matter? It has done its duty, it has risen in the esteem of honest people of every creed and of every nationality."

The Minerve, the leading Montreal Conservative organ says "The line of conduct of the Federal Parliament is simple and easy. The calling (of the House) is the corollary of the remedial order-in-council which was adopted Thursday. If this Ministerial order had been a simple invitation to the Legislature to consider the judgment of the Imperial Privy Council it is probable that dissolution would have taken the place of a session. The clearly remedial order addressed to the Legislature of Winnipeg makes every kind of pretext for delay disappear.

THE C P R AND THE NORTHWEST SETTLER

One of the indictments upon which our worthy contemporary arraigns the Liberal party is that of opposing the conditions upon which the C.P.R. was carried through, as it were, on the shoulders of the nation. It is the settlers in the North West who, now that they have had time to practically test the results, are best able to speak on the subject. In the statement of the Calgary Board of Trade before the Freight Rates Commission is the following;

"Without boasting, we have a country

THE MARKET FEES REMAIN

The deputation consisting of the mayor, Ald. Yeomans and L. H. Henderson, that went to Toronto to interview the Government regarding the proposed bill to abolish market fees, returned this morning and herald the good news that they were entirely successful in their mission.

They appeared before the municipal committee of the Legislature and presented their petition. They represented that the city had made a satisfactory arrangement with the county council 2 years ago, submitted the farmers' statement that they were satisfied and showed that proper accomodation was afforded both winter and summer. This satisfied the committee.

DID HE HAVE A SECOND BAR.

Michael Fitzgerald Accused of a Technical Violation of the Liquor Law

Michael Fitzgerald, hotel keeper of Tyendinaga, appeared before Judge Lazier this morning on a charge of keeping a second bar in his house. If there was any offence of the law it was technical than actual. At a ball held in the house some time ago a temporary bar was rigged up in the ball room whence soft drinks were dispensed. This was the basis of the charge The case this morning was enlarged to hear argument as to what constitutes a second bar as the law says there is to be only one in a hotel. C. D. Macaulay appeared for the defence and P. J. M. Anderson was County Crown Attorney for the prosecution.

TRENTON NOTES

A hockey match was played Tuesday night between the Mutes of Belleville and Trenton, which resulted in a victory for the Trenton club. During the first half of the match it looked as if the score of the mutes would be nil, but during the last half they managed to get four goals. Thus another victory was added to Trenton's long list.—The Masonic Lodge A.F and A.M. No. 38 had a visit last night from D.D.G.M. TEACHERS AND STUDENTS

Rev Mr Roberts' Class at Albert College Acknowledges his Services

Yesterday the Albert conference students presented Rev. E. Roberts, pastor of the Tabernacle, with an arm chair and the following address expressive of their esteem and appreciation of his work amongst them.

The matter was a complete surprise to him but he replied in a few words that he had found his work a pleasure and had nothing but good wishes for every member in the class.

Dr. Dyer who was present also made a few remarks. He was much gratified to see this evidence of the kindly spirit existing between the students and Mr. Roberts.

Following is the address:—

Dear Mr. Roberts,—

We, the members of the Conference Preliminary Class of '94-95, desire to express to you our sincere thanks for the thorough and painstaking manner in which you have directed our studies in the department under your charge.

While we do not, in the least, undervalue the textual and doctrinal instruction you have so faithfully given, we yet consider that as but a small part of the help we have received from your meeting with us. The friendly advice and Godly counsel which we have ever found freely interspersed throughout your teachings, has made this part of our college work one of unmixed pleasure, and of very great profit and we assure you that the catechism class will ever remain in our memories as one of the most pleasant reminiscences of our term at Albert.

We feel the more indebted to you from the knowledge that your faithful keeping of your appointment one hour every week with the class, must, at times, have been a matter of no little effort and sacrifice to one having so many demands upon his time.

We ask you to accept this arm chair, not as an equivalent for all or any of your painstaking efforts on our behalf,—that it cannot be,—but simply as a work of our respect and esteem, and we would add too, if we may, of our affection.

It is our sincere wish and earnest prayer that the all-wise Father will long spare you to active work of our Methodist ministry, in which you have already spent so many useful years, and to which we too are looking forward, if the Divine Head of the church can see in us fit vessels for His service.

Signed on behalf of the class,
J. M. Whyte,
Jno. W. Worrall,
W. C. Schlichter,
T. A. Steadman,

WORST KIND OF DYSPEPSIA

GENTLEMEN,—I write to inform you that for years I had been troubled with Dyspepsia, and having tried other medicines which entirely failed, I at last found relief and cure in Burdock Blood Bitters, of which I took two bottles, the result being a perfect cure. Although only a young lad I had been troubled with Dyspepsia for four or five years, but I can say now that B.B.B. does its work faithfully in the worst kind of Dyspepsia, and has proved itself the only cure for me.

A TORONTO LADY 70 YEARS OLD

Speaks About Paine's Celery Compound.

Ten Years a Sufferer From Kidney Complaint, Piles and Heart Disease.

Mrs. M. J. Wales, of 272 Gerrard Street, Toronto, was wonderfully saved from death by the use of Paine's Celery Compound. For ten years she was a martyr to some of the most dangerous diseases that are now so prevalent in Canada.

Kidney complaint, piles and heart disease were fast dragging Mrs Wales to the grave. The treatment of physicians, and the medicines usually prescribed for those terrible troubles, were of no avail. Hope was almost gone when Paine's Celery Compound was urgently recommended. The marvellous life-giving medicine was used, and another victory was added to the thousands already won by the medicine that never fails to "make people well.

Mrs. Wales writes as follows:—

"I consider it a duty to tell what Paine's Celery Compound has done for me. I am now seventy years of age, and for ten years have been a sufferer from kidney disease, piles and heart trouble. I had tried everything that doctors could prescribe but never was relieved until I used Paine's Celery Compound. All pains have left me and I now sleep well—a blessing I had not enjoyed for years.

"No one should be without Paine's Celery Compound when they are weak and sick; there is nothing else as good. If people would always keep a bottle of the Compound near them, we would hear of fewer deaths from heart disease

TWO OPERATIONS.

BOTH FAILURES

A Case of Kidney Complaint that Would Not Yield to Surgery or Medicine until B. B. B. Was Tried.

GENTLEMEN,—After having undergone two operations for Kidney Complaint without securing the least relief, and hearing of some remarkable cures made by B. B. B. in our neighborhood, I decided to try it. I was given up by the doctors after the operations failed, and it was providential that I heard of B. B. B. After the use of six bottles I experienced so great relief and so great a change for the better that I felt the good effects would be lasting, as indeed they have been. The seventh bottle perfectly cured me, and I am now stronger and better than I ever was before. People who saw me before I took B. B. B. and who see me now can scarcely believe that I am the same person.

The reader can scarcely conceive of greater hardships in life than the people who inhabit the Arctic coast of Alaska endure. Life is to them a serious struggle. Their faces tell it. Women 20 years of age show that they have borne exposure and hardships which have already made them prematurely old.

The farther south of the Arctic circle they live the less they have to endure, as the struggle to maintain existence is less of a strain and effort, and the cold is not so deadly in its work.

All the drudgery in life is done by the women, and the growing girls get their share assigned to them quite early enough. Not infrequently by the time a girl is 16 years old she is a mother. Scarcely one child out of five survives and grows up, and it is not uncommon in winter for both child and mother to be frozen to death.

In hunting expeditions the women carry the burdens and do the other hard work; in whaling they cut up the blubber, drag it to the settlement with the aid of dogs and stow it down in caches, and in the daily routine of life the hard work is practically all theirs.

They are devoted to their children, in fact to all children, never scolding or punishing them, and if a woman sees a child in trouble she will go at once to its relief. Children who do live are carefully reared and devotedly cared for.

In case of a shortage of food supply of the settlement the women are the first to be turned out to die, and they accept their lot without complaint, willingly leaving to their husbands and children whatever chances of living there may be in the small allowance of food at hand.—New York Journal.

Obliterate the Scrub.

If every farmer would determine to obliterate the scrub, and use better stock, the wealth of the country would be doubled in a few years. Nothing destroys progress on the farm so much as the expensive scrub. Many farmers have worked hard for many years, supporting scrubs, when to day they might be enjoying prosperity if they had long ago used only pure-bred stock. They have saved the small cost necessary to procure pure breeds, and paid an annual tax to the scrub every year, greater than the cost of improvement.

COVERED WITH PIMPLES.

AN ANXIOUS MAN

The Disease Disappears in Three Weeks by the use of B. B. B—Letter From Manitoba Fully Describing It.

DEAR SIRS—During the winter of 1892-93, I was covered with pimples on the inside of my right leg between the knee and the ankle. As I never had anything of the kind before I was anxious about it, and sought medical advice, but getting no relief from the doctor I tried a bottle of B. B. B., applying some of it to my leg as well as using it internally, and to my surprise the nasty disease, whatever it was, disappeared within three weeks, and I am thankful to say it has never re-appeared.

TORONTO, March 1.—Among the thousands of orders which weekly pour into the offices of the Dodd's Medicine Co. Ltd., in this city, are many from Austria, Great Britain, Germany, and other countries. The curative properties of Dodd's Kidney Pills in cases of Bright's disease and concomitant ailments have been brought to the attention of friends abroad by patients who were cured here, they in turn have called the attention of their acquaintances to the marvellous effects resultant from the use of the pills until now there is a steady and growing demand for the specific and each foreign mail exhibits an increase in he orders.

Yellow as a guinea.—The complexion, in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick headache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURE which is a most an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels there after to become regular. High professional a notion has been accorded to it: and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00, Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-smile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich it, every bodily function fags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, its contamination by bile, or other causes, serious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery

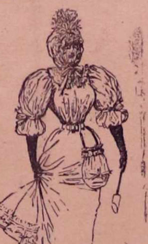
THE BATTLE OF FLOWERS.

A Picturesque Sight at the Carnival of Nice—A Parisian Costume.

The "Battle of Flowers" is far and away the most picturesque sight connected with the carnival. It takes place on the Promenade des Anglais—the Marine Parade of Nice. Each side of the road is crowded with spectators, the many headed standing on the footpath, while the well-to do look down from the covered stands or tribunes which the local Council erects at short intervals along all the principal streets. The battle is fought on primitive but effective lines. Each carriage is filled with flowers—roses, hyacinths, violets and carnations chiefly—and the moment another vehicle ventures within shooting distance its occupants are pelted with a shower of floral ammunition.



COSTUME FOR THE BATTLE OF CONFETTI.

Of generalship there is none: each man is a leader unto himself; when he sees a face he throws flowers at it. In and out among the carriages run scores of boys employed by the flower merchants to gather up the fallen nosegays and make fresh basketfuls of them.

"The "Battle of Confetti" is of a somewhat rougher character. The confetti are small balls of plaster—they used to be sugar plums—thrown indiscriminately against anyone who happens to be standing near. The fighters are well masked to prevent the white dust getting into their eyes and mouths, but the battle sometimes becomes so fast and furious that this precaution is of little use.

MANHOOD SUFFRAGE EXTENDED.

The Registration Act Made Applicable To Towns As Well As Cities—Gambling At Fairs To Be Suppressed—Treating At Elections.

Toronto, April 5.—The session of the Local Legislature yesterday was as uninteresting as Wednesday's was interesting. The business was purely routine, the greater portion of the time being taken up with the consideration in committee of the whole House of Government bills. At the evening session, which lasted until midnight, the galleries were crowded with visitors.

Hon. Mr. Ross introduced a bill to amend the Manhood Suffrage Registration Act. It extends the provisions of the act to all towns as well as cities. Members of the permanent militia corps are entitled to registration on furnishing evidence that they are entitled to registration, under the Dominion Franchise Act. Students in attendance at any university, college or school, situated in any city or town to which the act applies, are enabled to register and entitled to vote in any such city or town on condition that they have no other fixed place of abode and do not possess the qualifications of other classes of voters. In county towns the Board of Registrars is to consist of the county judge, the police magistrate and the clerk of the county court. In all other towns the police magistrate, the town clerk and the clerk of the division court are to constitute the board. The term "mariner" is construed to mean persons employed on any steamboat or sailing vessel during the period of navigation.

The Government bill to consolidate and amend the Agriculture and Arts Act occupied the attention of the House for a couple of hours in committee. At the request of Mr. Dryden the clause giving fair associations the option of prohibiting gambling, theatrical, circus and mountebank performances within fair grounds was allowed to stand with a view of considering the advisability of making a more stringent provision with regard to gambling.

With regard to the section prohibiting horse racing during the days for holding any district or township exhibition within five miles of the exhibition, Mr. Awrey said trials of speed took place at agricultural shows, and he contended that if these were prohibited it would break up three-fourths of the shows in the province. Mr. Haycock vehemently declared that if agricultural shows depended on horse racing the sooner they were destroyed the better for the community. (Cries of "Oh, oh!")

The clause was amended by excluding from the prohibition trials of speed, under the direction and control of officers of the association.

Progress was reported before the whole of the clauses had been considered.

Hon. Mr. Hardy's bill respecting the election laws was considered in Committee of the Whole. An amendment was added making it clear that in any election trial, where treating forms one of the charges, it will not be an answer to that charge to say that the respondent was in the habit of treating. It will be remembered that a point of this nature was raised in the West Wellington case, where Mr. Tucker was unseated.

The total number of immigrants reported to the Immigration Department as having settled in Ontario last year was 5968, a decrease of 603 as compared with 1893 and of 1803 as compared with 1892.

The total expenditure in 1894 on account of immigration was $8140, as against $6974 in 1893.

Mr. Awrey's bill to amend the Assessment Act was passed by the Municipal Committee, with amendments. As reported by the committee the bill makes it compulsory that cities as well as towns and villages shall assess as farm lands blocks of not less than five acres within the municipal limits. The lands must pay the local rates for the repair of sidewalks or sewers while being exempt, or partly exempt, from other local rates.

The Government yesterday received a large deputation of leading financial, railway and other interested parties, who asked aid for the Ontario and Rainy River Railway. They wanted $5000 per mile for the 105 miles that remain to complete the present road to Rainy Lake; and also asked the Government to guarantee a three and one-half per cent. dividend upon the bonds of the company for 20 years. The Ministers promised to consider the matter.

A deputation from the York County Council asked the Government to allow the re-introduction of the bill allowing municipalities who desire to bonus the extension of the Metropolitan Railway 30 instead of 20 years in which to pay the debentures which they may issue.

OIL IN ESSEX COUNTY.

Boring For Gas and Oil on Pelee Island and Near Kingsville—Prospects of Success.

Kingsville, Ont., April 5.—The Pelee Gas and Oil Company have closed a contract for putting down a well on Pelee Island. They will commence boring in a few days. The prospects for oil on the island are good. This company has over half the island leased and will develop it thoroughly. The Essex Standard Oil and Gas Company will also commence boring for gas or oil on the lake shore, about four miles east of this town, in a week or two. This company is leasing heavily at and near Comber on the Michigan Central. The prospects for oil on the outskirts of the gas belt in this vicinity are good, according to experts, and before many weeks there will be some interesting oil and gas news from here.

$30,000 Fire in Goderich.

Goderich, Ont., April 4.—A fire this morning destroyed the Grand Opera House, the general store of C. G. Armstrong, with milliner's stores adjoining, and the book and stationery store of D. B. Calbick. The drygoods store of James Robinson was completely gutted, the larger portion of the goods having, however, been removed. The total loss will be about $30,000. The loss is only covered partly by insurance, so far as Armstrong & Co., James Robinson and George Acheson, the proprietor of the block, are concerned. D. B. Calbick has no insurance. Mr. Calbick fell through a trap-door in his cellar and sustained severe injuries.

PLAIN BRITISH TALK.

England Can Settle Her Trouble With Venezuela.

NO U.S. INTERFERENCE ALLOWED

Washington, April 4.—Great Britain will not tolerate any interference by the United States in the boundary dispute with Venezuela. This is the reply of the British Foreign Office to Ambassador Bayard's representation of the desire to bring about a settlement of the boundary dispute by arbitration.

It is understood that the British Government informed Ambassador Bayard that it would insist upon the boundary line surveyed in 1881 by Sir Robert Schomberg, and would not submit to arbitration in any form that would bring that line into question.

It is claimed on behalf of Venezuela that the British position practically amounts to a declaration that if Venezuela will admit the claim of Great Britain to all the territory on the British side of the Schomberg line, arbitration may be resorted to to determine whether still more territory shall not be taken by Great Britain.

The United States Government has practically made the cause of Venezuela her own.

A great deal will now depend upon the action of the two Governments in the disputed territory. Both Venezuela and Great Britain have established small outposts along the Guyuni River, which flows through the centre of the territory in controversy. These outposts overlap each other, some of those established by Venezuela being nearer to the territory which is admittedly British than are some of the British outposts. It will be seen that the situation is such that a hostile clash might be brought on at any time, and if Great Britain should follow up her insistence on the Schomburg line by an attempt to expel the Venezuelan soldiers, it would bring matters to a crisis at once.

The forcible occupation of the disputed territory by Great Britain would make it necessary for the administration to determine upon a definite policy at once and either abandon Venezuela to her fate or follow up the moral aid which she has extended her by forcibly upholding her side of the controversy. If the Monroe doctrine is carried by the President and Secretary Gresham to the extent which many prominent Democrats are urging upon the administration, it will practically amount to the United States taking the stand that not only are the European nations precluded from acquiring territory which is admittedly the property of an American nation, but that disputed boundari lines, where European interests are involved, can only be settled by arbitration which is satisfactory to the United States.

On acount of the action of Congress in this matter, President Cleveland and Secretary Gresham may feel warranted in carrying their oppositon to Great Britain farther than they otherwise would, and if Great Britain insists upon the withdrawal of the Venezuelan outposts along the Guyini River, there is little reason to doubt that the United States will make a naval demonstration in force along the Venezuelan coast, and it is possible that interference might be carried so far as to give actual assistance to Venezuela in resisting the forcible occupation of the disputed territory by Great Britain.

The situation is very grave and is giving the administration a great deal of concern, though it is hoped that before matters are carried to the extreme the diplomatic negotiations between the United States and Great Britain may lead to an amicable settlement. It is held in Washington that Great Britain would be very reluctant to come to an open rupture with the United States, on account of the disturbance which would result, and it is held that while the relations between the two countries might become very much strained a satisfactory settlement will be reached in the end.

Should occasion arise for a display of force in Venezuelan waters, Rear Admiral Meade's squadron, now in the West Indies, could be ordered there at once.

CONTROL OF THE ORINOCO RIVER

This the Alleged Goal of the British Government.

St. Paul, Minn., April 4.—William Fisher, formerly of St. Paul, one of the men to whom the Venezuelan Government made large concessions along the Orinoco River, arrived home from Venezuela to-day. He said:

"This country is not particularly interested in any ordinary dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela, but it should be amply interested when Great Britain tries to steal from that little republic enough territory to give it control of the navigation of the Orinoco. If the people of this country could be brought to understand what the Orinoco is and what sort of valuable timber and crop country it drains, the State Department at Washington would step in and say to Great Britain: 'We are interested here,' simply because Great Britain is endeavoring to secure a monopoly of a valuable waterway."

BRITISH LOSSES HEAVY.

Umra Khan Captured Two Officers in the Fight in the Chitral

Calcutta, April 4.—In the fight at Melandri Pass on March 3 the loss to the British Chitral expedition was three killed and 50 wounded. The enemy lost 500 killed.

It is reported from Simla that the Chitral expedition sustained losses more severe than was at first reported. Umra Khan is reported to have captured two British officers. Hundreds of natives are flocking to his standard. All of the reported casualties to the British force refer to the second brigade. The other brigade has not been heard from.

Representative Donovan has introduced a bill in the Michigan Legislature to require railroad companies operating in that State to issue mileage books which shall be good on all roads in the State, and shall also be redeemable and interchangeable.

THE TERMS OF UNION

Will Be Submitted to Newfoundland Before Publication

NO INSOLVENCY BILL THIS SEASON

The Union Conferences To Be Private—Judge Winter's Memorandum of 1886 the Basis of Discussion—The Question of Representation of the Colony in Parliament.

Ottawa, April 5.—There is not much prospect of definite news from day to day as to the progress of the union negotiations with the Newfoundland delegates, as yesterday it was decided that the meetings should be private, and the visitors stipulated that nothing should be divulged until they had had an opportunity of presenting to their Legislature such conclusions as might be arrived at.

The first conference was held this morning in the Premier's office. Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir Adolphe Caron, Hon. John Haggart and Hon. George E. Foster were present representing the Dominion. Four delegates, Hon. Messrs. Bond, Morris, Emerson and Horwood, were in attendance for Newfoundland. The business transacted was purely of a formal character. Sir Mackenzie Bowell was, on motion of Mr. Bond, appointed president of the conference, and John L. Payne, the Premier's private secretary, was made secretary. The hours for holding the meetings were then arranged. It was decided to meet from 10 a.m. to 12.30 p.m., and from 3 to 5 p.m. A statement of the affairs of the colony was then asked for, particularly as regards the financial obligations of Newfoundland. This will be presented at a meeting to be held to-morrow forenoon.

It was thought that an agreement would be reached to take the resolutions passed by the Dominion Parliament, June 10, 1869, embodying an agreement between Newfoundland delegates and Canada and afterwards defeated in Newfoundland as the basis of discussion, but after some conversation it was decided to consider a memorandum submitted to the Dominion Government by Sir James Winter, present Chief Justice of Newfoundland, when here in 1886.

One of the principal questions for consideration will be the financial one. Then, there is the question of communication between the island and the mainland, as well as the representation which the colony will be entitled to in the Dominion Parliament. Besides the allowance of 80 cents per head of population to which each province is entitled, there are special subsidies to be considered, as well as the calculation of the amount of the debt for which Newfoundland will in comparison with the existing provinces be entitled to be allowed.

The proposed ferry and connection with the Mother Country will no doubt occupy considerable time.

Under the British North America Act the colony of Newfoundland, should it enter confederation, is to be entitled to four senators. It is open to discussion how this ought to be amended, in view of the growth of the colony since this act was passed. Touching the representation of Newfoundland in the House of Commons, the unit of representation of Quebec, the pivotal province, is 22,900. By dividing this into the population of Newfoundland, which is put at 202,060, it will be apparent that on that basis, the new province, should Newfoundland become such, will be entitled to nine members. This would make the membership of the next House of Commons 222.

All these matters, and many minor details, have to be considered by the conference, so that its work will occupy several days. At the conclusion of each day the secretary will draw up protocols which, when approved by both delegations, will be placed on record.

The Ottawa civic banquet to the visitors will take place next Tuesday.

Apropos of the visit of the Newfoundland delegation it appears that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is the only member of the Government who has visited the Ancient Colony. Several years ago, before the railway route from St. John's had been mapped out, Mr. Costigan made a journey far into the then unknown interior of Newfoundland. His course lay through Exploit's Valley; the Minister penetrated the wilderness westward, partly overland and partly by canoe on the Exploit River. He has also a practical knowledge of the fishery resources of Newfoundland and Labrador waters. The railway, which traverses the greater portion of the island, is being constructed by Mr. W. G. Reid, who with Mr. James Isbester of this city built the eastern section of Cape Breton Railway.

It is stated that the Government will not re-introduce the Insolvency Bill at the coming session of Parliament. Many members do not want such a measure at all; while the general desire for a short session will preclude the possibility of that careful consideration which is necessary in a bill of such magnitude.

As announced some time ago there will be no tolls charged for passage of vessels through the Canadian "Soo" Canal. A formal order in council to the foregoing effect has just been passed. It reads: "All vessels and freight shall be permitted to pass through Sault Ste. Marie Canal free of tolls, upon such vessels and freight, until otherwise ordered."

Vessels paying toll through the Welland Canal will be free of tolls for St. Lawrence Canals and vice versa.

Another order in council fixes the rates on grain passing through the Welland and St. Lawrence Canals at 10 cents per ton, same as last season. New rules and regulations for the management, maintenance, proper use and protection of Canadian canals have just been agreed to.

Mr. D. Pottinger, general manager of the Intercolonial Railway, is in the city. Speaking to your correspondent he said that traffic on that road was only light at present, but with the opening of spring he expected that there would be an improvement. Although there had been a heavy fall of snow in Nova Scotia this winter, little difficulty had been experienced in running trains.

Mr. Andrew Onderdonk is commencing operations on the Trent Canal contract this week. Several of his foremen are already on the ground. Mr. R. B. Rogers, Government Engineer for the canal, who has been here for two days, left for Peterboro to-night.

According to a report received at the Inland Revenue Department from Mr. Gibbs, the Dominion Grain Inspector at Port Arthur, there is less than half the amount of wheat in store at that point now than in previous winters, owing to heavy shipping which took place immediately after harvest last season.

The city of Buenos Ayres has the largest street car system, in proportion to its population, of any city in the world. The total number of passengers carried last year was 71,345,564, while the monthly average was 5,955,547.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelee's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal."

For Over Fifty Years

AN OLD AND WELL-TRIED REMEDY.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by Druggists in every part of the World. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

"BEEF IS DEARER"

Once upon a time a man whose height could not, by any taking of thought, be reckoned at over five feet ten inches, became desirous above all things else to be of the stature of six feet. To this end he started out to tip-toe it through life. He cut of course a most ridiculous figure but the streets of his city not being paved with mirrors, and the buildings being of ordinary brick and mortar, he was undisturbed by appearances and his pride and egotism was a sufficient shield against the scoffs of those whose ambitions soared lower. But pride was of little avail in sustaining the muscles, strained by the unnatural tension and occasionally he would get down on his heels.

This is the attitude of the Tory press in straining after the imaginary benefits of "protection," and occasionally they will get down and walk flatfooted as nature intended. The Mail and Empire succumbed yesterday and left a full natural footprint to indicate its momentarily sane period. We refer to an article under the caption "Beef is dearer," dealing with the rise in the market and the causes thereof—and not a suggestion of protection or any other unnatural cause, but simply a question of supply and demand in the world markets. Touching the matter of the early opening of the season by reason of the permission to ship Canadian cattle through American territory to Portland it is worth noticing that had the Canadian Government done its duty in the first place that privilege would not have been lost and therefore would not have had to be regained. But read the article:

Canadian farmers will like the opening note of this season's export cattle market. An advance, scaling from a half cent to a cent a pound, according to quality, has developed in London and Liverpool. If this holds, it will add from five to fourteen dollars a head to the value of shipping cattle, and fully $250 to the value of a carload of the finest stock. Present conditions favor the expectation that it will hold. In fact, it looks as if cattle could not be got for less money. Before the British advance the price had gone up in the United States. In Chicago it has been creeping up since the latter part of February. The cause is a scarcity of cattle. In Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, and Kansas the supply is estimated to be only 60 per cent, of what it was last year. At all the shipping centres of the West the supply is, and for weeks has been, meagre. The price of canned beef was marked up about the middle of last month, and the packers say that the cost now warrants them in carrying it still higher. The falling off in the supply of stock is attributed to the drought of last summer. In some of the Western States cattle were literally starved to death in consequence of the drying up of pasture. Farmers were forced to slaughter lean animals to avoid their entire loss by starvation. The thinning out at that time is the cause of the shortage now. While a decline in the supply of United States cattle was foreseen, it was not expected to tone up prices materially. The great decline in the foreign demand, owing to the action of Germany, Austria, Belgium, and France in closing their ports to United States beef was expected at least to balance the shortage. But it has not done so. With prices so high in the United States it is not likely that there will be any reaction in England. It takes more than a few months to recruit the sources of supply of a commodity like beef. Cattle need a year or two to grow in. The present price therefore looks as if it would last. If it does, and Canadian farmers have animals in condition to ship, they should be able to realize the benefit of the advance at once. This year they will not have to wait until the opening of navigation. They are now free to ship by way of Portland. Already one or two lots have been forwarded by that port, and another shipment goes thence on the Labrador this week. Thus the privilege of transit through the United States is proving of immediate benefit to Canadian shippers. The Government at Ottawa is to be congratulated at having secured it. When Britain put Canadian cattle under embargo the United States did likewise. The privilege of transporting them through its territory to the seaboard was withdrawn. It is now restored. Exporters have not to wait until the ice breaks up in order to obtain shipping facilities. If they choose to seize on the present advance in England they are now in a position to do so. A year ago the price on this market was 3 1-2c. Now it is 4 1-2c., and cattle are in keen demand. In the former period, however, the season's export demand had not begun to operate on this market, and in fact did not to any material extent until May. That it is earlier this year is due to the concession of transit through the United States.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Before the ONTARIO again exposes its lack of knowledge on the sugar question, it ought to examine some wholesale grocer's samples and ask for information. —Intelligencer.

We have, and got it from a Tory too, and we would like to be around when the editor of the "Intell" takes home to his good wife for table use or for canning purposes a pound of No. 16 Dutch Standard.

The ONTARIO gives up its absurd contention that "nobody is advocating free trade," by carefully omitting any reference to Mr. Laurier's Winnipeg speech.—Intelligencer.

The "Intell" has long been looking for evidence of a Free Trade policy enunciated by Mr. Laurier, but it hasn't ventured to quote that same Winnipeg speech. Why?

WOMAN ON THE BICYCLE.

Some women deprive themselves of the pleasure of riding a bicycle on account of the awkward appearance presented by a good many feminine riders, especially those who go along with knees rising and falling laboriously. They fear that they may commit the same faults, not knowing that the ungraceful exhibition is simply the result of one thing—ignorance concerning the choice of a bicycle.

If a woman were about to mount a horse one of the first things to which she would give her attention would be to the length of the stirrup leather, which she would adjust to suit her stature, otherwise she would rise and fall in the saddle in too pronounced a manner and her appearance would be more or less unsightly. The proper adjustment of pedal and saddle in the case of the bicycle is equally important. Bicycles are made in different heights from the saddle to the pedal, namely, 21, 23, 25, 29 inches. If a woman with long legs has one of the low machines, it will be almost impossible for her to ride with grace. In choosing a bicycle a woman should test it by sitting on it while it is stationary and moving the pedal round with her foot. In this way she can ascertain if the seat is too high or too low for her.

When the pedal is at the lowest point the foot should reach it comfortably, not so as to exert full foot pressure, but with about the same pressure as the toe gives the stirrup when sitting at ease in the saddle or what it gives to the floor when in a comfortable rocker. It is not safe to have a pedal that the foot cannot control all the way round; while if the pedal does not give the leg a full stretch the result will be an ungainly jerking up of the skirts.

The length of the crank of the pedal is even more important. In length the crank varies from 7 to 5½ inches, making a difference of 3 inches in the rise and fall. As the pedal revolves it raises the foot and knee just so much at each revolution, and if the elevation is too great an appearance of awkwardness is produced. Apart from producing awkwardness, the long crank has other serious drawbacks.

If a woman gets a bicycle with the proper height of saddle and a moderately short crank, she may be a graceful rider if she will observe one rule—not to turn the knee outward, but inward, in pressing the foot down. That it is natural to turn the knee out is demonstrated by the small boy, whose knees waggle from side to side like governors on an engine, as he rides his bicycle. With a woman this action stretches the skirts to their utmost width, and causes a very bad showing from behind, and from the front. It will also be found that there is much less fatigue from the inward stroke than from the outward, as the pressure is more direct and with less friction.

There is no royal road to learning to ride the modern safety. It is largely a matter of confidence. Some women learn in an hour and others in a week. Where it is practicable, it is best to go to one of the schools and take a lesson or two from a competent instructor. If this cannot be done, the next plan is to mount the machine near a wall or board fence, where there is a slight incline, and holding the handle with one hand and fending along the wall with the other, move along until confidence is attained. The reason why the wall is advocated rather than a friend with a strong arm is that if the friend is a male he will insist on being at the side of the learner, so as to be ready to receive her in his arms when she is about to fall. The prettier the girl is the more he will adhere to this line of conduct. So long as the support is in full view the rider can see what assistance is given, and she gets rattled the moment she sees it withdrawn. The assistant should keep well to the rear and should support the rider by holding the machine so that the learner cannot tell when the supporting hand is drawn. In this way the correct balance is learned before the rider knows it.

This is the reason why so many girls taught by friends are three times as long in learning to ride as those taught in schools, and even when expert seldom have the style of the school-taught pupil. Miss Frances E. Willard, who is an enthusiastic rider, said recently that she had three teachers before she could master the wheel, and that it was only by the method last described she learned to ride. It took Lady Henry Somerset two months to learn to mount and ride, but by following the directions here given any woman should be able to learn in six lessons of twenty minutes each.

Here is a description of the latest costume for a woman to wear when bicycling. It includes a loose blouse waist and has a skirt made of some loosely webbed fabric which falls into folds of its own accord. The skirt is gored to fit very close around the hips, while from just above the knee to the bottom it is flared or widened. The hem is lightly weighted. This, it is claimed, does away with all display of the ankles and the ugly, cumbersome look from behind, which most of the proposed costumes have been found to possess in actual use. In walking it does not look unbecoming. Knickerbockers or full trousers may be worn under it or not as desired.

Given a properly fitting machine, reasonable skill, and a well-cut skirt, there is only one thing needed to make a woman ride a bicycle gracefully, and that is the limitation of speed. No woman should attempt to ride more than about eight miles an hour on asphalt, or more than six miles an hour on a macadamized road if she values her appearance. Her skirt must have time to fall and drape between the motions of the feet, and this cannot take place if a rapid action of the knees is kept up. A well-mounted woman, riding at a moderate speed, is seldom seen, but when she is met with, every one turns to look at her, and here is given the secret of her superior attractiveness. The woman should set the pace for her escort, not try to keep up with him.

The Only Question.

"Do you ever think, George, dear," she said, and her voice was soft and low as befitted the perfect beauty of the night, "how closely true happiness is allied with tears."

"I don't believe I ever do," replied George.

"Yes," she went on, looking up into his face, "when one is truly and wholly happy there is but little to divide a smile and a tear."

"That's a fact," said George, "but I never thought of it before. There's nothing but the nose."

WIVES AND SWEETHEARTS

CHAT ABOUT THE FOLKS WHO LEND LIFE ITS CHARM.

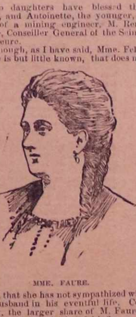
A correspondent of The Gentlewoman writes: We may say of the wife of the new President of the French Republic, "like a fortunate country, she has no history." Mme. Felix Faure was Mlle. Marie Mathilde Belluot, daughter of a solicitor, and niece of Senator Guinot, of Amboise, in the department of Indre-et-Loire. On July 10, 1865, at the age of 23 years, Mr. Belluot became Mme. Felix Faure. She was a beautiful brunette, with jet black hair and sparkling eyes.

Two daughters have blessed this union, and Antoinette, the younger, is wife of a mining engineer, M. Rene Berge, Conseiller General of the Seine-Inferieure.

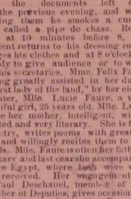
Although, as I have said, Mme. Felix Faure is but little known, that does not mean that she has not sympathized with her husband in his eventful life. Certainly, the larger share of M. Faure's success is due to the helpful influence of his wife.



MME. FAURE.

The home life of M. and Mme. Faure has always been charming. Mme. Faure is a very intelligent woman, and her wit and humor are proverbial. She does not care for the gay world, as she dearly loves her home, but she knows how to entertain with perfect grace. The naval officers who attended her receptions in the Ministry of Marine were charmed with Mme. Faure's manner as a hostess, and all who know her say that she will be an ornament to the Elysee Palace. Mme. Faure always remains in her own apartments until noon, the hour for dejeuner a la fourchette; but the President rises at 5 o'clock, and at 6 he is in his study. He then reads the documents left over from the previous evening, and while perusing them he smokes a curved pipe, called a pipe de chase. Regularly, at 10 minutes before 8, the president returns to his dressing room, changes his clothes and at 8 o'clock he is ready to give audience or to work with his secretaries. Mme. Felix Faure is being greatly assisted in her duties as "first lady of the land," by her eldest daughter, Mlle. Lucie Faure, a very beautiful girl, 25 years old. Mlle. Lucie is, like her mother, intelligent, witty, talented and very literary. She is fond of poetry, writes poems with great facility and willingly recites them to her friends. Mlle. Faure is often her father's secretary and last year she accompanied him to Egypt, where both were very well received. Her engagement to M. Paul Deschanel, member of the Chamber of Deputies, gives occasion for the following gossip in the European edition of The New York Herald: Mlle Lucie Faure, said to be dubbed by her intimate friends, "Lucifer," as a playful adaptation of her Christian and surname, is described by M. Gaston Steigler, in an article in Echo de Paris, as a young lady of great natural ability, cultivated, right-minded, fond of poetry, but by no means an enthusiast or a mystic, fond of philosophy, less naive than disabused in her view of mankind, never vulgar and quite superior in character.

Besides all the above qualifications, or, perhaps, owing to these qualifications, she has entered the field as an authoress, having published, for private circulation, a narrative of her excursion in Algeria, in company with MM. Millaud, Berthelot and Granet.



MLLE. LUCIE FAURE.

The incidents of the tour are related in interesting style; the narrative is well kept up, and diversified by bright word pictures of places and persons. There is a vein of poetry throughout, and certain observations display a serious contemplative spirit. That the young lady has a keen sense of the humorous is evident from a little incident at Sidi-Ben-Abbes, where she was seized with an immoderate fit of laughing at a solemn speech delivered by the Mayor of the town to the accompaniment of a band playing selections from "La Mascotte," her mirth being increased by the efforts of M. Etienne to restrain it.

Many incidents that occurred during the tour serve to throw a light on her character. Her remark when she saw some good-looking murderers in prison is cynical—"Nothing is so much like an honest man as a scoundrel," and not less cynical is her observation when discourteously treated at a railway refreshment room—"Civilization is a poor varnish; you only have to scratch it to turn up the same old egotism that has prevailed for six thousand years."

WARM TIMES IN HALDIMAND.

Conservatives and McCarthyites Well Organized—Manitoba Schools the Issue—A Mass Meeting To Day

Cayuga, April 4.—In this election-racked constituency there is already much excitement over the contest between Dr. Montague and the McCarthyite, whose nomination will be made on Friday. In 1891 Dr. Montague beat C. W. Colter by 78. The County of Haldimand is naturally Liberal, but the new lists will show a gain for the Conservatives.

In the coming contest the election will in all probability be fought out on other grounds than a straight Liberal and Conservative fight. On the Manitoba school question, more than on anything else, will the coming campaign be fought out. This question is in everyone's mouth, and no matter how desirous one is to keep the question out of politics, it will be impossible. The County of Haldimand contains about 200 Roman Catholic electors, and between 700 and 800 Orangemen.

The chief Liberal paper of the county says that the party which it represents will not seek to make political capital out of the matter, but it also calls for the maintenance of provincial rights.

Another despatch says: The fight has barely commenced, but the interest shown on all hands is intense. The Conservative party are well organized, and are putting forth every effort to return Dr. Montague, but the number of old-time Conservatives who express themselves as opposed to the doctor's policy makes it somewhat doubtful as to the result. As yet the Reform party has taken no action towards nominating a candidate, and it is very improbable that they will take a hand in the fight. McCarthy's organizer has been well over the ground and expects to complete organization to-day. Mr. McCarthy speaks here Friday, and if reports are correct a particularly large turnout of all political creeds may be looked for.

COLONIES AND CURRENCY.

Australia Seeks Representation at the Coming Conference.

London, April 4.—In the House of Commons to-day Mr. Sydney Buxton, Under Secretary, said that a communication had been received from the Colonial Government of Australia expressing a desire to be represented in the coming Monetary Conference. As the Government had no information that such a conference was to be held, he said the question of arranging for colonial representation had not arisen.

Arnold Morley, Postmaster-General, spoke concerning the business relations of the Government telegraph lines and the newspapers. He reiterated the statement made by him last month before the Congress of the Chambers of Commerce that the Government's annual loss upon press telegrams was £300,000. He was willing to institute an impartial enquiry, he said, if he could get the assurance that the press would abide by the result and assent to a legislative revision of the tariff.

Sir Thomas Esmonde, anti-Parnellite M.P. for the West Division of Kerry, will ask the Government on Monday whether Liliuokalani, the deposed Queen of Hawaii, is a prisoner in the barracks at Honolulu, and, if so, whether the Government will not request the Hawaiian authorities to let her reside in the palace under guard.

THE QUEEN IN GOOD HEALTH.

Her Majesty Quietly Enjoying Herself at Nice.

London, April 5.—The latest official report in regard to the Queen, received from Nice last evening, says: "The Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice, drove to Beaulieu along the Mountain road leading to La Bastide. She paid a visit to Lord and Lady Salisbury and returned to Cimiez by the way of Villefranche. In the evening Her Majesty entertained Sir Edward Malet and others at dinner. Her Majesty was in good health and spirits.

THOUGHT THE BOY HAD RABIES.

Toronto, April 5.—At yesterday's sitting of the Provincial Board of Health the case of a boy at Appin, who was bitten on March 10 by a dog supposed to be suffering from rabies, was taken up. The dog on that date took a fit, and made a two-days' circuit of the Township of Eckford, attacking every live thing he met. It refused all food, and, believing it to be mad, Medical Health Officer Hyttenranch had it shot. The boy was the only human being who was bitten, and as his parents were very poor, the township authorities were requested to pay for his treatment at the Pasteur Institute, New York. This they failed to do, but private persons raised $140 for the purpose. The cost of two weeks' treatment is $250, and the Provincial Board of Health was asked to pay the $110 additional charge. This the Board declines to do, and Secretary Bryce instructed the Pasteur Institute to send their bill to the township. The boy is still under treatment, but shows as yet no symptoms of hydrophobia.

Communications were placed before the board from Bologna and Darmstadt showing that the cost of the new anti-toxine for tetanus or lock-jaw was 90 shillings per dose. In view of this it was decided the Board could not afford to keep the medicine on hand, but decided to write to New York and ascertain if the specific could be secured at short notice in case of the necessity for its use arising.

The Board decided that in localities where a Board of Health does not exist the local Board of School Trustees should act instead.

STOLE A REGISTERED LETTER.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 5.—William J. Farr of Thorold Township was arrested last evening by Officers Griffin and Mains of the Ontario Police, charged with stealing a letter containing post-office order of $13.50 out of the Niagara Falls postoffice. The letter was addressed to one William Faro. The accused told the postmaster that the letter was intended for him. He opened it and had the order cashed. The information was laid by Postoffice Inspector Burnham of Toronto.

A Diet of Blood.

The use of blood as a curative agent is said to be on the increase in Paris, and certainly it appears that persons still resort to the abattoires every morning to partake of this nauseous form of so-called cure. Although French doctors do not often prescribe these forms of treatment, "blood-baths" are not infrequently used, and certain patent medicines are sold under the name of "poudre de sang," and other titles.

Facts About Hail.

From the Swiss meteorological records since 1883, Dr. C. Heiss finds that hail is more frequent in valleys than on mountains, that it occurs more often near marshes and in lake valleys than over wooded country, and that river valleys in the path of thunder storms favor its formation, while cultivated land and hilly forests reduce the intensity of hail storms.

BEATON LIBEL SUITS.

Mr. Osler's Speech at Wednesday's Trial.

Below we give a full report of B. B. Osler's speech at the trial of the libel suits brought by Mrs. Beaton of Burlington against The Toronto Globe, World, Central Press, St. Thomas Times, Guelph Herald, Strathroy Despatch and Stratford Herald. These cases were combined in one suit, and were tried at the Hamilton Assizes on Wednesday, resulting in a verdict for the defendants, with costs. Eighteen actions for damages for libel had been entered by Mrs. Beaton against Ontario papers, some of which were settled, $501 in all being paid. The case against The St. Thomas Journal was heard last fall, a verdict of $1 and costs being awarded Mrs. Beaton.

Mr. Osler read the sworn testimony of Mrs. Beaton and then proceeded to analyze the article which had appeared in The Globe and other papers, and which formed the basis of the action. He said that The Globe publication was from a press despatch from New York, and was founded upon an extraordinary occurrence on board the ship, and the suspicion that was aroused in New York after the enquiries had been made showing that the woman was going under a false name and showing the extraordinary way she took to go home. Suspicion was aroused in Burlington because after she got back from that trip she had for the first time a considerable sum of money to spend. The Globe article was headed "An Adventuress." An adventuress Mr. Osler defined as being a woman engaged in or capable of bold enterprises, or in enterprises of an equivocal character. She was an adventuress; the jury must find her so on her own testimony. A woman who had five different names, one of them honest, four of them dishonest, a woman who was traveling and living in adultery and lying to her husband about it; bearing a child to another man, passing as his wife, his niece, his daughter; obtaining money from him—was she an adventuress? Could the jury come to any other conclusion? Mr. Osler read the headlines of the article complained of, and pointed out that Mrs. Beaton admitted the statements contained in them. Mr. Osler proceeded paragraph by paragraph, comparing the statements therein made with the admissions of Mrs. Beaton in her examination. He quoted from the article:

"Before they had been in Norfolk many days a strange woman appeared in that city and stopped at the boarding house of Mrs. W. Smith in East Main-street. The next day she located Case, but instead of calling on him sent a note appointing a time and place for an interview. The old man called to see her, and the following day the two left the city together for a trip to North Carolina. At least that is what the old man told his daughter. He did not, however, tell her that he was going with a woman, and until the present time Mrs. Wallace is ignorant of the woman who led her father to his death."

Commenting on this paragraph, Mr. Osler said that it was said in the Good Book: "The strange woman and the path to her house leadeth unto death." That did not mean that the strange woman had killed the man who visited her, but that the path to the house of the strange woman "leadeth unto death."

"The man who wrote that paragraph," said Mr. Osler, with a smile, "although a reporter, had probably once been in Sunday school, and perhaps he had that passage in his mind."

If Case had been living with his daughter, the counsel went on, and not been taken away on that journey, he would have died of old age, in all probability. Mr. Osler argued strongly that it was the woman of 40, in the full vigor of life, and not the old man of 78, who was seeking the companionship; that she was not prompted by motives of affection, but by a desire for money. Why had Case left Burlington and gone to a distance? Was it to escape the thrall that had been cast around him? Was it to get far away from the woman who held him? Was it because the old man, with one foot in the grave, eight years past due in the other world, according to the natural span of life, eight years beyond his time, was trying to redeem his misspent moments free from the tie that was dragging him the downward way?

"So, I ask you to find," said Mr. Osler, "that these words: 'The woman who led her father to his death,' and other similar words that we find throughout the article, are not unfair, are not words that you can give this woman damages on; are not words that you can find, between this woman and the public, are libellous. In these days of swift traveling, of swift passages, of telegraph and telephone, making the world small, such a woman as this must be exposed by the public press, or the danger which is in Burlington one day is in Norfolk the next. Are these things to take place? Are such women to be a source of danger to the community, and are the papers to close their columns and fold their hands and say nothing? It is for you to say, gentlemen, are these things not to be exposed? It is for you to say that secret sins developing danger are to be glossed over with a seeming respectability and are to be washed out by the tears shed in a court room before a jury. You have to decide between private life, wicked life, and the guardians of the public—the honest press.

Mr. Osler then dealt with the statements regarding the death of Mrs. Beaton's child, which were:

"Between the 20th and 30th of February Mrs. Beaton returned to Burlington, bringing with her the dead body of her infant, which she claimed had died in Michigan. This aroused suspicion, it was suspected that the woman had found the child in her way, and had got rid of it. The baby, a boy, was in robust health when she left Claremont with it."

Commenting upon this, Mr. Osler reminded the jury that as a result of The New York World's inquiries that paper had simply stated that the circumstance had aroused suspicion in Burlington. He asked the jury to find libel or no libel according as The Globe had treated the woman fairly or not on this point. On August 8 The Globe had published the following:

"It will be unsatisfactory if the questions raised by The New York World's charges against Mrs. Beaton are allowed to remain unsettled. If they are true the woman ought not to be at liberty; if untrue she is suffering a grievous wrong so long as these terrible accusations are hanging over her. In either case there is a failure of justice until the charges are either proved or withdrawn. The statement that the child died from other than natural causes seems to rest wholly upon surmise, while the other charges depend upon the identification of Mrs. Beaton with the woman who was seen upon the vessel from which Case was drowned. Even with positive identification, it would require other evidence than has yet been adduced to show that Case came to his death at the hands of his fellow-passenger. Certainly the matter ought to be cleared up one way or the other. The accusations are too serious to remain merely a subject for idle gossip and conjecture."

The Globe had come out in a manly and straightforward way and had said that the suspicions to which The New York World had referred rested wholly on surmise. It had said that the public must not believe these charges against the woman until the matter was cleared up. The Globe had acted in a fair and judicial spirit. Not only had The Globe done Mrs. Beaton justice, but it had done her more than justice, having regard to the facts that she now deposed to. The Globe had criticised the evidence that had been presented and had said to the public: "You must not condemn this woman upon suspicion." It had given her story, the story that apparently was now untrue, but nevertheless had given her the benefit of what she had said, and had asked the public to suspend judgment upon it. She complained that The Globe had not cleared it up. How could The Globe clear it up when she was denying the very fact that she was on the ship at all? The position she had taken was that it was a case of mistaken identity. She had said that she only knew Case as a strict and religious man. How could the truth get out when she was concealing it? How could she expect The Globe or anybody else to clear up a story when she was doing all she could to prevent its being cleared up by the false accounts she was giving? Could she ask that the public should say nothing when she, posing as a virtuous married woman in Burlington, was on that ship avowedly for the purpose of adultery with the man who died under most extraordinary circumstances; when she had given in the morning a false name and a false address for Case, a false name for herself, a false relationship, when she had taken a fraudulent journey to avoid being traced, when she had bought a ticket for herself through to Norfolk, when she had got her trunk out of the baggage car at a suburb of Baltimore, when she had thrown away her ticket which she had paid money for, when she never intended to go to Norfolk, when she intended upon leaving New York to come to Hamilton? She had doubled back upon her tracks, left her route, changed her ticket, crossed through Pennsylvania and had come to Hamilton. Why? Was it because she was Malcolm Beaton's honest wife? Was it because she had a character to maintain? Was it not fleeing from the suspicion that surrounded her, on however little that suspicion was founded? The newspapers had not said any more than the facts, they had not come to any conclusion. The facts they had stated were the facts Mrs. Beaton now stated. If she wanted a justification for her character why had she not sought it from the Hamilton press? One would suppose that if a person living in Hamilton wanted, not to make money, but to get redress for her wrong, she would have called on the papers close by. Why did she spread the writs all over Ontario? Was it because she knew that these editors would rather pay than go a long distance from home and fight an expensive suit? Was this to vindicate character, or was it utilizing the law which protected people's characters to make large money out of the newspaper men?

"You know," said Mr. Osler, "newspaper men carry on a pretty close business. You know there is not much profit in the newspaper business; you know what service the newspapers do to the country; you know, although many of you, I dare say, differ in politics from it, what a reliable, healthy, proper newspaper The Globe is. I am not asking you to point to the editorials at all, for not one man in ten reads editorials, but take it as a newspaper, it is an honest newspaper, fair and clean, and fit to be admitted into anybody's family? It is a credit to the province; it is published more with regard to the public than diligence to the shareholders? Is it not entitled to reasonable justice at your hands? Is this sort of thing to be concealed, to be kept quiet? If this woman is an adventuress, or is not satisfied with one man, is she dangerous to the community? Should the community know of it? Did The Globe use her fairly in the subsequent articles? Take these subsequent articles and read them with the original article. Don't consider this case under the impression that by your conclusion the woman may be charged with murder. I ask you to say, exercising your function as jurymen, judges of law in fact, that there was no libel; I ask you to say that substantially we have shown this woman to have brought the circumstances of suspicion upon herself. We do not charge her guilt. She may be only a weak and fallen woman, the adulteress who has repented; but the circumstances, where are they? If people surround themselves with the false, if people say that which is untrue, if people live double lives, they cannot complain if the suspicions that are aroused are expressed. They cannot complain if the public say, 'You tell 20 lies, we hardly believe you when you are telling the truth.' I leave the case with you, gentlemen."

Mr. Staunton, in his address, said that it was from the beginning that the woman was the sinner, and the man always condemned the woman. Had the jury ever seen a man condemned and destroyed because he was an adulterer? Had they ever seen The Globe, the greatest and most reputable paper in Canada, before condemn a woman for adultery? No. There was a law for the rich and a law for the poor. The defence had relied upon the power of a great counsel. Mr. Osler had said that The Globe had copied the article containing the statements complained of, whereas The Globe had gone to the expense of having it telegraphed from New York that it might be the first to spread the story. The sum and substance of the defence was that the allegations in the article were true. It was true that the woman had been living in immoral relations with Case. She was the wife of a poor laborer living in repute in the village of Burlington, and the man had used his money to get possession of the woman. She did did not "chase" him, but Case had induced her to take the trips to Norfolk. It might be thought that human nature was different in a woman whom the newspapers and an eloquent counsel had tried to make out a murderess and a demon, but he asked the jury to decide the case according to the evidence. They should forgive the sin of the weak.

New Zealand and Canada.

London, April 5.—The United Press correspondent learns upon good authority that New Zealand is willing to negotiate a commercial treaty with Canada.

HOW WOMEN WORK.

"It will occur to impartial observers that if women are not as persistent in business as men it is because they regard business as a possible stepping stone to something better and higher, while to a man it is the end and aim of existence. A man starts in life as lawyer, merchant, doctor, architect, clerk or what not; if he be a serious person all his soul is consecrated on the effort to succeed in his calling, and social life, political ambition, even love, are side issues, because he sees no hope for future ease and comfort except by means of that calling. A woman, on the other hand, has always two strings to her bow. Success in the employment at remunerative pay, which probably increases with the years, but, until she grows too old to consider matrimony among the possibilities of life, she never loses sight of the chance that a man may pass her way whom she could love and who could make her a happy wife. Thus with her there is no concentration of potential energy on a single object, but always a withholding from her labors of a reserve force which is only called into play when the man appears on the horizon. There are women whose toil is at least as unceasing as that of men—wives who get up early to light the fire and cook breakfast for themselves and their husbands, who despatch the children to school with washed faces, hurry down to the desk where their business is conducted, toil over figures all day, and when night falls drag their weary legs home to cook the family dinner. Such women work as hard as men and exhibit a persistency more enduring than the average man can boast of. But they are probably exceptions.

The average shop girl, saleswoman, milliner, typewriter, bookkeeper or cashier of the female sex is often lacking in concentration and absorbing devotion to her work. Other concerns flit across her mind like light clouds skimming the surface of her sky. She thinks of her dress, and whether she can afford a new hat; of a girl with whom she is intimate and whom she secretly hates; of a man whom she has met, of what he said and what he meant; of a party to which she had been invited and of the prospect of her having a good time there. For the moment these topics of thought divert her mind from the business in which she is engaged, and consume some share of her energy. A young man of the same age, unless he is a poor thing, never allows matters of this kind to intervene between him and his business; he is trained to consider them after business hours.—San Francisco Argonaut.

This Dog Knows Money.

"A man named Harrison in Sioux City, has a setter dog that is a pretty valuable animal, and a good many people in Iowa would be willing to pay a good, stiff price for him," said W. W. McCann, of Des Moines.

"He has brought his master on several occasions money he has found in the street, and quite recently he came in with tail wagging proudly and a pocketbook with over $200 in it held in his mouth. Shot—which is his name—seems to be as familiar with the worth of articles he may happen to come across in his skirmishes around town as any human being, and it is the result of early training. His owner, when the dog was a puppy, patiently taught him to retrieve various articles, and frequently used bills and coin in this practice. In this way, probably, the animal learned to distinguish the peculiar scent of money, for it has an aroma that is acquired from being carried on the person. But no matter what the secret is, Shot is a lucky dog in every sense of the word, for he never comes across money that he does not eagerly pick it up and race home with it. And he'll bring lots of other things that evidently appear to him as useful. If there is an old cast-off hat in his course he'll carry it to Harrison, and old rags or clothing are as dutifully taken the same way. He's an excellent field dog also, but has never been known to retrieve a bird. So Shot is a sort of canine paradox in his run-and-fetch qualities."—Washington Star.

France and Germany.

Fortunately for Europe, the relations between France and Germany are becoming more friendly as the years pass by. No better proof of this has been given recently than the reception accorded to the article of Anatole Leroy Beaulieu, the well-known French writer, in one of the Paris reviews. M. Beaulieu declares that there is no hatred for the Germans in the breasts of the young Frenchmen of to-day. He advises them to form associations for the study of the German language and literature, and declares that of all the nations in Europe, Germany, so far as advanced knowledge is concerned, is most worthy of their attention. A few years ago it would have taken a brave man to give voice to these sentiments. With that we would not say that M. Beaulieu is not brave; but the day is past when the expression of such opinions is dangerous. The author's suggestions have been discussed dispassionately, and many commentators have praised them. This is a happy result for the lovers of peace—and the inhabitants of Alsace-Lorraine.—New York Tribune.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES
No More Misery.
ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.
DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT
PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause than Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

SERO WAS DEFEATED

The Strong Young Man From Belleville was Not in it with the Kingstonian

(Whig.)

While some features of the entertainment in the opera house last night were what a certain Wolfe Islander would call "a colossal fake and gigantic hypodrome," there were also exhibitions that were good and satisfactory to look upon. Fred Sero, the strong man from Belleville, was not what was looked forward to and gave as an excuse that he had only a couple of weeks in which to train. The audience was a fair one and Carey was loudly applauded by his friends as he outstripped the Bellevillian at almost every point.

The men first did the ordinary exercise, and each put up a 56lb dumb bell with their little finger. The next feat was raising a 92 lb. bell with the third finger. Carey put the bell up three times, but Sero failed to get it above his waist. In the back lift, on which Louis Cyr made such a hit, Carey put nine men and several heavy cases on a small platform stooped underneath it and raised the load off its bearings. Sero tried it but could not budge the weight. He bowed very politely and walked off the stage. Carey claimed the lift amounted to over two thousand pounds, and a very good showing for a man of 130 pounds. The clog dancing by N. Sanford Belleville, received a high share of applause. He was quick on his feet and had a good step. Carey's exhibition of fancy weight lifting opened the eyes of many.

A Noble Woman

Mrs. C. T. Williams, late president of the Dominion Temperance Union whose death was recently announced was one of the best known temperance workers of this Province. Mr. Williams was the daughter of the Rev. N. S. Dickinson, a Congregational minister of New England. She came to Canada nearly twenty years ago with her husband and Montreal was ever since her home. When the Montreal W.C.T.U. was organized in 1883 she became its secretary, and shortly after took charge of the social work of the Provincial Union. At the convention of the Provincial Union in 1890, Mrs. Williams was elected recording-secretary, and at the convention of the Dominion W.C.T.U. in 1892, she was elected to the office of president of that organization, in which capacity she did good work. Indeed her influence extended far beyond the Dominion, and her name was held in reverence wherever women were engaged in earnest christian temperance work.

Her last illness was long and painful, resulting from an accident sustained last autumn. Mrs. Williams and her husband were closely associated with the general work of the Emmanuel church, Montreal.

A Good Thing is Always Desirable

So it is with the visits of Prof. Dorenwend to Belleville. On his last visit he was so busy that many ladies and gentlemen were unable to be attended to—he is therefore returning to give all who desire it another opportunity of procuring his art goods for the head. Prof. Dorenwend is undoubtedly one of the leaders of his profession on this continent—his skill in arranging the coverings for the head of either lady or gentleman is well known. His goods are acknowledged to be perfect and in every way true to nature. They are the best protection to the head besides giving a refined and youthful expression to the face. Call and examine these marvels of his art and have them fitted in order to judge of the effect. Consult him about your hair, he will (free of charge) give you advice as to the preservation of it. He will be at Hotel Quinte on Thursday 11 April 1895.

A Joke That Went Nearly Too Far

An Ottawa despatch says that Minister Tupper carried his resignation had so far as to actually clean out his desk on Thursday last and carry away all his private papers with him. And now Conservative anger at the minister of justice for his childish behaviour is mingled with severe disappointment that Premier Bowell did not promptly accept his resignation and tell him to go about his business. And this is the man who is coming down to Antigonish to enlighten the electors of that county to their political duties and responsibilities. They would be excused if they refused to hear him.—Halifax Chronicle.

In Jail for Debt

(Toronto Star.)

John Headry, formerly a member of the city police force, and latterly conducting an express and delivery business, is in serious trouble. Some time ago a judgment of $60 was given against him, sheriffs officers made repeated attempts to collect the amount without avail. He is now in jail for debt and will have to remain there until the debt be paid.

The curative properties of Dodd's Kidney Pills in cases of Bright's disease and concomitant ailments have been brought to the attention of friends abroad by patients who were cured here, they in turn have called the attention of their acquaintances to the marvellous effects resultant from the use of the pills until now there is a steady and growing demand for the specific and each foreign mail exhibits an increase in he orders.

If you once try Carter's Little Liver Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable, small and easy to take, Don't forget this.

Are you all tired out, do you have that tired feeling or sick headache? You can be relieved of all these by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The Public Works committee met and recommended the passing of a number of accounts and Pay Sheet No. 7. The Committee also recommended that the Chairman, Street Surveyor, and Ald. Gordon visit George Hope's corner and see what is required to be done. They recommended that tenders be asked for 200,000 ft. of pine, and 400,000 ft of cedar They also recommended a deputation composed of the Mayor, Ald. Yeoman's, and Ald. Green to wait upon Mr. John Bell about the Frank Street railway crossing.

AN ANTIQUARIAN TEA

The Ladies of the Tabernacle Afford a Pleasant Mode of Reducing the Church Debt

The Ladies' Antiquarian Tea given last night at the Tabernacle as an adjunct to the dollar Sunday to raise funds for a payment on the church debt, was a gratifying success. Large numbers took advantage of the opportunity to procure a good old fashioned tea. The ladies appeared with aprons and white caps which were adjudged by Rev Dr. Gardiner to be "not much like their mothers wore."

A large number of the guests for tea remained to enjoy the staid but pleasant programme that commenced at half past eight with the singing of a hymn and prayer. Rev Mr. Campbell then delivered a sprightly ten minute address with abundant encouragement for the congregation in its endeavors to get clear of debt The antique choir composed of the ladies then sang a hymn that the oldest man in the audience could join in the chorus of, and they were heartily encored. Irvin and Merton Gordon played a violin duet with piano accompaniment by their mother and it was very much appreciated.

Rev. Dr. Gardiner was called upon for a reading and he produced a book that he said had been his mother's last present to him. It was a volume of sermons printed about 1660 and he read several selections from them. The sermons may have been old but the precepts were those that each generation rejuvenates in its struggles after godliness. Mrs. York pleased everyone by singing an old song that when she was three years old she had heard her mother sing; but she declined the supplimentary information as to how long ago that was.

Mr. W. H. Gordon and Rev Mr. Roberts both spoke briefly, Mr. Gordon said that the firm of Geo. Ritchie & Co. and the Tabernacle marked mileposts in his life. The firm was established the year he was born and the Tabernacle was built the year he was married. The antique choir sang another hymn and the gathering dispersed with the benediction.

AN ANXIOUS MAN

DEAR SIRS—During the winter of 1892 93, I was covered with pimples on the inside of my right leg between the knee and the ankle. As I never had anything of the kind before I was anxious about it, and sought medical advice, but getting no relief from the doctor I tried a bottle of B. B. B., applying some of it to my leg as well as using it internally, and to my surprise the nasty disease, whatever it was, disappeared within three weeks, and I am thankful to say it has never re-appeared.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.

CURRENT HISTORY

Some time or other—and it happens very often—everyone needs information on questions brought up by some recent event. But where is one to find it? Take for instance the war between China and Japan, the Currency question, the Hawaiian matter, the European situation, the Armenian outrages, or other matters of less importance. Where can you find in a moment clearly and concisely summed up all facts connected with these topics. They are probably scattered somewhere through the columns of the daily and weekly press, and the monthly reviews. But who is going to unravel them from the mass of irrelevant matter with which they are tangled? Current History is the only publication which devotes itself systematically to gathering for busy people the lost shreds of information, and which so arranges them that they can be selected and used without labor. Its uniform plan for arrangement and its thorough system of indexing enable the reader at once to post himself on any desired topic. For reference purposes the work is invaluable, and it ought to be in every library and home in the land. Bound each year, it makes an Annual; and the complete set, now covering the past five years, forms a most handsome and invaluable supplement to any cyclopedia. The volume for 1894 has a closly printed index of 30 pages, and 970 pages of solid reading matter, and contains 154 portraits of statesmen, royalties, and other celebrities. The work can be fully appreciated only when seen and sudied. A newspaper notice can give but a faint idea of its value, It is endorsed by eminent men of all shades of political and religious belief.

The Civic Committee Proposes to take the Steel Company on its own Terms

(The Whig.)

At a meeting of the civic committee, dealing with the blast furnace negotiations, it was decided to close with the Dominion steel and furnace company on terms agreed to. The committee will recommend the council to submit a by law to the electors, asking for $250,000 to be loaned to the company in the completion of the construction of the work. Also a fine site, exemption from taxes for ten years and free water. If the by-law is passed the company will receive the first payment of $175,000 on the completion of the works and the balance of $75,000, when steel is manufactured. The committee's report will be printed and a copy of it given to each alderman. On Thursday evening a special meeting of the council will be held to discuss the report.

WORST KIND OF DYSPEPSIA

GENTLEMEN,—I write to inform you that for years I had been troubled with Dyspepsia, and having tried other medicines which entirely failed, I at last found relief and cure in Burdock Blood Bitters, of which I took two bottles, the result being a perfect cure. Although only a young lad I had been troubled with Dyspepsia for four or five years, but I can say now that B.B.B. does its work faithfully in the worst kind of Dyspepsia, and has proved itself the only cure for me.

A Verdict Against Liquor

(The Toronto Star.)

The attention of those engaged in the liquor traffic is called to the verdict given by a jury at Guelph to a widow who sued to recover damages from two hotel-keepers who sold to her husband the liquor under whose influence he was drowned by falling into a mill dam at Hespeler.

The woman's name is Craine. She has been fighting the case for some months and has finally triumphed, one hotel-keeper being required to pay $600 and another $300.

All honor to Mrs. Crane and the jury who gave the verdict! They have established something of greater importance than the payment of the money to the widow. They have given effect to the claim that hotel-keepers who permit a man to consume on their premises sufficient liquor to intoxicate him are responsible for the injuries that may come to him while unable to care for himself.

The verdict should induce hotel-keepers to refuse liquor to men when they show signs of becoming intoxicated.

TWO OPERATIONS.

BOTH FAILURES

A Case of Kidney Complaint that Would Not Yield to Surgery or Medicine until B. B. B. Was Tried.

GENTLEMEN,—After having undergone two operations for Kidney Complaint without securing the least relief, and hearing of some remarkable cures made by B. B. B. in our neighborhood, I decided to try it. I was given up by the doctors after the operations failed, and it was providential that I heard of B. B. B. After the use of six bottles I experienced so great relief and so great a change for the better that I felt the good effects would be lasting, as indeed they have been. The seventh bottle perfectly cured me, and I am now stronger and better than I ever was before. People who saw me before I took B. B. B. and who see me now can scarcely believe that I am the same person.

An Evening With Longfellow

Last evening the Epworth League of Bridge St. Methodist church gave one of their periodical literary evenings for the delectation of the congregation at large. They had a specific theme last night in Longfellow and the consideration of the genial, love-lit soul and his works afforded a very pleasant evening for a large gathering. A prayer by the Rev. Mr. Baker and a piano solo by Prof. Dingle opened the programe. L. W. Yeomans contributed a very interesting paper on the poet's home life. Mr. F. Lewis sang a solo and Mrs. Larke read "The building of the ship," a solo by Mr. Eaton was followed Mr. J. J. B. Flint with a reading from "Hiawatha." Miss G. Price sang "The rainy day." Miss Curts read "The blind girl of Castile." An interesting paper by Miss Gardiner on the work of the poet concluded.

THE ONLY WOMAN DRUMMER.

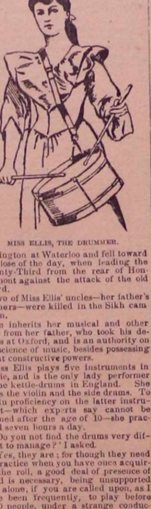
A writer for St. Paul's, London, recently called upon Miss Ellis, the kettle drummer.

"How many instruments do you play?" was the first question I asked, after settling down for my chat with Miss Ellis. "Only ten," was the modest reply of this young musical genius, who is of Irish descent, and comes of a family of soldiers. Three of her ancestors fought at Waterloo, one of whom was the brave Sir Henry Ellis, who was aide-de-camp to the Duke of Wellington at Waterloo and fell toward the close of the day, when leading the Twenty-Third from the rear of Hougoumont against the attack of the old Guard.



MISS ELLIS, THE DRUMMER.

Two of Miss Ellis' uncles—her father's brothers—were killed in the Sikh campaign.

She inherits her musical and other gifts from her father, who took his degrees at Oxford, and is an authority on the science of music, besides possessing great constructive powers.

Miss Ellis plays five instruments in public, and is the only lady performer on the kettle-drums in England. She plays the violin and the side drums. To attain proficiency on the latter instrument—which experts say cannot be learned after the age of 10—she practiced seven hours a day.

"Do you not find the drums very difficult to manage?" I asked.

"Yes, they are; for though they need no practice when you have once acquired the roll, a good deal of presence of mind is necessary, being unsupported and alone, if you are called upon, as I have been frequently, to play before 2,000 people, under a strange conductor, with strange music, often in manuscript, and a pair of drums possibly out of repair, for the last things a conductor attends to are the drums."

"Are you never nervous?"

"Not very often, although as an old trumpeter once said to me, 'You've got to keep your eye on three things at once—the conductor's baton, the music and the drums, and you've only got two eyes to do it with.'"

In addition to being a multifarious instrumentalist, Miss Ellis has a fine contralto voice. She is, moreover, a clever sculptor.

In appearance Miss Ellis is very delicate and fragile-looking, and her looks do not belie her; but she manages to get through a good deal of hard and steady work.

Much of life's misery is due to indigestion; for who can be happy with a pain in his stomach? As a corrective and strengthener of the ailementary organs, Ayer's Pills are invaluable, their use being attended always with marked benefit.

The Best Pill.—Mr. Wm. Vandervoort idney Crossing, Ont., writes: "We have een using Parmelle's Pills, and find them by ar the best Pills we ever used." For Delicate and Debilitated Constitutions these Pills act like a charm. Taken in small doses, the effect is both a tonic and a stimulant, mildly exciting the secretions of the body, giving tone and vigor.

Yellow as a guinea.—The complexion, in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick head ache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURE which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels there after to become regular. High professional sanction has been accorded to it; and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich it, every bodily function fags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, its contamination by bile, or other causes, serious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery

KNIGHTS OF LABOR

WOULD MAKE INDUSTRY AND MORALITY, NOT WEALTH, THE STANDARD OF GREATNESS

The Aims and Objects of the Newly Organized Local Assembly—There Should be no Drones in the Social Hive

The organization in the city of a local assembly of the Knights of Labor does not seem to have fomented a social revolution, it has not even aroused the slumbering antagonism of the anti-Labor people, and there are generally a few in every community who view as inimical to progress the rise of the masses. There was a Knight of Labor Assembly that died in Belleville some years ago but since then events have worked a revolution in Labor thought that puts the new organization in an entirely different relation to the community from that of the deceased Assembly.

The change is in the methods rather then the purposes of Labor. Within the past year the Labor bodies have almost unanimously decided against strikes as a means of attaining their object in favor of an appeal to the ballot box. For this reason we think that just now some of the objects of the Knights of Labor, the strongest Labor organization in existence will be of interest.

The Knights of Labor have well defined principles. Actuated by the justice of their demands and the hope that they will become the recognized practice of the whole people, hundreds of thousands of men and women have enlisted in its army of peace and are proclaiming its principles to the world. They are struggling to put justice, liberty and humanity above slavery, selfishness and greed, and to dispell the crude and barbarous practice that gives wealth higher consideration than industry and morality in the standard of greatness. They believe that human souls and dollars should be linked together for the elevation of the race.

The Order has been formed for the purpose of organizing, educating and directing the power of the industrial masses. Its aims are :

To make industrial and moral worth, not wealth, the true standard of individual and national greatness.

To secure to the workers the full enjoyment of he wealth they create ; sufficient leisure in which to develop their intellectual moral and social faculties ; all of the benefits, recreations and pleasures of association, in a word, to enable them to share in the gains and honor of advancing civilization.

In order to secure these results we demand at the hands of the law-making power of Municipality, state and Nation :

The establishment of the Referendum in the making of all laws.

The establishment of Bureaus of Labor Statistics, that we may arrive at a correct knowledge of the educational, moral and financial condition of the laboring masses, and the establishment of free State Labor Bureaus.

The land, including all the natural sources of wealth, is the heritage of all the people, and should not be subject to speculative traffic. Occupancy and use should be the only title to the possession of land. Taxes upon land should be levied upon its full value for use, exclusive of improvements, and should not be sufficient to take for the community all unearned increment.

The abrogation of all laws that do not bear equally upon capitalists and laborers, and the removal and unjust technicalities, delays and discriminations in the administration of justice.

The adoption of measures providing for the health and safety of those engaged in mining manufacturing and building industries, and for indemnification to those engaged therein for injuries received through lack of necessary safeguards.

The recognition, by incorporation, of orders and other associations organized by the workers to improve their condition and to protect their rights.

The enactment of laws to compel corporations to pay their employees weekly, in lawful money, for the labor of the preceding week, giving mechanics and laborers a first lien upon the product of their labor to the extent of their full wages.

The enactment of laws providing for arbitration between employers and employed, and to enforce the decision of the arbitrators.

The prohibition, by law, of the employment of children under fifteen years of age the compulsary attendance at school for at least ten months in the year of all children between the ages of seven and fifteen years; and the furnishing at the expense of the State of free text-books.

That a graduated tax on incomes and inheritances be levied.

To prohibit the hiring out of convict labor.

That the importation of foreign labor under contract be prohibited.

That, in connection with the postoffice, the government shall provide faculties for deposits of savings of the people in small sums.

That the government shall obtain possession, under the right of eminent domain, of all telegraphs, telephones and railroads; and that hereafter no charter or license be issued to any corporation for construction or operation of any means of transporting intelligence, passengers or freight.

And while making the foregoing demands upon the Provincial and National Governments, we will endeavor to associate our own labors .

To establish co-operative institutions, such as will tend to supersede the wage-system, by the introduction of a co-operative system.

To secure for both sexes equal rights.

To gain some of the benefits of labor-saving machinery by a gradual reduction of the hours of labor to eight per day.

To persuade employers to agree to arbitrate all differences which may arise between them and their employees, in order that the bonds of sympathy between them may be strengthened and that strikes may be rendered unnecessary.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an ag of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of t b y to which it is applied.

The Executive Committee met last night and passed a number of accounts.

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY

A Horse Belong to Wilfred Potter Made a Dash For Liberty

An exciting runaway took place this morning on Front street when a horse belonging to Wilfred Potter, grocer of Mountain View took fright and made a break down Front street. The horse was going at a terrific rate of speed and nearly smashed a rig belonging to H. C. Dickens. As it turned the corner on Front and Bridge street Murney Coulter of Hungerford seized the horse by the bridle and succeded in bringing it to a standstill. The horse was uninjured, the only damage being done was to the harness which was broken in some places.

Agonizing Transfixing Pain

The most excruciating pain known is perhaps caused by Agina Pectois, which is most to be dreaded of any of the diseases of the heart. It distinguishes itself especially by pain, and by pain which is best described as agonizing. The pain literally transfixes the patient, generally radiating from the heart to the left shoulder and down the arm. The face shows the picture of terror, and is either deathly white or livid. To a person suffering from this species of heart trouble or from palpitation or fluttering of the heart, shortness of breath, or smothering spells, the value of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart cannot be estimated, as it will give relief in 30 minutes in every case, and if judiciously used effect a cure. Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart is the greatest life saving remedy of the age.

A Prosperous Village

Mr. W. C. Mikel has been to Tweed on business for a couple of days and has returned with a fully fledged idea that it is the most thriving municipality in this district. There is scarcely a vacant house in the place and rents are as high there as in Belleville. Its prosperity is the joint production of the two railroads the C. P. R. and the Tweed & Tamworth. It has suffered from no boom, nor its after clap of depression. Mr. Falconer who lately went from Belleville to Tweed and opened a general store, is reported to be doing well.

Worth Trying

COMMUNICATION.

While the columns of the ONTARIO are at all time open for correspondence on all matters o public interest, it must in all cases be understood that we are in no way responsible for, nor necessarily endorse the views so expressed

A Good Suggestion.

To the Editor of the ONTARIO:

DEAR SIR:—The receipt of the Annual Report of the Ontario College, bristling as it is with facts and experiments of the greatest interest to every farmer in Ontario suggests to me the opportuneness of again reminding, not only the farmer, but those of any calling who occupy a garden plot of the advantage of becoming members of the Farmers Institute and secure the valuable amount of information to be acquired from the Reports and Bulletins forwarded to each member. I am surprised to think that any farmer no matter how unpretentious should not (for the small sum of 25 cents per annum) aval himself of this easy method of acquiring information on all matters relating to his business. By filing away those Reports, Lectures and Bulletins for reference when needed, there is nothing necessary to successful farming or gardening tha may not be found.

Those who have not yet sent in their names should lose no time in doing so, that all the reports issued during the year may be received. Those who may not find it convenient to send their names directly to Mr. Stokes, the Secretary, Thomasburg, may hand them to the Vice-President, Jno. Brintnell, Mr. Birkley, Marysville, myself or any of the Directors of the institute.

The Bicycle By Law

TO THE EDITOR OF ONTARIO :

DEAR SIR.—I think it fully time that the laws regarding bicyclists were carried out as regards their riding on the walks. I would not have taken any notice of this but a certain cicylist told my daughter to get out of the way, he ran over the child's foot. If he had been going at any rate a serious accident might have occurred. Every pedestrian should keep the walk and fine a cicyclist if on the side walk. There is a law but they are like pie crust.

PEDESTRIAN.

A CAREFUL STUDENT OF SOCIAL REFORM

Rev W Galbraith L L B Pastor of Elm Street Methodist Church Toronto has a Good Word to say of Dr Agnews Catarrhal Powder

The Rev. Wm. Galbraith, LL.B., is one of the thoughtful preachers of the day. The active interest he has taken in questions of social reform has given him wide influence outside of his own church, where his influence is undisputed. His mind is of the kind that thinks out a problem, and then he is able to speak with force and intelligence. He is to be credited with examining into the merits of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, with the same bent of mind. And what does he say ? That in this medicine he has found a remedy that gives quick relief for cold in the head, which is so uncomfortable to everybody, and giving relief there it helps perhaps, more than any other remedy to stave off the ill effects that come from catarrhal trouble.

One short puff of the breath through the Blower. supplied with each bottle of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, diffuses this powder over the surface of the nasal passages. A Good Thing is Always Desirable

So it is with the visits of Prof. Dorenwend to Belleville. On his last visit he was so busy that many ladies and gentlemen were unable to be attended to—he is therefore returning to give all who desire it another opportunity of procuring his art goods for the head. Prof. Dorenwend is undoubtealy one of the leaders of his profession on this continent—his skill in arranging the coverings for the head of either lady or gentleman is well known. His goods are acknowledged to be perfect and in every way true to nature. They are the best protection to the head besides giving a refined and youthful expression to the face. Call and examine these marvels of his art and have them fitted in order to judge of the effect. Consult him about your hair, he will (free of charge) give you advice as to the preservation of it. He will be at Hotel Quinte on Thurday 11 April 1895.

He Didn't Get the Job.

A stranger looking for work visited the new asylum grounds yesterday and approaching the foreman in charge of a gang engaged putting away outside windows, asked for a job. He was told that he could come on at once, in time for dinner in fact, and accordingly hurried up street, secured his valise and returned in the best of spirits under the promise made him by the foreman of having secured a government job. His astonishment and chagrin can be readily understood when told that the supposed foreman was a patient of the institution, that the rest of the workmen were also inmates.—Brockville Recorder.

DOCTORS AND FLY BLISTERS FAIL

But One Dose of South American Rheumatic Cure Relieves and Half a Bottle Cures

Robert E. Gibson Pembrooke's well known merchant ; "I contracted rheumatism in very severe form in 1888, and have suffered untold misery each spring since. I have repeatedly applied fly blisters with but little success. Doctors whom I consulted likewise failed to relieve. I was induced to try South American Rheumatic Cure by Mr. W. F. C, Bethel, of the Dickson Drug Company. The first dose gave instant relief, and half a bottle cured."

NEW ZEALAND SEEKS RECIPROCITY

Particulars of Newfoundland's Trade, Debt, Etc., Submitted to the Conference—Two Projected Railways — New Ruling Re Duties on Packaged Tea.

Ottawa, April 6.—Hon. Mr. Ives, Minister, of Trade and Commerce, received a cable message from the High Commissioner to-day, stating that Hon. Mr. Ward, Treasurer of New Zealand , is at present in London and had intimated a willingness on the part of his Government to negotiate a trade arrangement with Canada on a preferential basis. Mr. Ives immediately cabled to Sir Charles Tupper for particulars of the nature of the proposed arrangement, previous to authorizing him to discuss the matter officially with Mr. Ward.

The conference between the Dominion and Newfoundland delegates this morning was of short duration. The visitors filed a mass of information bearing upon the financial condition of the island, containing statistics in regard to trade, subsidies and other particulars of a like nature. It was decided to have these documents printed at once, and they will be available for the use of the conference at Saturday's session.

The Toronto promoters of James' Bay Railway had better look to their laurels. McIntyre and Sinclair of this city give notice this week of application to Parliament for an act to incorporate the James' Bay Railway Company, to build a railway from Parry Sound, or from a point on the Canadian Pacific Railway, between Sudbury Junction and North Bay, to James' Bay, where Moose River enters the bay.

Application is also made for incorporation of the Lindsay, Haliburton and Mattawa Railway Co., to build a railway from a point on the Midland division of the Grand Trunk, north of Lindsay to Mattawa, and also a brnch line to connect with the Lindsay, Haliburton and Mattawa Railway, or Midland Railway.

The St. Clair and Erie Ship Canal Company will apply for an Act to amend the Act of Incorporation of the company by increasing its power to issue bonds, and for other purposes.

The revenue for March amounted to $2,748,153, a decrease of one million as compared with the corresponding month of last year. The expenditure fell off $200,000, reducing the net loss by that amount. The total revenue for nine months was $24,553,099, compared with $27,845,846 for the same period last year. The surplus revenue over expenditure on March 31 was $708,107. Expenditure on capital account so far this year has been $3,273,195, as compared with $3,852,340. Net debt on March 31 was $248,150,854, a decrease of $1,118,993 in the month.

By the militia general orders to be issued Saturday, the Government will recognize the distinguished services of Lieut.-Col. W. P. Anderson of this city in promoting and encouraging rifle-shooting in Canada, by granting him the rank of Lieut.-Col, in the active militia on the special list.

Recently it was announced that Lieut.-Col. Turnbull, commanding the Royal Canadian Dragoons, had retired from the service, The reasons assigned for this step have not transpired, but it is said it was owing to some difference of opinion with General Herbert. Col. Turnbull, however, has never been gazetted out, and this week's general order appoints him Inspector of Cavalry for the Dominion, in addition to his present duties, implying that whatever action was contemplated by Gen. Herbert is revoked. Col. Turnbull will take up his residence in Toronto again very soon.

An officer formerly well known in Toronto military circles and an old Queen's Own man, in the person of Major W. E. Hodgins, succeeds Col. Toller this week in command of the Governor-General's Foot Guards of this city. Col. Hodgins is every inch a soldier. By his promotion Capt. A. L. Jarvis thereby secures the vacant majority. Major Jarvis is well known throughout Ontario as being formerly private secretary to Sir John Carling.

The order-in-council appointing certain officers to be deputy surgeons-general in the active militia is applicable to the following : Surgeon-Major F. W. Strange, R.R.C.I., from Sept. 1 last ; Surgeon-Major J. L. H. Neilson, R.C.A., from Feb. 1 last ; Surgeon-Major F. W. Campbell, R.R.C.I., from Feb. 1, 1895 ; Surgeon-Major C. C. Sewell, R.C.A., from Feb. 1, 1895 ; Surgeon G. S. Ryerson, 10th Battalion Royal Grenadiers, from March 26, 1895 ; Surgeon William Tobin, retired list, from March 26, 1895.

In the Royal Regiment of Canadian Infantry Major M. D. Gordon is granted the brevet rank of Lt.-Col., from April 15, 1891, as a special case. Major B. H. Vidal is granted the brevet rank of Lt.-Col. from March 8, 1895, as a special case. Lieuts. A. O. Fages and C. F. O. Fiset are granted the brevet rank of captain from March 13, 1895.

Captain R. W. Rutherford of the Royal Canadian Artillery is granted the brevet rank of major as a special case. Similar rank been conferred upon Capt. J. B. Donaldson of the headquarters staff, secretary of the Dominion Artillery Association. Capt. Benoit from the retired list, secretary of the Militia department, is granted the rank of captain in active militia.

There has for some time been a disposition among importers to read the tariff item referring to tea in small packages to mean that such are to be admitted free of duty, the same as tea in the larger boxes in which it is imported direct from the countries of production. The intention in framing the new tariff was to impose a duty on the package, which was simply carrying out the spirit of the general tariff policy, in order to encourage the re-packing in pound and half-pound packages in this country. In furtherance of this intention tea lead was placed on the free list, so that having his labels printed in Canada the local packer would have a slight advantage over the foreign dealer in the home market. This construction of the new tariff has been submitted by the Controller of Customs for legal opinion with the result that Hon. Mr. Wallace's ruling has been sustained. Under the old tariff item tea in small packages was admitted free, while local repacking was handicapped by duty on lead and labels. It was to correct this trade paradox that the wording of the item was changed in the new tariff.

The Department of Justice has not received any communications asking on grounds of alleged insanity for an examination of Chatelle, the murderer of Jessie Keith, at Listowel. The only report to hand is one from Chief Justice Armour intimating that he had sentenced the prisoner, or in other words, the ordinary report sent to the Department in capital cases.

MURDERER SHOT DOWN.

The Assassin of Frank Skynner at Gleichen Shot by Police.

Winnipeg, April 6.—Frank Skynner, the young man murdered by an Indian on the Blackfoot Reservation, Gleichen, yesterday, was a son of Col. Skynner of Port Hope, and lived for some time in Toronto. The Indian who murdered him was pursued by a posse of Mounted Police and shot dead when he offered resistance.

The murderer was entrenched behind the coffins of Chiefs Crow Foot and Three Bulls, and several shots were exchanged. He was near the grave of his child, whom he lost by illness several weeks ago, and for whose death he blamed the whites. The burying-ground is on the top of a hill, and the Indian had a commanding position.

GUELPH MANSLAUGHTER CASE.

Both Prisoners Acquitted, as Undue Violence Was Not Used.

Guelph, Ont., April 6.—The case against John Case for manslaughter, and Alexander Keating as an accessory, came up for hearing this afternoon before Mr. Justice Rose. Last November the deceased Johnston, a farmer, got into an altercation at Borsch's Hotel, with Case, and in the fight Johnston fell underneath Case and never regained consciousness. Keating interfered with those who endeavored to separate the combatants. Medical witnesses testified that Johnston's skull was of unusual thinness. His Lordship held that Case had not used undue violence to defend himself and directed that a verdict of not guilty be entered. Both prisoners were discharged.

ANOTHER BATTLE IN INDIA.

The Doori Tribesmen Repulsed With Heavy Losses.

Calcutta, April 5.—The first brigade of the British force sent to Chitral is reported to have had an engagement with natives beyond Malakand Pass. The British were advancing to occupy the banks of the Swat River, when a considerable body of Doori tribesmen attacked them. The natives fought stubbornly and eventually tried to rush the British lines, but they were checked by the guards and cavalry and were forced back with heavy losses. The second brigade has not yet crossed the Pass. Its progress has been very slow, as the enemy had torn up and barricaded the road.

14 KILLED IN AN EXPLOSION.

Buried Under Two Three-Story Buildings Which Were Wrecked.

New Orleans, April 6.—This morning an explosion took place in a ship chandlery establishment run by Charles Sathe. The store was located in a three-story building, which was entirely destroyed. Sathe, with his wife, one child, and three servants, were caught by the falling walls and killed. A saloon, run by Emile Boulet, situated next door, was crushed by the tumbling ruins and five or six fishermen, who were sleeping upstairs over the saloon, were killed. The killed number 14.

MAIL ROBBERY AT BRUSSELS.

Slit Made in a Bag and Registered Letters Abstracted

Brussels, Ont., April 6.—A mail robbery was committed here on Thursday morning between the town office and the railway station. The mail clerk that received the bag reported that there was a slit made in the side large enough to allow the abstraction of registered letters, of which there was a number missing. The suspected party left on the next train.

RAN OFF A TRESTLE.

Five Lives Lost in a Railway Accident in Ohio.

Zanesville, O., April 6.—At Whigville, five miles west of Summerfield, on the Bellaire, Zanesville & Cincinnati Railway, a wreck took place this morning. A coach on the west-bound passenger train jumped the track, just before reaching a trestle which spans a small stream. The coach dragged the engine from the rails, and the trestle went down. Eli Lucas, the engineer, and Jesse Johns, fireman, both remained at their posts. Both were killed. Three passengers were also killed.

CONTRACTOR DAVIS KILLED.

Robert J. Davis, aged 45, who resided with his wife and family at 58 Wright-avenue, fell from the roof of a building at College-street and Brunswick-avenue yesterday and was killed. Davis and a companion had the contract for demolishing a house at the above corner, and they were engaged lowering a lot of debris by means of a pulley. Davis was standing at a height of 55 feet from the ground, when by some means the scaffold, pulley and all gave way, throwing the unfortunate man onto a pile of brick in a lane in the rear. He alighted on his head, breaking his neck, and died instantly.

Britain Has Enough Nicaragua Territory.

Washington, April 6.—The British Minister of Foreign Affairs has informed United States Ambassador Bayard that Great Britain will not seek in her present controversy with Nicaragua to acquire any part of the latter's country ; that Great Britain does not desire an increase of Nicaraguan territory ; that her colonial possessions are sufficiently large to satisfy her ambition, and that all she desires of Nicaragua is that a proper indemnity shall be paid to the British Consul Hatch and other of Her Majesty's subjects who were driven out of Bluefields during the troubles in the Mosquito reservation last autumn.

Interesting Items for Farmers.

Now is the time, before the plants begin to start off, to apply potash and superphosphate to the strawberry plants. The nitrates can go on a little later.

Rye and crimson clover are said to be crops that require no land if they are turned under the soil, because they are eseded in the fall, remai on the ground during the winter, and are out of the way in time for planting the spring crops, occupying the land at a season of the year when nothing else can be grown upon it.

Mix the horse manure and cattle manure in the same heap, and use a liberal supply of muck, dry dirt, litter or marl to absorb the liquids. Should the heap begin to heat spread it out, throw water or urine on it, and more absorbent material and heap it again. This creates work, but it will make the manure more valuable than if it receives no care.

Get the new strawberry land in condition. New beds should have the plants in position before April 15, if possible, so as to give them the spring in which to get a start and become well established before the dry season sets in. A week or two is quite an advantage with strawberries. After plowing the land and harrowing it well, apply wood ashes and ground bone, and then harrow it again before putting out the new plants.

A FIRE-SIDE EVENING

The Closing Concert of Prof. Shepard's Elocutionary Class at Albert College.

The closing recital of Prof. Shepard's elocution class in Albert College chapel—"A Fire-side evening" they called it, was a pleasing success. A long and interesting program was rendered to an appreciative audience. The performers were arranged on the platform and the numbers followed each other without pause and the audience were requested to refrain from applauding.

The programme commenced with a piano solo by Miss McLean. The rest of the entertainment was made up by a couple of numbers by the Glee Club and recitations by the following pupils; Mr. A. Ormiston, Miss B. Milne, Miss Sager, Mr. E. Turkington, Miss O. Williams, Miss Whitehouse, Mr. W. J. Farley, Miss L. Lazier, Mr. T. H. Gowman, Miss W. Gardiner, Miss M. Wilson, Miss Worrall, Mr. W. J. Foster, Miss G. Bowers, Miss G. Price, Mr. R. D. Parker. Miss K. Blair, Miss A Curts, Miss Kenyon, Miss G. Post, Miss A Taylor, Miss J. Brignall.

"The Minstrel's Curse" by Mr. E. Turkington, "The Pipers of Lucknow" by Miss Gardiner, and "A Challenge" by Miss Blair were made very attractive by musical accompaniments. The honors of the evening were carried off by Miss L Lazier, Miss A. Curts, Miss J. Brignall and Miss Sager. At the close of the recital the Professor himself was called for and rendered one of his inimitable humorous selections. The stage was tastefully decorated and altogether the evening was a most enjoyable one though the twenty-five cent admission fee effectually prevented the crush of the last few Philomathian Friday evenings.

An Opposition Telephone Co

The Chicago Times-Herald say : What the Bell Telephone Company has been fearing since its patents expired has now assumed definite shape. A competing concern is in process of formation, the mission of which will be to fight the Bell people in the entire territory where they operate. According to the reports a telephone company has been formed in New York by a number of wealthy men. The capital stock of the company is given as $160,000,000. The backers said to be connected with this new enterprise are: The Parrot Company of New York, the Standard Oil Company, Searles, of the Sugar Trust; George C. Crocker, the San Francisco millionaire; Pillsbury, the Minneapolis flour man, and J. S. Clarkson. About a week ago whispers of a rival of the Bell Company were heard in San Francisco. They were echoed in Wall Street, and now they swell into a pretty authentic assurance that such a stupendous enterprise has been planned.

Picton Items

The young man, Burton Spafford, of Picton, sent down for trial two weeks ago by P. M. Curry for using the mails with intent to defraud, on information laid by Acting Postoffice Inspector McCarow, was up yesterday for trial before County Court Judge Merrill. He pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs, and ordered to refund all the money obtained by him through the fraudulent advertisement.

While the twentieth anniversary of the York street Methodist Sunday School was being celebrated by a festival in the church Friday night, the decorations over the stage caught fire and created a panic among the children and the audience, which might have proved serious but for the coolness of some present. The fire was quickly extinguished with little damage.

A PECULIAR CASE.

COVERED WITH PIMPLES.

AN ANXIOUS MAN

The Disease Disappears in Three Weeks by the use of B. B. B—Letter From Manitoba Fully Describing it.

DEAR SIRS—During the winter of 1892 93, I was covered with pimples on the inside of my right leg between the knee and the ankle. As I never had anything of the kind before I was anxious about it, and sought medical advice, but getting no relief from the doctor I tried a bottle of B. B. B., applying some of it to my leg as well as using it internally, and to my surprise the nasty disease, whatever it was, disappeared within three weeks, and I am thankful to say it has never re-appeared.

THEY STOLE THE BEER

And what They Couldn't Steel they Wasted

Yesterday afternoon an industrious and thirsty individual hauled a half barrel of beer across the bay on a hand-sleigh to Rossmore. To improve matters he got in up his waist just before he landed In "Brooklyn." The liquor was taken to a house in the village and shortly after its arrival the woman that belonged to the place went for a drive and before they returned some of the "boys" carried away about twenty gallons of beer, then turned on the tap and what they couldn't take away ran out on the floor. Several warrants for the arrest of the offenders have been issued.

TWO DOGS AND A JURY.

Marguerito Valesquez was a person of some notoriety on the American side of the Texan frontier. There were periods, indeed, when members of his acquaintance, notably the Sheriff's officers, sought his society with an ardor difficult to withstand. The present was one of those occasions; and although Marguerito had shown some coyness about accepting the urgent invitation extended to him, and moreover given the State officials some healthy exercise before allowing them to deliver it personally, yet he had eventually given away to force of circumstances.

Fortunately for themselves the representatives of the law and order in Jacubaya knew within a hundred miles or so the localities where Marguerito was likely to be found. His natural modesty would, they were aware, prevent his crossing the Mexican border, where his return had long been awaited with anxiety by certain of his compatriots. Therefore the chase had been short.

Still, while it lasted, like most of the proceedings in which Marguerito was actively concerned, it had proved full of interest to the persons sharing in it. But now the object of all these attentions had recognized the uselessness of further resistance, and, feeling that he had done his best, was prepared to rest upon his laurels. Wherein his friend, Don Carlos, agreed with him.

The pair, accompanied by a large proportion of the population, made their way toward the court house, a building which but unflatteringly illustrated the quality of the law dispensed within. As a matter of fact, before it became a hall of justice, it had been a loft, and access was still gained to it by means of a ladder. Marguerito, followed by the judge, the jury and the crowd, mounted with impassive slowness, and he was shortly occupying a prominent position in the court.

Don Carlos, who suffered from a constitutional objection to climbing, had elected to remain in the yard below. Knowing from past experience that the trial was likely to be a lengthy process, he gravely seated himself upon the ground and prepared to await events. It should be explained that Don Carlos was not handsome. Neither was he good. Still, he possessed merits which might not have been patent to the casual observer. In complexion he was black and tan, being rather like a dachshund in the face, while he strongly resembled a greyhound in the figure. His tail, however, it was impossible to classify, for it belonged to no species or epoch. Owing to his having been dropped by his nurse when a baby, it had a break near the tip, which caused it to curl over his back in a coquettish manner far from exemplifying the real solidity of his character; while its length would have done credit to a cat.

Don Carlos himself seemed to be aware that it was not the latest fashion in tails, and he habitually underwent many things in a vain endeavor to sit upon the whole of it at once. He was thus engaged upon the present occasion, when, glancing up, he chanced to catch sight of a bull mastiff which was strolling slowly into the yard, apparently in search of stray refreshments.

Don Carlos pricked up his ears and blinked his eyes, into which the light of battle gradually crept, as the intruder, unconscious of danger, drew nearer every moment.

In the meantime the sonorous tones of the Judge mingled with the drawl of the witnesses, sounded clearly from the open window of the loft above. It appeared that Marguerito was accused of horse stealing this time, and as he listened to the details of his error, as described by the sufferers from it, he felt by no means certain but that this might be the last of his many adventures.

"Judge Hopper's got a hanging look about him this morning," he meditated, with an unemotional face. "If I get off this time I will go home to Conchita and they shall find me no more."

The last witness for the prosecution finished his tale of woe, and a feeble effort was made at defense, while Marguerito wondered idly if he really were as great a ruffian as the evidence seemed to imply.

Silence, broken only by the buzzing of flies, fell upon the close room, as the judge settled himself in his wooden chair and prepared to sum up. The culprit, who was looking through the window at his side, appeared to be the only uninterested person present. A deputy standing near was about to recall his attention to the proceedings, when, following for an instant the direction of the prisoner's gaze, he, too, became absorbed.

The sheriff himself then glanced at the window, through which short barks were begining to make themselves heard, and after one look he rushed to the door and commenced hurriedly descending the ladder. The audience gazed at each other in amazement for an instant, before, with a simultaneous movement, they took a hurried survey of the yard. Having looked, they wasted no more time, but with an expression of rapture stealing over their faces they made for the ladder, accompanied by the prisoner and guard.

The judge, being left alone in the empty loft, frowned severely at the vacant benches as he said with impassive dignity, "I guess this court will adjourn." Then he tucked up his sleeves and made good time for the yard. A vigorous struggle for the best view took place between Marguerito and himself, without either man being in the least aware of the identity of the person by whom he was jostled. Nor would it have made any difference if he had known, because not even for a free pardon would the accused have consented to forego the enthralling sight of which he was feasting his eyes.

Affairs were just at their most exciting stage. The bull mastiff, it appeared, had drawn quite close to Don Carlos before perceiving his presence. He had then, instead of apologizing for the intrusion, critically examined Don Carlos' tail, afterward giving vent to an insulting bark. This brought matters to a climax, and in less time than it takes to tell, the two dogs were so inextricably mixed up that but for the appendage in question, waving over the scene like a flag of battle, it would have been impossible to distinguish one combatant from the other.

There was no necessity for the haste displayed by the spectators in reaching the seat of war, for the fray promised to be as long as it was sanguinary. No quarter was asked or desired. The stranger possessed a vast amount of staying power, inasmuch as when he once took hold little short of extracting his teeth made him let go again. But the military tactics of his opponent were new to him, and prevented his getting an oportunity to show what he really could do.

Don Carlos dashed underneath him and sent him sprawling into the mud; he jumped over his back and gave him a perfunctory bite in passing, and he harried his front and rear guards both at the same time, until the bull-mastiff felt that, for all the good he was able to effect, he might as well be a toy-terrier. The ironical cheers of the crowd incited him to fresh endeavor, and he spent himself in frantic efforts to gain the mastery.

At length, however, he saw a chance.

Making a sudden dash while Don Carlos was in the act of executing one of his wonderful leaps, the bull-dog met him in mid-air, and at last obtained a grip of the enemy's throat. Both dogs fell to the ground, the stranger savagely worrying his apparently vanquished antagonist.

The crowd showed signs of a desire to interfere, but Marguerito waved them back. "Let 'em alone," he said, placidly, "and bet your boots upon Carlos."

That intelligent animal, as he lay beneath his conqueror, appeared to understand and to be encouraged by the faith reposed in him by his master. He gathered his long legs together, planting them firmly against the enemy's body, and the next development of the case was that the bull-mastiff was seen to be taking an entirely involuntary flight through space.

The discomfited interloper, after a short period of meditation in a dust heap, picked himself out of the dirt. He looked back at the field of battle, glanced at the open gate through which he had entered, and then in a depressed manner he evidently made up his mind that it was time to leave. He accordingly did so, and not until he had slowly lurched out of sight round a sandy corner did Don Carlos creep up to his master for congratulations. That gentleman murmured something in their active Mexican that was clearly intelligible to his companion, for Don Carlos' eyes said plainly that he found life a satisfactory thing. With unlooked-for docility Marguerito turned to ascend the ladder leading to the loft.

Brought back to everyday life by his movement, judge, jury and audience followed suit, in a silence too blissful for breaking.

The prisoner, impassive as ever, resumed his careless survey of the room, letting his gaze rest longest on the benches occupied by the jury.

The judge took his seat, scrutinized the faces of the crowd, and, apparently satisfied by what he read there, cleared his throat and began.

"Gentlemen of the jury," he said, "when we were interrupted by unforeseen circumstances a short time ago, I opine that you were just a-goin' to declare that accordin' to the best of your belief the pris'ner was innercent of the charge agin him."

"You've struck it, jedge," unblushingly responded the jury.

The judge frowned down an attempt at speech on the part of the sheriff, and turned to Marguerito.

"Pris'ner," he said, "you heerd the remarks of them gentlemen opposite, so you may take it that the proceedin's is concluded. But don't get up to any more of your tricks in this county, for it 'pears likely that next time you won't get off so easy. And now, what'll you take for the dog?"—Pall Mall Budget.

ANIMALS CRAZED BY FIRE.

The panic there is inspired in the minds of horses by a phenomenon so strange as fire can be understood only by those who have witnessed a fire in a large stable where numbers of horses are kept. The scene that ensues is one of the most frightful that can be conceived. The horses are rescued from the burning building with the most difficulty, and only with most serious peril to the lives and limbs of the rescuers. The animals go mad with fright, rear, kick, and dash from side to side so wildly as to make an attempt at rescue as perilous as an advance on a hostile battery. When rescued they will often break away from those who hold them and charge back at full speed into the burning building, there to perish in the flames. They resist every attempt to take them out. They have been known to tear their rescuers with their teeth, to throw them to the ground and trample on hem, to kick out their brains. As the fury of the flames increase so does the panic of the unfortunate animals. They scream out in agony as the fire reaches their bodies, yet they will not, for all that, seek safety in the open air. They are seized with fear, and yet remain to be burned to death when a ten-seconds run would carry them to liberty. But they never make the run, and, as a rule, are burned alive in the stalls, where alone they seem to fancy they can find security.

There is but one way to get them out, and that is to blind them with some convenient cover, such as a coat or a blanket, and thus, unable to see the dangers about them, trembling in every limb, apparently ready to fall to the earth with fear, they may be led out. But the cover must not be quickly removed from their eyes, in fact it should not be taken off until the animals are out of sight of the burning building, otherwise they will break away from the persons leading them and, in spite of the stoutest efforts, will dash back to perish in the flames.

For cows a burning building does not seem to have the same fascination that it possesses for horses. It is said that when a cow stable is burning the animals may be led out without serious difficulty, save that which may result from their fright and the use they may make of their horns in their own frantic efforts to escape. It is a singular fact, however, that has often been noticed along the line of railroads, that the headlight of a locomotive exercises on calves, and sometimes on their mothers also, a species of fascination nearly akin to hypnotism. Engineers tell many stories of this peculiar fact. Not long ago, on a railroad running out of this city toward the South, the engineer of a night train noticed something ahead of him on the track. Always apprehensive of danger, he blew his whistle, put on his brakes and guardedly approached the spot where the obstacle was observed. It was soon seen to be a calf that stood in the centre of the track, staring with wide open eyes at the headlight. The whistle screamed a shrill alarm, the calf did not move, the bell as violently rung, but the animal heeded it not. With some difficulty the train was brought to a halt within a few feet of the fascinated calf, that stood with head erect gazing at the light as though petrified. The fireman jumped down form the cab, seized the calf by the ears to drag it from the track, when instantly, the moment its eyes were taken from the light, the full possession of every faculty seemed to return, and, with a bellow of fright, the calf broke from his hands and ran away at full speed. The animal had undoubtedly been the victim of a species of hypnotism, and the moment its gaze was diverted from the object that fascinated it the spell was broken and the calf ran away.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Tramps in the United States.

According to the New Haven Palladium, Prof. John J. Melook of Trinity College, in a lecture recently said that he had been making a special study of the tramp question, had written to the Mayors of cities all over the country regarding it and collected information in other ways. In the course of his lecture he said; "A recent writer asserts that there are about 60,000 tramps in the United States. This number is a trifle large, although it is safe to state that there are over 40,000. This is larger than the army of Wellington at Waterloo. We look on tramps as human wrecks and driftwood, and yet the majority of them are in the prime of life and in better than the average health. Only 8½ per cent. of the tramps from whom my statistics were gleaned claimed, in the dead of winter, while the grip was raging, that they were in bad health. They are robust, and will fill you with envy, malice and all other jealous feelings when you hear them snoring at midnight. From this we may easily say that neither age nor health is a bar to their working. Most of them have been out of work for months and a majority of them took the road at once after leaving their last job. Eighty-one per cent. of the tramps declare that they took to the road because they were out of a job."

LEADVILLE WEATHER.

He Came From the Glacier Half of the Town and Didn't Care a Cuss for the Volcanic Half.

He wore a buffalo skin overcoat and looked fierce. As he stood at the bar the commercial traveler entered into conversation with him. "From the west, I presume?"

"Yes, sir."

"You don't say! May I ask what State?"

"Colorado."

"Glad to hear it. Been in the Black Hills?"

"Ever so glad to hear it. Heard a great deal about it, and was thinking of going there myself. Wanted to ask you about the weather out there. Been very cold this winter?"

"Not very. Only 16 degrees below zero."

"Sixteen! Is that the lowest you ever had?"

"Did, eh?"

"Yes, sir. Sometimes it gets below that."

"You're sure of that?"

"Told you I just came from there, didn't I?"

"So you did. Well, I've been keeping track of the weather there myself from the official reports. See 'em pasted in my pocket scrapbook? Here's Leadville in this column."

"So it is. Agrees with what I said, I suppose? But you must have an object in doing this?"

"Cert. I'm a commercial traveler, and I want to keep posted on the weather in the various places I'm likely to visit. Furthermore, I like to knock out a liar right in the first round. Now, see here. The official report does not show that the mercury even reached zero this winter. What do you mean by giving me such stuff as that?"

"My dear sir, is that report from the Weather Bureau?"

"It is; can you get around it?"

"Don't need to, and don't want to. If you know anything about Leadville you know that half of it is built on an old glacier on a mountain top, where the snow and ice never melt, and the other half is built in the bottom of the crater of an extinct volcano. The Signal Office is in the hot half, and even in January they have to pour water on the floor and sidewalks to prevent them from igniting. The Signal Officer never reports the other half, because he never goes there. Up in my part of the town we frequently have fifteen to twenty degrees below zero while they are plucking peaches and picking roses in the lower half. So before you call a Leadville man a liar when he talks to you about the weather, you'd better find out in which half of the town he lives. Now, you'll have to take that back or take a dose of lead."

He took it back.

New Farming Process.

Automatic Metal Press.

An improved construction of apparatus for pressing metal, in which the female dies is so arranged with a movable bottom that after a piece of metal has been pressed to any desired form the pressed article will, when the moving part of the press has returned to its normal position, preparatory to making another operating stroke, be supported in a position clear of the dies and free to be removed.

Preventing Racing of Marine Engines.

A new device to prevent the "racing" of marine engines when the propeller emerges from the water, by which the supply of steam to the engines is automatically regulated according to the amount of thrust transmitted from an auxiliary propeller working under the same conditions as the main propeller, but acting as a governor to control the throttle valve, the operation of the auxiliary propeller being dependent on the action of a spring in opposition to the thrust transmitted through the auxiliary propeller shaft.

Multiple Telegraphing.

An improved multiple telegraphic instrument introduced in France, in which each key sends over the line wire at each operation an intermittent current corresponding to a definite number of vibrations in a minute. The receiving sounders are each in a similar way sensitive only to currents having a determined rate of vibrations corresponding to one of the transmitting keys. Consequently each receiver selects and responds to the current sent by a transmitter having a corresponding period of vibrations.

DO CHICKENS HAVE A LANGUAGE?

The Sun recently announced that a learned man in Baltimore has made the discovery that chickens have language. It must be interesting to the professor to find this out for himself, but the discovery of the fact is coeval with the discovery of chickens. Eve in Eden knew the eager cluck cluck which summons the chicks to their diet of worms, and the soft, caressing note of the mother hen as she gathereth her brood under her wings.

Of course they have a language. Everything that has voice has language. What else can we name the vocal expression of emotions! Had not Alfred Tennyson a language? And what was he? "An infant crying for the light, and with no language but a cry."

More can be learned in a chicken yard about speech than Garner could learn in his gorilla-proof cage in the African forests. There may be heard the language of love, announcements of discovery, invitations to dine, cries of alarm, shouts of defiance, challenges to combat, the cheer of victory, the muezzin's call and the hymn of the rising sun.

In beginning to study a language it is more difficult to distinguish sentences than single words. I am not sure, but I think I have found the words which being interpreted are: "Here is a fresh lettuce, children," and "Keep close to the coop, my dears;" and once I heard a cock cry, "A hawk! Sauve qui peut," so plainly that I knew what he said, although he was mistaken and had been frightened by a homing pigeon.

Emotional expressions form only the basis of a language, but there is in every company of well-bred fowls a multitude of low sounds which must denote interchange of idea; and when some student of gallinaceous physchology shall translate them into our language we shall find that a chicken yard is as full of talk as a woman's club—New York Sun.

Two Lincoln Stories.

Senator and Secretary Seward—or, as his friends generally called him, "the Governor"—like all good citizens, went home to vote, and the night before election made it a rule to have a "familiar talk with his neighbors." The familiar talk was always a carefully prepared and instructive speech—at least his own party thought so—which appeared in the papers all over the country the next morning. During the war he usually traveled in a private car, often with no company but his colored servant. Once he invited the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Auburn, the Rev. Dr. Hawley, and three venerable elders of the same church to return to Washington with him as his guests as well as en route. One of the first things to entertain his friends was, of course, to take them to see the President. He introduced them in his formal way, not omitting in either case the title and the denomination to which he belonged. That "reminded" Mr. Lincoln, and he said:

"When I was a young man living in ——, a little town in the State of Illinois, there was but one church in the town, and that was a Presbyterian. There were a few Universalists in the town, who once in a while held a meeting in the schoolhouse. One Sabbath during the service in the church some one came up the aisle and handed the pastor a notice, and quickly retired. While the hymn was being sung the minister looked at the notice. He had never been asked to give such a notice before; but by the time the long hymn was ended he was ready. He got up and said: 'Brethren and sisters, I have been requested to give notice here to-day that a set of people who believe in universal salvation will hold a meeting next Lord's Day in the red schoolhouse in the northeast district. But, brethren, we believe better things!'"

Dr. Hawley told me the story at the time, and I have never seen it in print.

Mr. Seward was an Episcopalian, and this story is told: On one of the occasions when President Lincoln's patience was tried by a self-appointed adviser who got warm and used strong language, Mr. Lincoln interrupted him by saying. "You are an Episcopalian, aren't you?" and when asked why he thought so, said: "You swear just like Seward, and he is." That was Mr. Lincoln's way of getting rid of such advisers.—Springfield Republican.

Optical Parliamentary Ill-Luck.

Sir Richard Temple, in his book "Life in Parliament," gives a pathetic account of the trouble of a British member who is unfortunate in his efforts to catch the Speaker's eye. He says it sometimes happens that a member may rise time after time, night after night, till his heart grows sick, and yet is not called. He sees man after man, with less claims than himself, called before him, and he naturally wonders. On the other hand, the position of the speaker must be difficult, inasmuch as he has to balance many considerations unknown to the members generally. He is probably the only man who knows every member of the House, and he must always have some reason in his own mind. The House, though never seeking to enter into the reasons, accepts his conclusions. He is the Speaker for all the members—not for the best man only, but for the whole body. It does not follow that the ablest men or the most experienced are called first by him. The House contains members juvenile and aged, famous and unknown, able and insignificant, potent and feeble—he must be Speaker for them alike—and for voting in the division lobby, there is equality between them all. To each one of them in turn, sooner or later, he will impartially afford a chance of being heard, if time shall permit. But if by ill-luck a man happens to rise often before he is called, the mental process must be distressing in the extreme. He has a speech in his head, but it is modified again and again by other speeches. His faculties will be strung up to the point of preparation, and will then be suddenly relaxed. Once more for him the tension will be restored, but again there will be collapse. The repetition of the process must make his brain reel, and rack his aching head. When at last he is called to speak, his performance will lose half the verve it would have had at first. To crown all, there is something of the ridiculous in the whole affair, so the sufferer will never confess his sufferings.

DIVORCE CURIOSITIES.

ODD LAWS IN ALL COUNTRIES FOR UNDOING THE TIES OF MARRIAGE.

Growth of Divorce in France—Queer Burmese and Chinese Customs—Distinguished Romans Who Cast Off Their Wives.

The question of divorce seems to be agitating pretty nearly every civilized country in the world just now. The French statisticians have tackled the subject, and show the extent to which divorce has grown in France. From 1884 to 1894 applications for divorces in France have exceeded 45,000, of which 40,000 have been granted.

M. Naquet, in urging the passage of the divorce law in France, optimistically predicted that it would prevent many ruptures, and that many couples would remain more firmly united from the fact that their tie would not be compulsory . Unfortunately, exactly the contrary was the result. The first year after the law was passed showed 1,700 divorces; last year there were over 8,000. When separations alone were permitted they only reached 3,000. While in 1882 the proportion was only 1 in 1,000, to-day it is 25 in 1,000.

From the history of divorce it appears that the propotion of unhappy marriages increases from the day divorce is legalized in a country. It appears among people of the highest civilization at the period of their decadence; from that time can be dated a retrograde movement in morals.

The Bible says that if a man after marrying a woman and living with her conceives a disgust of her, for some shameful fault, he shall draw out a decree of divorce, and, putting it into the woman's hands, shall send her out of his house. This was not always easily accomplished, because the majority of people did not know how to write, and the Levite or priest whom they consulted could refuse to grant their application if he saw fit.

In Egypt the laws authorized no divorce except in certain cases. Infidelity was punished severely; the man received 1,000 stripes, and the woman's nose was cut. In Babylon a public auction of all the girls of a marriageable age was held once a year. The untying of these knots was even more simple.

Confucius, writing on Chinese laws, established seven cases of repudiation, among which it appears that the wife could be put aside for excessive gossip or for not getting along with her father or mother-in-law. But there was this proviso. "The husband is advised to retain her if she will wear mourning for her mother-in-law for three years." As a matter of fact, the Chinese resort to the divorce courts very little, and they hold a widow marrying the second time in the utmost contempt. This custom is somewhat similar to that of the Hindoos in former years, when the widows flung themselves on the burning piles upon which their husbands' bodies were being consumed.

India recognizes certain causes for divorce. Up to the commencement of this century a childless Hindoo was permitted to lend his wife to a brother or other male relative in order to have children. In Burmah the women when marrying do not take their husbands' names, but retain their own, with the addendum of "wife of So-and-So." This makes it convenient for them to assume their previous status in public knowledge when they come to be divorced, as they are very likely to be, for divorce is easy in that country.

If a Burmese wife and husband quarrel and determine to separate, the wife, who always does all the marketing, goes out and buys two little candles of equal length, which are made especially for this use. She brings them home. She and her husband sit down on the floor, place the candles between them, and light them simultaneously. One candle stands for him, the other for her. The one whose candle burns out first rises and goes out of the house forever, with nothing but what he or she may have on. The other takes all the property.

This looks fair enough on the face of it, but it often happens that the wife on her way home with the candles takes a tiny scraping from the bottom of one of them. A very little will be enough. If the husband and the house are empty of pretty much everything but children, she takes the shortened candle and walks out free and content. But if the house is well furnished, and the husband's possessions are considerable, he gets the short candle and does the walking.

In Greece the main idea in marrying was to bring children into the world, males especially, for the good of the country; hence the great facility offered for breaking the marriage tie in case of sterility. The legislators recognized the right of divorce. At Athens divorce could be obtained by demand of one of the parties or by mutual consent. The case was argued before a tribunal. The parties on being freed were expressly forbidden to marry with a person younger than themselves. Grecian wives convicted of breaking the Seventh Commandment, were put to death, after having their hair cut off and their heads covered with hot ashes.

This barbarous custom was also adopted in Rome after the conquest of Carthage and Corinth. The Romans being matters of the world, only thought of revelling in their riches, and cut themselves adrift from the austere rules of virtue which had been theirs for centuries. Civil marriages and religious marriages were little by little cut into by divorce, which spread to such an extent as to almost suppress marriage. Nearly every cause was admitted—infidelity, sickness, old age, drunkenness, poison (which was very prevalent) going into the church, the army, and, lastly, mutual consent. The husband had a right to demand a divorce if the wife obtained false keys to the cellar, or if she went "gadding" to the theatre or circus to the neglect of her household duties.

All these reasons were but pretexts, after all. The virtuous Cato obtained a divorce in order to marry Marcia, Scila remarried with a woman whom he met at the circus. Cicero repudiated his wife to take Publilia, whose riches would enable him to pay off all his creditors; Caesar and Antony contracted four successive marriages; Pompey went as far as five. Juvenal felt justified in saying that faithful spouses were as rare as "white crows," or, as we say to-day, as "white blackbirds."

The law of Mahomet admits of divorce—though it is very little resorted to by the Mahometans—but exacts four months' reflection on the part of the husband before sending the letter of repudiation, which in this case is called tetoik boin—a temporary repudiation is called tetoik rid jee, which is used as a forewarning.

The nation which grants fewest divorces is England. A special court—the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Cases—copes with all matrimonial difficulties. Divorces can be obtained for "criminal conversation," and is denied for personal injuries and neglect. A rupture of the marriage tie is granted only for infidelity, and this is known to the court as the "specific remedy."

Switzerland grants more divorces than any other country. Since the Federal law of 1874 was passed the proportion has risen from 47 to 1,000. In Sweden since 1831, in Holland sine 1851, and in Saxony since the Federal law of 1875, the proportion has doubled and even tripled. In Belgium it has multiplied sixfold.

THE TALLEST EXTANT ANIMAL.

Male Giraffes Have Reached the Height of Eighteen Feet.

Compared with their extinct allies of earlier periods of the earth's history, it may be laid down as a general rule that the large animals of the present day are decidedly inferior in point of size. During the later portion of the territorial period, for instance, before the incoming of the glacial epoch, when mammals appear to have attained their maximum development, there lived elephants alongside of which ordinary individuals of the existing species would have looked almost drawfs, while the cave bear and the cave hyena attained considerably larger dimensions than their living representatives, and some of the sabletooth tigers must have been considerably larger than the biggest African lion or Bengal lion. Again, the remains of red deer, bison, and wild oxen disinterred from the caverns and other surficial deposits of this country indicate animals far superior in size to their degenerate descendants of the present day, while some of the extinct pigs from the Siwalik hills of northern India might be compared in stature to a tapir rather than to an ordinary wild boar. The same story is told of reptiles, the giant tortoise of the Siwalik hills, in spite of its dimensions having been considerably exaggerated, greatly exceeding in size the largest living giant tortoises of either the Mascarene or the Galapagos Islands. The latter rocks have also yielded the remains of a long-snouted crocodile, allied to the gavial of the Ganges, which probably measured from fifty to sixty in length, whereas it is very doubtful if any existing member of the order exceeds half the smaller of these dimensions, if, moreover, we took into account totally extinct types, such as the megatheres and mylods of South America, and contrasting them with their nearest living allies—in this instance the sloths and anteaters—the discrepancy in size would be still more marked, but such a comparison would scarcely be analogous to the above.

To every rule there is, however, an exception, and there are a few groups of living large mammals whose existing members appear never to have been surpassed in size by their fossil relatives. Foremost among these are the whales, which now appear to include the largest members of the order which have ever existed. The so-called white, or square-mouthed rhinoceros of South Africa seems almost to be fully equal in size to any of its extinct ancestors; and the same is certainly true of the giraffe, which may even exceed all its predecessors in this respect. Whether however, the fossil giraffes, of which more anon, were or were not the equals in height of the largest individual of the living species, there is no question but that the latter is by far the tallest of all living mammals, and that it was only rivaled in this respect among extinct forms by its aforesaid ancestors. Moreover, if we exclude creatures like some of the gigantic dinosaurian reptiles of the secondary epoch, which, so to speak, gained an unfair advantage as regards height by sitting on their hind legs in a kangaroo-like manner, and limit our comparison to such as walk on all four feet in the good old-fashioned way, we shall find that giraffes are not only the tallest mammals, but likewise the tallest of all animals that have ever existed.

As regards the height attained by the male of the tallest of quadrupeds, there is, unfortunately, a lack of accurate information, and since it is probable that the majority of those now living are inferior in size to the largest individuals which existed when the species was far more numerous than at present. It is to be feared that this deficiency in our knowledge is not very likely to be remedied. By some writers the height of the male giraffe is given at sixteen feet, and that of the female at fourteen feet, but this is certainly below the reality. For instance, Mr. H. A. Bryden states that a female he shot in Southern Africa measured seventeen feet to the summits of the horns. From the evidence of very large though badly preserved specimen in the Natural History Museum it may, however, be inferred that fine male certainly reach the imposing height of eighteen feet.—Knowledge.

The Gothenburg System.

The principle of the Gothenburg system is the establishment by the Government of a corporation whose shares yield practically nothing to holders for the purpos of monopolizing the trade in liquor. The foundation of the plan rests upon a popular desire to combat inordinate liquor drinking, and the element which makes up its foundation comprises the moral recitude and practical and sentimental patriotism required to induce investors to put their money into something which pays them almost no direct return. Profits are made up to a high figure in some instances of the adoption and practice of the system: but they are never allowed to assume a proportion which will excite the business zeal of the shareholders. When they become too large for the principle of unselfishness involved, they go to extraordinary charitable interests. But the liquor sold is not marked down cheap for the purpose of reducing profits. On the contrary, it is marked up, and is going steadily higher. The reduction in the profits of the shareholders below what would be normal receipts is accomplished by the surrender of large proportions of the net incomes to the city or town government upon the understanding that the fund shall go to public works or to charity.—Providence Journal.

England and America.

When Lucan spoke of a more than civil war, he must surely have alluded to such a war as would be waged between Great Britain and North America. The parent devastating the fair inheritance of the child, kindred hands employed in rooting up that prosperity, the increase of which has overflowed in a tide of riches into this island, are subjects too painful for contemplation, and from which the mind of every Englishman turns aside with unconquerable disgust.

Let us have war, if need be, with any other nation, but not with those colonies—the proudest historic monument we possess, the most enduring memorial of Anglo-Saxon greatness.—Robert Lowe.

Keeping Cabbage for Winter Use.

To keep cabbage so as to have them convenient for use during the winter a grower suggests as follows: Cut off the stalks and pack the heads in a clean barrel, filling in with dry, clean sawdust, as the cabbages are put in, until the barrel is full, leaving a good layer of sawdust on top. Set the barrel in the barn or under shelter, but not in a damp cellar. They may freeze, but it will do them no harm.

A Gun Without Triggers.

A safety gun for amateur sportsmen, in which the usual triggers are replaced by buttons to release the strikers, three underneath and one on top, the latter being worked by the thumb and the former by the fingers of the right hand in firing either from the hip or the shoulder. The pushes are so arranged that unless both are operated simultaneously the firearm will not be discharged.

A Savage's Iron Foundry.

Civilization is making rapid strides in South Africa, but the Bushman yet makes his own knife, and with considerable ingenuity. They dig a little iron, find a broken hatchet or a hoop from a rum barrel, and out of these parts they form even axes, adzes, hammers and about everything they need in that line. These implements are, of course, very crude, but the native has much patience, and will not forego his bottle of rum for the cost of the imported tool.

SNAKE BITE ANTIDOTE.

STRYCHNINE NEUTRALIZES THE VENOM OF DEADLY SERPENTS.

Whisky at Last Discounted—The Bulletin Which the Smithsonian Institution is About to Publish on the Subject Will Gladden the Hearts of the Prohibitionists—Two Poisons Which Kill Each Other.

A sure antidote for snake poison has been found. The discovery will mark an epoch in the history of medicine. For thousands of years the secret has been sought in vain. It was Prince Lucien Bonaparte who, in 1843, first made a chemical analysis of the venom of the viper, separating its active principle, which he called "viperine." A similar principle has been separated from the poison of the rattlesnake by Dr. Weir Mitchell, which he has termed "crotaline." But until now no knowledge has been obtained of anything antagonistic to this toxic agent, though alleged "cures" for snake bites have been plentiful enough. The remedy so long looked for has been found at last in strychnine.

The deadly fluid secreted by certain species of snakes was made a subject of study from a very early date, but the old-time investigators knew not how to solve the intricate problems of organic chemistry. All that they accomplished was to produce a prodigious number of antidotes, so-called, most of which in their turn were declared infallible. Not one of them was worth a penny. The most notable work in this line has been performed by Dr. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia, who, for the sake of obtaining sufficient quantities of the poison, has somtimes kept as many as 100 serpents in his laboratory. His method for securing the venom for examination was to seize the snake by the neck with tongs, forcing a saucer between the jaws. The enraged reptile would then bite into the saucer, on which the poison emitted was left.

The substance thus obtained is a yellowish, transparent, sticky fluid, without smell or taste, easily dissolved in water. When dried it will retain its toxic properties for any length of time apparently, looking like a gum or varnish, and it has been preserved for 22 years without altering in the least. On this gronud it is advisable to handle with caution even the dried fangs of snakes long dead. Boiling, unless continued for a long time, does not render the fluid harmless.

It is a fact sufficiently well known that poisoning and even death sometimes results from the bites of rats, dogs, cats, horses, cows and even man himself. Recent investigations have proved that in such cases the consequences are due to the presence in the saliva of minute organisms. These bacteria find their way into the wound and, rapidly multiplying, cause blood-poisoning. Not so very long ago it was imagined that some sort of bacterium in snake poison might be accountable for its effects. Drs. Wolfenden and Williams tried to grow cobra venom on gelatine, proceeding on this theory. If it had been correct they would have been able to produce any quantity of the toxic agent by artifice; but they were entirely unsuccessful. It is now established beyond question that serpent venom is a specific poison, having nothing to do with bacteria. It paralyzes the heart and the nervous centres.

Alcohol has long held the first place in popular esteem as an antidote for snake poison. In truth, it is not such at all, though useful to sustain the vitality of the person bitten against the attack made upon it by the toxic agent. It stimulates the nerve centres and the action of the heart if taken in small doses. But the mistake ordinarily made is to pour into the patient large quantities of whisky, the effect of which is exactly opposite of that required. In such great doses alcohol depresses instead of stimulating the vital functions, intoxication, far from helping the cure, aids the poison. And, by the way, people have often died from snake bite who were bitten when dead drunk.

With the newly-discovered antidote the case is exactly opposite. Danger is far more likely to result from hesitation in using it liberally than from an overdose. Strychnine—itself a poison scarcely less terrible than snake venom—acts directly upon the nerves, stimulating and turning on their batteries, which the snake poison seeks to depress and turn off. Acting with the unerring certainty of a chemical test, it neutralizes the effects of the serpent venom. But it must be administered in extraordinary quantities, even to the point of spasmodic twitching of the muscles.

In fact, the ordinary doses must be greatly exceeded, and the administration of the strychnine must be continued, even if the total quantity injected within an hour or two amounts to what in the absence of snake poison would be a dangerous, if not fatal, dose. The few failures among the numerous successes with the drug thus far recorded have nearly all been traceable to an insufficiency of the antidote. In urgent cases as much as twenty to twenty-five minims should be given to any person over 15 years of age. If at the end of twenty minutes the symptoms show no abatement a second injection of the same strength should be made promptly, and unless then decided improvement is perceptible, a third one after a like interval. The action of the drug when applied as an antidote is not cumulative. The tendency to relapses is always great where much venom has been absorbed. Apparently yielding to the strychnine for the time, the insidious poison, after an interval during which it seems to ahve been conquered, all at once reasserts its presence, and has to be met by fresh injections, regardless of the quantity previously administered. With children the amount of the remedy to be given must not be judged by the age of the child, but by the amount of venom to be counteracted, the degree of danger chiefly depending on the size of the snake. The bigger the reptile, of course, the more poison it has. Furthermore, it is to be remembered that of all American serpents the rattlesnake is the most dangerous, the copperhead less so and the water moccasin least.

In case of snake-bite, the first thing to be done is to tie a string or a hendkerchief as tightly as posible between the wound and the heart, whenever practicable. Next, cut deeply into the punctures made by the fangs, so as to cause the blood to flow freely; suck the blood from the wound—a proceeding perfectly harmless, inasmuch as the poison does not harm when taken internally. Then carefully loosen the ligature so as to admit a small quantity of fresh blood to the member, in order that mortification may not ensue. Small doses of whisky may now be given at frequent intervals. If the patient has to wait for the arrival of a doctor, this is the time to try all means to produce perspiration. The physician will administer extract of jaborandi, for a sudorific and diuretic, and hypodermic injections of fifteen or twenty minims of liquid strychnia, repeated every twenty minutes until slight spasms appear.

It has been ascertained that human beings and other animals are rendered comparatively immune against snake poison by repeated small doses of the venom. This suggests the idea of preventive inoculation, which though not be decidedly so in such serpent-cursed countries as India and Australia, or to travellers in regions where snakes are plentiful and dangerous. It is a fact that the poisonous snakes are proof against their own venom. That this is true has been demonstrated repeatedly by inoculating such serpents with the poisonous secretion from their salivary glands. It is believed that there exists in the blood of the venomous snake some agent similar to the poison itself and that the presence of this toxic principle is accountable for the immunity exhibited.

COTTON PICKING.

One of the most remarkable mechanical devices recently introduced in Georgia is a cotton-picking machine. The dimensions of the machine are approximately nine feet in height. It is mounted on four metal-carrying wheels and in general appearance is not unlike a road engine, except that it is hauled by horses and receives the power to propel the working mechanism from the traction wheels. The rear wheels are four feet in diameter. The tires are eight inches wide and cleated on the rim, to provide traction, ample to operate the mechanism for picking the cotton from the plants and the stripping devices and elevators in motion.

The object of the elevators is to deposit the cotton in large sacks located at the top near the rear end of the machine. The total weight of the machine is about 1,600 pounds, and of extremely light draught, and it can be drawn and operated by one pair of horses. The cotton-picking apparatus can be readily and almost instantly raised or lowered to suit the condition of the cotton and the surface of the ground on which it is operated. The picking and stripping mechanisms are entirely incased with light metallic cases, except the elongated slots, through which the picking needles protrude. The needles are mounted on suitable bearings in vertical carriers, 34 in number, 17 on each side, being linked together, working simultaneously. The gears are incased within the carriers. Each carrier in making the circuit of its oblong course, making nearly one turn on its own axis, and each needle while in the plant makes 15 revolutions, and five revolutions in the opposite direction while being stripped.

The needles are inserted longitudinally into the plant to an extended position, then rotated rapidly and moved backward at a speed corresponding to the forward rate of travel of the machine, thereby avoiding any movement of the needles in relation to the plant except a rotary motion. The needles are withdrawn longitudinally from the plant and pass between yielding stationary strippers, whereby the cotton is deposited in elevators. The capacity of the machine is from six to eight acres per day, and from two to four bales per day, according to the yield. It takes 15 ordinary hands a whole day to pick one bale, averaging about 100 pounds each, or 590 pounds of lint after it is ginned.—Chicago Times.

Eternity of To-Day.

There are many heroic souls who sit enduring patiently the trials and tribulations of their lives and who find their only consolation in a persistent looking forward to the joys of eternity, which they expect to gain when their experience here is over.

It is a pathetic thing to consider the efforts of these patient, well-meaning waiters, who are trying to find comfort, warmth and joy from their contemplation of the dim future.

Sometimes this dreary fortitude seems mistaken as well as woeful, not because the hope cherished in the waiting hearts is delusive, but because such a persistent living in the future blinds the sufferer to a great deal of to-day's present good, which he might realize without losing his future advantage.

There is an immense amount of commonsense to be found in the theory that after all, eternity is now, and now is all the eternity we shall ever get. To-day is part of our eternity quite as much as to-morrow will be, or next year or next century. We talk much of "eternal happiness," and this "eternity," we say, "has no beginning or end,' yet the inclusive fact that to-day is part of our eternity, and that if we do not get some eternal happiness out of each to-day we will never get any at all. This we do not realize or act upon.

And when we have waked thoroughly up to the fact that this painfully strained living in the future is a mistake, we may find to-day is not so barren as we thought. As its possibilities unfold, and the hidden eternal happiness it holds comes to light, we begin to find out how much eternal happiness we have thrown away because we have not taken each day what the eternity of every day brought us. The eternity of to-day holds something for each of us. What is it?—Harper's Bazar.

He Was Not Ashamed of His Color.

Fred Douglas, though very sensitive on the subject of any distinction drawn between negroes and mulattoes to the disparagement of the former, was always ready to crack a joke on his own color. He often laughed over the witticism of Mrs. Fred Grant's at his expense, when they met at the Chicago convention of 1888. "The convention had been in session several days, and there had been some balloting the day before," he said, relating the story to a friend. "I was sitting with Mrs. Grant and her party, watching the balloting. To my surprise one vote was cast for me for president of the United States. It had no sooner been announced by the tellers than Mrs. Grant turned to me, and said: 'You must be the dark horse of this convention, Mr. Dauglass.'" At a meeting of the free religionists in Boston some years ago, he was among the speakers. Referring to the rule of the assembly which limited the time of speeches, he said he never made a short speech that he was satisfied with, and never made a long one that anybody else was satisfied with. "I came here," said he, "not to speak, but to listen, to learn, not to teach; in fact," he added, "I came here merely to give color to the occasion.—Kate Field's Washington.

If you lack a jardiniere in which to put a blossoming plant that is to be placed on the dinner table or in other conspicuous places, you can always make it fine enough for the occasion by wrapping the plant crock in creped tissue paper and tying it with a satin ribbon. Bring the edge of the paper above that of the crock and pass it over the fingers to stretch it, so that it will form a frill. Tie in place with a band of satin ribbon, with the ends made in a pert bow. Moss green and white papers are both good colors to use for the purpose, and the color of the ribbon must be decided by the complexion of the flower and its surroundings. In banking a mantel with potted plants, the best effects with many plants is secured by turning the plant crocks over on the side, so that the projecting plant only is visible.

Non-Freezing Pipes.

A simple combination cock, particularly useful for domestic water supplies, has an additional branch formed upon it on the delivery or exit side, and in this another screw-down valve is placed for drawing off the water after the cock has shut off the supply. This valve is especially useful for clearing pipes prior to a frost, or for emptying a circuit for repairs.

A HARD FIGHT FOR MONTAGUE

No Walkover For the Dr. in Haldimand.

M'CARTHYITE CANDIDATE CHOSEN

Cayuga, Ont., April 6.—At the mass meeting held in the Court House here yesterday to name a candidate in opposition to Dr. Montague on the Manitoba school question, Mr. Jeffrey McCarthy, a member of Mr. D'Alton McCarthy's firm at Barrie, was the unanimous choice. The contest promises to become a national one, as a strong delegation of speakers is on the way here from Manitoba to fight the battle of provincial rights.

The attendance at the meeting was not so large as expected, although locally there was a good deal of interest in the proceedings. Yesterday Organizer Fee met the McCarthyite executive and submitted several names, from among whom they chose Jeffrey A. McCarthy.

The candidate-elect arrived in the morning, in company with E. Douglas Armour, Q.C., of Toronto. D'Alton McCarthy was billed to appear, but wired that he was unexpectedly detained by a case at Perth. There was considerable disappointment over his failure to come. The speakers of the afternoon were Mr. Armour and the candidate, whose acceptance was received with applause.

The issue on which the campaign will be fought is on the Manitoba school question. The speakers maintained that the Roman Catholics had no more right to have Separate schools than any other denomination in Manitoba. Manitoba was settled by people from the European countries. Many of them had settled in colonies and had their own religious views. It would be unjust to other religious denominations to grant Separate schools to the Roman Catholics. The McCarthyites are determined to force the fight on this issue. They also touched on the trade policy, claiming there should be a revision and lowering of the tariffs. Nothing could be learned of the feelings of the people in the contest from the meeting to-day.

The feeling around Cayuga is that Dr. Montague's personal popularity will win the election for him. He is said to be on excellent terms with people of all shades of politics, and they will continue to support him. The county town of Haldimand has never been disturbed by race or creed troubles.

Nearly all the Roman Catholics in the riding, representing about 250 votes, live here or hereabouts. There are no Separate schools, no Orange lodges and the P.P.A. is only known in this vicinity by report; hence the people are not particularly worked up over the school question.

Around Hagersville, however, there is said to be much more feeling. The McCarthyites allege the Government is taking unusual measures to insure victory. Tales are flying round about $10,000 having been sent up, but the purchasable element say they have not yet seen any of it. The Liberals, who are looking on at the fight, expect Dr. Montague to win. He will get the Roman Catholic vote to a man and all the Indian vote.

On the other hand, the German Liberals of Rainham are said to be utterly indifferent as to whether Manitoba has any schools at all or not, and therefore they are taking very little interest in the contest. It will be necessary for this vote to come out against Montague to make the contest interesting.

A despatch was read to the meeting from Stewart Mulvey of Winnipeg, Past Grand Master of the Manitoba Grand Lodge. He said: "Manitoba will do what it can, will send good men to help you. Wish you every success." The reading of this message elicited considerable applause.

The McCarthyites intend to put up a hot fight. Among the speakers who will take part are the Hon S. C. Biggs, of Toronto, exMayor Pearson of Winnipeg, Colonel O'Brien and Messrs. A. T. Hunter, John Armstrong and J. M. Godfrey of Toronto.

It is also more than probable that Hon. Clifford Sifton, Attorney-General of Manitoba, will take a hand.

USED THE MAILS TO DEFRAUD.

But Was Only Fined the Small Sum of $5 and Costs.

Picton, Ont., April 6.—Burton Spafford, charged with using the mails with intent to defraud, was tried by Judge Merrill to-day. He pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs, and to refund all money obtained by the fraudulent advertisement.

WIMAN NOT OUT OF THE WOODS.

The Prosecution Serve Notice of Appeal and Will Fight to the End.

New York, April 5.—The District Attorney to-day served notice of appeal from the decision of the General Term, reversing the verdict in the case of Erastus Wiman, who was convicted of forgery. The case will, it is understood, be fought to the bitter end.

Irish Land Bill Second Reading.

London, April 5.—In the House of Commons to-day the Irish Land bill was read a second time without a division.

The House passed James Henry Dalziel's motion in favor of second ballots in Parliamentary elections, where no candidate receives an absolute majority. The vote was 132 to 72.

Britain Has Ignored the U.S.

London, April 5.—The Morning Post has a paragraph to the effect that inquiries at the Foreign Office elicited the fact that the United States and England have not exchanged views regarding England's trouble with Venezuela.

Women Suffrage in Salt Lake.

Salt Lake, April 6.—The question of female suffrage was finally disposed of in the constitutional convention to-day. By a vote of 52 to 42 the convention refused to refer the matter to a committee to submit the matter in a separate article to the voters, and the clause adopting suffrage as part of the constitution was adopted 75 to 15.

A Hold Up at St Catharines.

St. Catharines, April 6.—Last night A. M. Smith was held up in Geneva-street by three masked men at the point of a revolver. They ordered him to throw up his hands and relieved him of all the money he had, $20. His watch was not touched.

Fast Atlantic Service.

London, April 6.—The new and quickest Atlantic mail service began to-day with the departure of the Lucania from Liverpool.

Wreck of a Tramp-Laden Freight.

Alton, Ills., April 6.—Four tramps were almost instantly killed and 15 others badly injured in a freight wreck on the Chicago and Alton Railroad near here to-day. The wreck was caused by a broken truck which allowed a dozen cars to pile in a heap. It is estimated that 75 tramps were stealing rides on the train.

Cape Delegate Hoffmeyer Ill.

Capetown, April 5.—Mr. J. Hofmeyer, the Afrikander leader who was a delegate to the Inter-Colonial Conference at Ottawa will shortly resign his seat in the Cape Assembly on account of ill-health.

Jilted, He Shot Himself.

Omaha, Neb., April 6.—F. Adams Colvin, formerly editor of The Register at Randolph, Ia., committed suicide at 617 South 28th-street, this afternoon by shooting. The ball passed through his head. He was disappointed in love.

THE RUIN OF OSCAR WILDE.

London, April 6.—The Old Bailey court room was crowded almost to suffocation yesterday when Mr. Carson resumed his speech in behalf of the Marquis of Queensberry.

Sir Edward Clarke, Wilde's counsel, interrupted with the statement that he had come to the painful conclusion that, in view of Wilde's literature, he could not expect the jury to find the Marquis of Queensberry guilty of libel on the actual words used by the defendant.

The jury then rendered a verdict of not guilty, to which Sir Edward Clarke assented, and supplemented their verdict with the declaration that the charges made by the defendant against Wilde which constituted the libel complained of were true, and that they had been made in the public interest.

The judge granted an order requiring Wilde to pay the costs of the defence. Wilde was not in court. The Marquis of Queensberry's solicitor sent to the public prosecutor a copy of the statements of all the witnesses which the defence intended to call to the stand, together with a full report of the trial as far as it had gone.

Mr. Lewis, Solicitor of the Treasury, applied at the Bow-street Police Court for a warrant for immediate execution, and Oscar Wilde was promptly arrested and taken to Scotland Yard. Two of his plays are now running at London theatres, but his name has been withdrawn from the bills.

FRANCE'S REPLY TO BRITAIN.

She Will Maintain Her Plain Rights in Africa, But Looks for a Reconciliation of Interests.

Paris, April 6.—M. Hanotaux, Minister of Foreign Affairs, spoke in the Senate last evening concerning Sir Edward Grey's statement in the House of Commons last week. The debate in the Commons as to the British and Egyptian sphere of influence in Africa, he said, had astonished him. France opposed decidedly the pretensions of the Royal Niger Company, which aimed to monopolize trade in a vast region. The negotiations as to the territory affected by the company's claims were now in progress. As to the Upper Nile region, France demanded that England state her claims explicitly. France would reserve her decision and liberty of action pending England's reply. It was advisable to abstain from imprudent statements. France would maintain her plain rights. He preferred, however, not to make any affirmations likely to hinder the present negotiations. He was convinced that when the time of decision should come, the two great nations would find means of reconciling their interests with those of civilization and progress.

Why No Mention of the Expedition?

London, April 6.—The Standard says: M. Hanotaux's speech was moderate and courteous, but did not relieve the strain. In some respects it rather accentuates the points of difference. His silence as to the French expedition to the Nile Valley could not have been accidental, although the subject cannot be treated as immaterial. We hope that communications will be resumed speedily, and that the Nile and Niger expeditions, which can only be regarded as barriers to a friendly settlement, will be recalled.

The Times says: We acknowledge with pleasure M. Hanotaux's moderation and evident desire to avoid placing obstacles in the way of friendly discussion. We must regret, however, that no corrective was applied to the inflammatory statements of the press.

UNCLE SAM KEEPING POSTED.

Movements and Whereabouts of British Warships Carefully Noted.

Washington, April 5.—It is expected that the flagship of the British squadron in the Pacific, the Royal Arthur, which arrived at Panama yesterday morning, will visit Corinto, Nicaragua, which is the nearest port to Managua, the capital, before April 16, when Great Britain expects an answer to her ultimatum. The small British cruiser, Wild Swan, which left Callao March 7, and is now in the vicinity of Panama, will join the Royal Arthur at Corinto. Officials in Washington express little concern about the movement of these ships, as they are not particularly formidable vessels.

The only other ships of the British Pacific station are the Hyacinthe, 950 tons, which was at Callao last month; the Nymphe, 2000 tons, which left Honolulu for Esquimalt on March 17, and the Pheasant, 1200 tons, under repairs at Esquimalt.

It is not likely that many, if any, British war vessels will threaten the east coast of Nicaragua. The flagship Blake, with the Canada, Cleopatra, Buzzard, Mohawk, Partridge and Pelican were to rendezvous at Bermuda in March, on their way north. The Tartar is at Savanilla, guarding the mouth of the Orinoco, the Magicienne was at Barbadoes at last accounts, and the Tourmaline is at St. John's, Nfld.

TERMS OF PEACE.

Japan's Demands Which China Must Accede To

London, April 6.—A Central News despatch from Shanghai says it is reported on good authority that the principal conditions of peace include the independence of Corea, the payment of indemnity of 400,000,000 yen, and the cession to Japan of Formosa and Liao Tung, including Port Arthur. The last mentioned condition, the cession of Liao Tung and Port Arthur, is objected to by China.

Extraditing Jabez Balfour.

London, April 6.—A despatch from Buenos Ayres says that Jabez Spencer Balfour, the Liberator wrecker, has arrived there apparently very much depressed. He is expected to sail next Monday.

Cape Colony Federation.

Cape Town, April 6.—In a speech here last evening Premier Cecil Rhodes said he was preparing the way to federate the Government of the colony of Rhodesia with that of Cape Colony.

Peas—The market is dull, with little demand. Car lots are quoted at 57c to 58c outside.

A Gun Without Triggers.

A safety gun for amateur sportsmen, in which the usual triggers are replaced by buttons to release the strikers, three underneath and one on top, the latter being worked by the thumb and the former by the fingers of the right hand in firing either from the hip or the shoulder. The pushes are so arranged that unless both are operated simultaneously the firearm will not be discharged.

A Savage's Iron Foundry.

Civilization is making rapid strides in South Africa, but the Bushman yet makes his own knife, and with considerable ingenuity. They dig a little iron, find a broken hatchet or a hoop from a rum barrel, and out of these parts they form even axes, adzes, hammers and about everything they need in that line. These implements are, of course, very crude, but the native has much patience, and will not forego his bottle of rum for the cost of the imported tool.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

Tolls on Highways Cut One Half.

THE CONSUMPTION HOSPITAL.

The Amendment to the Agriculture and Arts Bill—Inspection of Building Societys' Books—An Electric Railway Bill Thrown Out.

Toronto, April 6.—The proceedings of the House yesterday were very dull and uninteresting. A number of Government bills were considered and reported in committee of the whole House. Among these was the bill respecting succession duties.

Hon. Mr. Dryden added a clause to his Agriculture and Arts bill, providing that directors of exhibitions shall prohibit all kinds of gambling and games of chance within 300 yards of the fair grounds.

Despite the determined opposition on the part of road companies all over the province, the Municipal Committee passed Mr. Flatt's bill reducing the toll on one-horse rigs by one-half and on two-horse rigs by one-third. The new rates will be: For one-horse rigs 1 cent per mile and for each additional horse 1 cent. The present rates are: For one-horse rigs 2 cents, and for each additional horse 1 cent.

A deputation, led by W. J. Gage, representing the Board of Trade and city medical men, waited upon the Government yesterday with reference to the proposed hospital for consumptives. They asked that a per diem allowance be made for each patient, and they also requested that such allowance should be continued when patients were removed from Toronto to the branch hospital to be established in the Rocky Mountains. Sir Oliver Mowat, in reply, expressed the opinion that there was a general feeling throughout the country that the Government was contributing as much to hospitals as the revenue justified, and as for the hospital outside of Ontario, he thought it extremely improbable that the Government, or the House, would consent to make any allowance. They would, however, consider the qu[illegible] "We will," he added, "be glad [illegible] whatever we can properly or co[illegible]ently with the demands on our revenue."

The special committee appointed to consider Dr. McKay's bill, providing for the inspection of building societies, held its first meeting yesterday. Representatives of all the leading building societies were present, and evidence both favoring and opposing inspection was adduced. It was the general opinion that the Government might so arrange the law as to permit the old line loan companies to do business under one act and the building societies proper to conduct their operations under the provisions of a separate act. The principle of a minute inspection of financial societies was looked upon as impracticable.

In the Railway Committee yesterday there was an interesting and close fight between two small electric railroad companies and a big one composed of a syndicate, a prominent member of which is H. A. Everett of the Toronto Street Railway. By the skin of their teeth the little fellows were victorious. The two small companies belonged to London and St. Thomas respectively, and they asked for powers to construct local lines. Their opponent was the London and Western Ontario Co., who wanted to run a line, including both these districts. Mr. Awrey contended that if Mr. Everett's company were given the privilege it would simply mean granting a monopoly for the entire western district. The vote in committee was 16 to 16, but Chairman Bronson turned the balance in favor of the local companies.

A delegation from the Provincial Constabulary Association waited on the Government with a petition, embodying the resolutions passed at the recent convention of the association at Hamilton. Among the deputation were:

J. H. Johnson, high constable, Picton;
Ezra Briggs, high constable, Walkerton;
J. C. Tisdale, high constable, Woodstock;
T. Bell, high constable, Chatham;
Thomas Wasson, constable, Toronto;
John Hurst, high constable, Brampton;
J. Tidsberry, chief constable, East York;
William Boyd, chief constable, Saltfleet;
J.B.Hughes, high constable, Orangeville;
S. Wismer, chief constable, Grimsby.

"I can tell you we have married men with families working in our shop making washboards who earn as little as $5 per week." This was the startling statement made yesterday by a witness before the Public Accounts Committee of the Local Legislature. The witness was J. C. Taylor of Taylor, Scott & Co., Toronto, and he was showing, at the request of Mr. Marter, the effect of prison labor on the ordinary free workman. His firm had, he said, discontinued making broom handles, because, whilst it cost them $14 or $15 to make a thousand, they could buy them from the Central Prison for $10 per thousand. Washboards which had cost the firm to make $1.31 per thousand formerly sold for $1.70. Now, through the competition of the Central Prison, per Nelson & Sons and Walter Woods & Co., they were selling at less than they cost to make.

In consequence of this keen competition the wages of all their employes had been considerably reduced, one man earning only $6.50 per week, whereas he used to make $11. He estimated that the wages paid by his firm had been brought down 40 per cent. In broom-making they did not, he said, feel the competition so keenly as in the wood-working lines; but this he explained by asserting that Nelson & Sons, who took all the prison's brooms, did not cut down the selling price to as low a figure as they might.

The broom contracts between the Nelsons and the prison for last year being shown to Mr. Taylor, he pronounced that they were most favorable to the contractors. He had, he said, never had an opportunity of tendering for the broom contract. Last summer he heard that the contract was expiring and wrote to Inspector Noxon about it; but he received a reply saying it had been renewed. He would have been willing to pay more than Nelsons' contract; there was no large maker in Canada who would not be willing to do so. One manufacturer he knew had expressed his willingness to pay 10 cents a dozen more than was being paid by Messrs. Nelson and then would consider it a good bargain.

Broom-making at the prison, Mr. Taylor assured the committee, had had the effect of reducing wages 10 per cent. all round, with the result that no skilled mechanic earned such small wages as the broom-maker. If Messrs. Nelson were to cut the prices for brooms as low as they might, he declared it would close his firm up.

Tuberculosis may be stamped out by vigorous effort, but it is time to consider whether inbreeding, in some cases, has not weakened the herds and rendered the members more susceptible to the disease. Vigor is the best safeguard, and only vigorous and healthy animals should be used for breeding. It will always be an advantage to procure a male from a herd not akin to the cows. Cholera in hogs has been greatly prevented by avoiding inbreeding within the past ten years, and that fact is one that should not be overlooked by breeders of cattle.

A simple combination cock, particularly useful for domestic water supplies, has an additional branch formed upon it on the delivery or exit side, and in this another screw-down valve is placed for drawing off the water after the cock has shut off the supply. This valve is especially useful for clearing pipes prior to a frost, or for emptying a circuit for repairs.

WOMAN ON THE BICYCLE.

Some women deprive themselves of the pleasure of riding a bicycle on account of the awkward appearance presented by a good many feminine riders, especially those who go along with knees rising and falling laboriously. They fear that they may commit the same faults, not knowing that the ungraceful exhibition is simply the result of one thing—ignorance concerning the choice of a bicycle.

If a woman were about to mount a horse one of the first things to which she would give her attention would be to the length of the stirrup leather, which she would adjust to suit her stature, otherwise she would rise and fall in the saddle in too pronounced a manner and her appearance would be more or less unsightly. The proper adjustment of pedal and saddle in the case of the bicycle is equally important. Bicycles are made in different heights from the saddle to the pedal, namely, 21, 23, 25, 29 inches. If a woman with long legs has one of the low machines, it will be almost impossible for her to ride with grace. In choosing a bicycle a woman should test it by sitting on it while it is stationary and moving the pedal round with her foot. In this way she can ascertain if the seat is too high or too low for her.

When the pedal is at the lowest point the foot should reach it comfortably, not so as to exert full foot pressure, but with about the same pressure as the toe gives the stirrup when sitting at ease in the saddle or what it gives to the floor when in a comfortable rocker. It is not safe to have a pedal that the foot cannot control all the way round; while if the pedal does not give the leg a full stretch the result will be an ungainly jerking up of the skirts.

The length of the crank of the pedal is even more important. In length the crank varies from 7 to 5½ inches, making a difference of 3 inches in the rise and fall. As the pedal revolves it raises the foot and knee just so much at each revolution, and if the elevation is too great an appearance of awkwardness is produced. Apart from producing awkwardness, the long crank has other serious drawbacks.

If a woman gets a bicycle with the proper height of saddle and a moderately short crank, she may be a graceful rider if she will observe one rule—not to turn the knee outward, but inward, in pressing the foot down. That it is natural to turn the knee out is demonstrated by the small boy, whose knees waggle from side to side like governors on an engine, as he rides his bicycle. With a woman this action stretches the skirts to their utmost width, and causes a very bad showing from behind, and from the front. It will also be found that there is much less fatigue from the inward stroke than from the outward, as the pressure is more direct and with less friction.

There is no royal road to learning to ride the modern safety. It is largely a matter of confidence. Some women learn in an hour and others in a week. Where it is practicable, it is best to go to one of the schools and take a lesson or two from a competent instructor. If this cannot be done, the next plan is to mount the machine near a wall or board fence, where there is a slight incline, and holding the handle with one hand and fending along the wall with the other, move along until confidence is attained. The reason why the wall is advocated rather than a friend with a strong arm is that if the friend is a male he will insist on being at the side of the learner, so as to be ready to receive her in his arms when she is about to fall. The prettier the girl is the more he will adhere to this line of conduct. So long as the support is in full view the rider can see what assistance is given, and she gets rattled the moment she sees it withdrawn. The assistant should keep well to the rear and should support the rider by holding the machine so that the learner cannot tell when the supporting hand is drawn. In this way the correct balance is learned before the rider knows it.

This is the reason why so many girls taught by friends are three times as long in learning to ride as those taught in schools, and even when expert seldom have the style of the school-taught pupil. Miss Frances E. Willard, who is an enthusiastic rider, said recently that she had three teachers before she could master the wheel, and that it was only by the method last described she learned to ride. It took Lady Henry Somerset two months to learn to mount and ride, but by following the directions here given any woman should be able to learn in six lessons of twenty minutes each.

Here is a description of the latest costume for a woman to wear when bicycling. It includes a loose blouse waist and has a skirt made of some loosely webbed fabric which falls into folds of its own accord. The skirt is gored to fit very close around the hips, while from just above the knee to the bottom it is flared or widened. The hem is lightly weighted. This, it is claimed, does away with all display of the ankles and the ugly, cumbersome look from behind, which most of the proposed costumes have been found to possess in actual use. In walking it does not look unbecoming. Knickerbockers or full trousers may be worn under it or not as desired.

Given a properly fitting machine, reasonable skill, and a well-cut skirt, there is only one thing needed to make a woman ride a bicycle gracefully, and that is the limitation of speed. No woman should attempt to ride more than about eight miles an hour on asphalt, or more than six miles an hour on a macadamized road if she values her appearance. Her skirt must have time to fall and drape between the motions of the feet, and this cannot take place if a rapid action of the knees is kept up. A well-mounted woman, riding at a moderate speed, is seldom seen, but when she is met with, every one turns to look at her, and here is given the secret of her superior attractiveness. The woman should set the pace for her escort, not try to keep up with him.

The Only Question.

"Do you ever think, George, dear," she said, and her voice was soft and low as befitted the perfect beauty of the night, "how closely true happiness is allied with tears."

"I don't believe I ever do," replied George.

"Yes," she went on, looking up into his face, "when one is truly and wholly happy there is but little to divide a smile and a tear."

"That's a fact," said George, "but I never thought of it before. There's nothing but the nose."

MUNICIPAL GARDENS

Our suggested scheme of a municipal garden has found favor with the "Intell." and it is, we think, not unworthy the consideration of the council. Mayor Pingree's potato patch in Detroit has furnished many municipalities with food for thought. The Toronto papers have of late been discussing it and the Mail and Empire yesterday concluded an article thus:

One of the facts demonstrated to the satisfaction of the committee having the experiment in charge is that the great majority of the unemployed poor are willing to work and aid themselves if given, the opportunity. But perhaps the most noticeable result of the scheme is that it has drawn the attention of many poor people in the city to the desirableness of country life. They naturally argue that if they were able to do so well on a quarter or half an acre, they could make a comfortable living on a few acres. In these days, when there is a tendency to crowd into cities, people are apt to forget that the land is, after all, the basis of a people's existence; and if a system can be devised whereby people who now starve in cities may have a chance of getting a living or a part of a living by husbandry, it will manifestly be to the public interest to adopt it.

THE HOSPITAL AND AMBULANCE

There has not as far as we are aware been any actual opposition or even whispered disapproval of the proposed municipal grant of a thousand dollars towards the new hospital wing. The ladies have not only shown that the money will go back to the mechanics and laborers of the city; but that in the prosecution of the work they have saved the city thousands of dollars, and that this grant will be devoted towards the erection what will be a permanent improvement, pratically an asset of the corportion. The Council has as good as promised the grant and there seems no doubt that the ladies will get it.

The grant seems to have been settled, but Miss Gordon's ambulance scheme has not yet passed that stage when it can go without the further consideration of the citizens. What is required is subscriptions and the matter is of sufficient importance to countenance the assumption that it will not need a personal canvass to raise the funds required. The ambulance will be built by Mr. St. Charles and the money will consequently go to the labor of the city. Subscriptions may be sent to any of the newspaper offices or to Miss Gordon and will be duly acknowledged.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Intell. talks last night on the proposed iron and steel industry in a way that would lead one to think that it had been slumbering for a few days. It says the Industrial Committee will reach a decision in a short time. The committee decided last Monday afternoon and sent their proposition to the steel men. Kingston's committee has decided also, and have accepted the Company's terms.

If the Intell don't soon stop croaking about Free Trade even its own people will begin to think it's foolish.

After La Grippe.

After la Grippe obstinate coughs, lung trouble, etc., frequently follow. There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time effectual and pleasant, as Milburns Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry Hypophosphites, which is the largest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. Price 50c. and $1.00 per bottle.

As to Snake Bites.

That no less than 23,000 people should have perished last year in the Indian province of Bengal from snake bites shows how little progress has been made by science toward the discovery of some antidote for the poison of these reptiles. The trouble is that the poison of nearly every species seems to affect a different organ of the body. Thus the bite of a cobra seems to paralyze the lungs, while the poison of the daboia produces terrible convulsions. From time immemorial physicians of every clime and race have devoted their energies to the discovery of cures for these bites; but judging from the heavy list of casualties from this source alone in Bengal, the most highly civilized province and possessed of the best system of medical supervision of all English colonial dependencies, it would seem that all efforts in this direction have been abortive.—New York Tribune.

Long Enough.

Stephen A. Douglas and Mr. Lovejoy were once gossiping together when Abraham Lincoln came in. The two men immediately turned their conversation upon the proper length of a man's legs.

"Now," said Lovejoy, "Abe's legs are altogether to long and yours, Douglas, I think are a little short. Let's ask Abe what he thinks of it?"

Then, turning to Lincoln, he said:

"We're talking about the proper length of a man's legs. We think yours are too long and Douglas, too short and we'd like to know what you think is the proper length."

"Well," said Mr. Lincoln, "that's a matter that I've never given any thought to, so of course I may be mistaken, but my first impression is that a man's leg ought to be long enough to reach from his body to the ground."

Napoleon Portraits.

No face is better known through portraits than that of Napoleon, yet the best-known picture of the great Corsican is believed to be the least reliable. There are in existence over fifty portraits, taken in his own time, and the variance between them is so great that it is sometimes difficult to trace any resemblance. It is evident that the portraits by David are idealized, while the little known portrait by Trumbull represent him as a beefy, overfed man, with little intellectuality of expression. In youth and during the last few years of his life he was undoubtedly ugly; between 1800 and 1810, after his emaciation disappeared and before he became gross, he was only passably good-looking. There were in his face and manner a personal dignity and an air of command that inspired respect in all beholders.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE TALLEST EXTANT ANIMAL.

Male Giraffes Have Reached the Height of Eighteen Feet.

Compared with their extinct allies of earlier periods of the earth's history, it may be laid down as a general rule that the large animals of the present day are decidedly inferior in point of size. During the later portion of the territorial period, for instance, before the incoming of the glacial epoch, when mammals appear to have attained their maximum development, there lived elephants alongside of which ordinary individuals of the existing species would have looked almost drawfs, while the cave bear and the cave hyena attained considerably larger dimensions than their living representatives, and some of the sabletooth tigers must have been considerably larger than the biggest African lion or Bengal lion. Again, the remains of red deer, bison, and wild oxen disinterred from the caverns and other surficial deposits of this country indicate animals far superior in size to their degenerate descendants of the present day, while some of the extinct pigs from the Siwalik hills of northern India might be compared in stature to a tapir rather than to an ordinary wild boar. The same story is told of reptiles, the giant tortoise of the Siwalik hills, in spite of its dimensions having been considerably exaggerated, greatly exceeding in size the largest living giant tortoises of either the Mascarene or the Galapagos Islands. The latter rocks have also yielded the remains of a long-snouted crocodile, allied to the gavial of the Ganges, which probably measured from fifty to sixty in length, whereas it is very doubtful if any existing member of the order exceeds half the smaller of these dimensions, if, moreover, we took into account totally extinct types, such as the megatheres and mylods of South America, and contrasting them with their nearest living allies—in this instance the sloths and anteaters—the discrepancy in size would be still more marked, but such a comparison would scarcely be analogous to the above.

To every rule there is, however, an exception, and there are a few groups of living large mammals whose existing members appear never to have been surpassed in size by their fossil relatives. Foremost among these are the whales, which now appear to include the largest members of the order which have ever existed. The so-called white, or square-mouthed rhinoceros of South Africa seems almost to be fully equal in size to any of its extinct ancestors; and the same is certainly true of the giraffe, which may even exceed all its predecessors in this respect. Whether however, the fossil giraffes, of which more anon, were or were not the equals in height of the largest individual of the living species, there is no question but that the latter is by far the tallest of all living mammals, and that it was only rivaled in this respect among extinct forms by its aforesaid ancestors. Moreover, if we exclude creatures like some of the gigantic dinosaurian reptiles of the secondary epoch, which, so to speak, gained an unfair advantage as regards height by sitting on their hind legs in a kangaroo-like manner, and limit our comparison to such as walk on all four feet in the good old-fashioned way, we shall find that giraffes are not only the tallest mammals, but likewise the tallest of all animals that have ever existed.

As regards the height attained by the male of the tallest of quadrupeds, there is, unfortunately, a lack of accurate information, and since it is ptobable that the majority of those now living are inferior in size to the largest individuals which existed when the species was far more numerous than at present. It is to be feared that this deficiency in our knowledge is not very likely to be remedied. By some writers the height of the male giraffe is given at sixteen feet, and that of the female at fourteen feet, but this is certainly below the reality. For instance, Mr, H. A. Bryden states that a female he shot in Southern Africa measured seventeen feet to the summits of the horns. From the evidence of very large though badly preserved specimen in the Natural History Museum it may, however, be inferred that fine male certainly reach the imposing height of eighteen feet.—Knowledge.

The Gothenburg System.

The principle of the Gothenburg system is the establishment by the Government of a corporation whose shares yield practically nothing to holders for the purpos of monopolizing the trade in liquor. The foundation of the plan rests upon a popular desire to combat inordinate liquor drinking, and the element which makes up its foundation comprises the moral recitude and practical and sentimental patriotism required to induce investors to put their money into something which pays them almost no direct return. Profits are made up to a high figure in some instances of the adoption and practice of the system: but they are never allowed to assume a proportion which will excite the business zeal of the shareholders. When they become too large for the principle of unselfishness involved, they go to extraordinary charitable interests. But the liquor sold is not marked down cheap for the purpose of reducing profits. On the contrary, it is marked up, and is going steadily higher. The reduction in the profits of the shareholders below what would be normal receipts is accomplished by the surrender of large proportions of the net incomes to the city or town government upon the understanding that the fund shall go to public works or to charity.—Providence Journal.

England and America.

When Lucan spoke of a more than civil war, he must surely have alluded to such a war as would be waged between Great Britain and North America. The parent devastating the fair inheritance of the child, kindred hands employed in rooting up that prosperity, the increase of which has overflowed in a tide of riches into this island, are subjects too painful for contemplation, and from which the mind of every Englishman turns aside with unconquerable disgust.

Let us have war, if need be, with any other nation, but not with those colonies—the proudest historic monument we possess, the most enduring memorial of Anglo-Saxon greatness.—Robert Lowe.

Keeping Cabbage for Winter Use.

To keep cabbage so as to have them convenient for use during the winter a grower suggests as follows: Cut off the stalks and pack the heads in a clean barrel, filling in with dry, clean sawdust, as the cabbages are put in, until the barrel is full, leaving a good layer of sawdust on top. Set the barrel in the barn or under shelter, but not in a damp cellar. They may freeze, but it will do them no harm.

A Diet of Blood.

The use of blood as a curative agent is said to be on the increase in Paris, and certainly it appears that persons still resort to the abattoires every morning to partake of this nauseous form of so-called cure. Although French doctors do not often prescribe these forms of treatment, "blood-baths" are not infrequently used, and certain patent medicines are sold under the name of "poudre de sang," and other titles.

Facts About Hail.

From the Swiss meteorological records since 1883, Dr. C. Heiss finds that hail is more frequent in valleys than on mountains, that it occurs more often near marshes and in lake valleys than over wooded country, and that river valleys in the path of thunder storms favor its formation, while cultivated land and hilly forests reduce the intensity of hail storms.

NICOTINE BLINDNESS.

"Did you ever hear of tobacco blindness?" said a doctor. "It is something we meet with quite frequently, yet not so much as one would suppose, when the great consumption of tobacco is considered. Yet there are many who are on the threshold of tobacco blindness, who have, or may not have, an experience with the disease.

"For, in tobacco poisoning, like that produced by other drugs, the system can resist the influence of the invader up to a certain point, when the smallest further dose of the poison will produce the same symptoms as the taking of a larger dose would. Thus, in the case of many people, the mere smoking of a pipe or two more a day would produce in them all the advanced symptoms of tobacco poisoning. So it is that doctors make it imperative in such cases that the smoking habit must be dropped entirely. To smoke moderately will not do. You cannot afford to take the chances of giving the system that little bit more of nicotine which would cause the case to be serious.

"Tobacco blindness can, fortunately, be cured. With the smoking habit abolished, plenty of outdoor exercise, a good nerve tonic, which would assist in the purification of the blood, as well as toning up the general system, and absentation from alcoholic beverages, there is no reason why tobacco blindness cannot be cured. Alcohol drunk in any of its forms is liable to produce tobacco blindness in a fairly heavy smoker.

"But the strangest part of it all is that a person does not have to smoke tobacco to become afflicted with tobacco blindness. In fact, one of the most obstinate cases I ever had was that of a waiter in a city cafe. He was a nonsmoker, and a total abstainer, yet he came to me with tobacco blindness fully developed, caused by being compelled to work all day in the atmosphere of tobacco smoke, breathing the poisoned air polluted by thirty or forty smokers. It is a wonder why more of the disease is not developed when this is considered. But, fortunately, nature is more kind to us than we are to ourselves, so she gives us strength to throw off many evils to which we are carelessly exposed."—Boston Post.

The Price of Champagne.

It is reported from France that the price of champagne will be, if anything, higher this year than it has been previously. This is somewhat surprising, for although a great deal of money is spent on the manufacture and bottling of the wine, nevertheless its cost of production appears to be wholly out of proportion to the charge at which it is retailed, not only in America, but also in French restaurants. In Paris you must pay 12 francs, or $2.40, for a not strictly first-class bottle of champagne, and the same wine will cost at least $3 in New York. Turning to the bill of fare given in a little guide book to Paris published in 1803, the most expensive champagne is quoted at $1.20 a bottle. To be sure, Chambertin, Volnay, Pommard and Nuits were only $1 per bottle then. A beefsteak with potatoes was 20 cents; and "bouilli" garnished with vegetables only 3 cents; but mutton cutlets were dear, being cited at 20 cents apiece; and a fried sole cost 40 cents, if the book is to be believed. Be this as it may, the value of the champagne produced in France is daily increasing. In the Department de la Marne alone it has increased from $1,227,000 in 1884 to over $6,000,000 in 1891. The strangest circumstance connected with champagne is that the French themselves have little liking for the vintage of Epernay. In fact, the average Gaul rarely touches "fizz," save on the occasions of marriages, birthdays, and grand balls; at the carnival, and sometimes at race meetings. At smart dinner parties this vintage is never served, being deemed vulgar. There is an immense amount of champagne drunk at first-class Paris restaurants, but the consumers are for the most part foreigners—English, Russians, Germans, and especially Americans, who for some unaccountable reason dote on this wine and consider no feast complete without it.—New York Tribune.

The Bloomer Question.

"The first day that seemed spring-like," says a woman who owns a bicycle, "the bloomer question popped up, and it's been my constant companion ever since. Last summer I said I would give up life itself before separating from my skirts. Yet when I would get my feet tangled up in petticoat ruffles and torn facings I would pray for enough commons sense to make me see the error of my fastidious ideas. Now, however, I happen to possess a style of bicycle that will not admit of the wearing of skirts, and at last I've come face to face with the bloomer nightmare. I've given the matter a great amount of study and thought, and have in fancy conjured up an ideal wheeling costume. I want bloomers of corduroy. They will come just below the knees and will be simply full knickerbockers. Then I shall have a very trim, stylish, tailor-made outfit with long jacket and stunning skirt of walking length and heavy plaited back. This skirt will open down the side, the opening being concealed by a narrow panel or revers. Then I will wear leather leggins and a plain little sailor hat and veil. When I ride I'll wear the jacket over the shirt waist, and the jacket will be long enough to hide most of the knickerbockers. Then I'll strap the skirt, neatly folded, of course, to the handle bars, and the moment I alight from my wheel I'll hook my skirt around me, and there I'll be as nice and comfortable as you please, and protected from the stares and jeers of small boys. The question of color is bothersome, too, but I've argued away all hues except brown and green. Black shows the dust and dark blue has been worn to death. I think that brown corduroy bloomers, with a brown and tan novelty suit, will make what ought to be nearly perfect."—Chicago Herald.

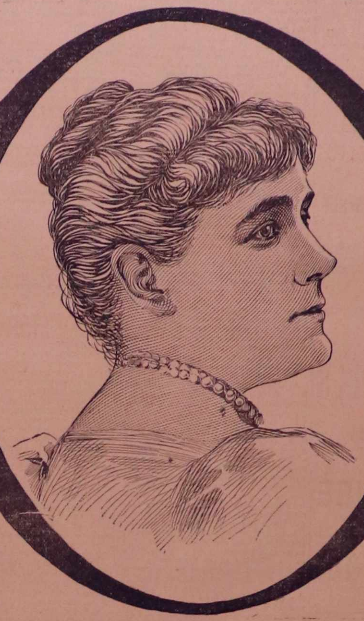
Author of "A Modern Heathen."

The Famous Southern Novelist, Mrs. E. Burke Collins, Tells of Her Complete Recovery from Nervous Debility by the use of Paine's Celery Compound.



The London Graphic, in its recent summing up of the half dozen successful novels of the year, includes with DuMaurier's "Trilby," Hall Caine's "Manxman," Conan Doyle's "Sherlock Holmes," "The Heavenly Twins," and "Ships That Pass in the Night," Mrs. E. Burke Collins' "A Modern Heathen"

Speaking of this last work of the distinguished southern author, the Graphic says:

"What Geo. W. Cable's writings are to the Creoles of New Orleans, Miss Murfree to the rough strata of humanity among the Tennessee mountains, and Gertrude Atherton to California, Mrs. E. Burke Collins' are to the Acadians of the Louisiana Pine Lands. In her latest work Mrs. Collins has struck a new vein in literature, opening to the novel reading world a vision of the real life of the Acadians of the backwoods, among the wild, scarcely known region of the bayous and swamps of Louisinia".

Besides her novels she contributes each week short stories, sketches, etc., to the prominent magazines and to a great variety of other publications.

Although her writing has always been a labor of love, yet such incessant mental exertion, constantly harvesting the ideas of her brain without a single idle season or fallow time for rest and refreshment. could not fail to have its effects on the recuperative power of her neruous system. At one time she found herself tired out and weak from such uniterrupted work; she became nervous and incapable of work; she even saw nervous prostration staring her in the face. The general toning up that her system needed so badly she found in Paine's Celery Compound. To-day she is perfectly well and strong again, busy as ever with her brain and pen, and grateful to Paine's Celery Compound for the timely help when failure and trouble and despair seemed about to close round her and shut her off from everything that was dear to her. She says:

NEW ORLEANS, La. Nov. 21, 1894.

"I wish to add my mite to the thousands of testimonials which you have received in regard to the efficacy of this wonderful Compound. In my profession of author, such a strengthing medicine is invaluable. I have just completed my 95th novel, and constant work at the desk had weakened my constitution, infured my nerves, and I suffered from general dibility. When a person in that condition writes continuely, living in the realm of fiction and romance, the effect upon the nervous system is lamentable. I was weak and debilitated, suffered from insomnia, and was irritable and nervous. Four bottles of Paine's Celery Compound gave me strength, quieted my nerves, and brought sleep to my pillow. I owe lasting gratitude to this wonderful medicine, and I take pleasure in adding mine to the long list of testimonials."

Yours gratefully,

313 Valence St. Mrs. E. Burke Collins.

Paine's Celery Compound is found to best supply the great need of studious, sedentary people. Its extensive use by brain workers, both men and women, suffering from sleeplessness, indigestion, or other effects of a deficient nerve force, shows its ability to feed tired, emaciated, nervous tissues. Nothing else has ever possessed anything like the power of Paine's Celery Compound to restore a healthy nervous tone to the entire body and to thoroughly cleanse the blood. School teachers professional men, news paper men, ministers, public officials, men whose daily outlay of vitality, because of hard, trying, anxious work, is excessive, find renewed strength not only of the nerves, but, through their healthy action, of the entire body, in Paine's Celery Compound. Its use shortly dispels headaches, rheumatic pain, dyspepsia, heart trouble, general debility and languor, and all other outward signs of grave mischief that comes from disordered nerves and impure blood.

The Origin of Cold Waves.

It is frequently asked, where do cold waves originate? The coldest portion of the North American continent, is, in all probability, in the Saskatchewan Valley, east of Mount Hooker and Mount Head, both of which are situated in the Rocky Mountain range that divides British Columbia from this valley and the Alberta country. The height of this mountain range prevents the eastern trend or flow of vapour from the Pacific ocean from crossing over into this valley, as it would were it not for the presence of this high range of mountains. Yet it must not be supposed that extreme cold always prevails here, because at certain intervals the vapor from the Pacific flows east by way of the Alaskan peninsula, through the upper valley of the Athabasca river into Alberta and the valley of the Saskatchewan, and there, meeting with a more southern and eastern flow of vapor that flows through the gap in the mountain range, made by the Bay of San Juan, it warms and expands the atmosphere, crosses the path of the cold wave, and a warmth of from 20 to 40 degrees is the result, as we often see graphically marked on the weather map by red dots here and there on its surface.

But this does not satisfactorily answer why it is that the cold wave leaves its home in the above-mentioned valley to go junketing on a southern tour at this time of the year, when the normal temperature should be sufficiently cold to meet the demands of the most exacting plumber. To find the cause of those successive cold waves which we are experiencing from time to time this winter, we will have to look in quite another direction, down to the northern tropical latitude, where the great evaporation of those warm currents and ocean surfaces is carried westward from the Atlantic Ocean by the trade winds, and is massed together between those winds and the eastern off shore winds, blowing sometimes from Florida and at other times from Texas, but in either case promoting a cyclonic action, which has the effect of enlarging the area of the storm, and the immediate result is an enormous expansion of the atmosphere usually denominated "low." As this low moves across the surface of the Middle or Eastern States it pours down large quantities of water in the shape of rain, and is constantly receiving accessions of cloud matter to replenish its energies; and thus in this manner it creates more or less of a vacuum into which the air from the northwest is drawn with more or less momentum, and the cold wave is completed.—Washington Post.

A GREAT MAN'S WIDOW.

Nobody was astonished to hear that she was about to remarry: In spite of all his genius, perhaps because of his genius, the great man had led her 15 years of a very hard life, varied by caprices and whims which had occasionally furnished gossip to the Parisians. She had followed him over the highway glory which he had traversed triumphantly and rapidly as befitted a man who was to die early; and she had humbly and fearfully followed him seated in a corner of the car, ever awaiting jolts. When she complained, relations, friends, everybody was against her. "Respect his weakness, they are the failings of a god. Do not annoy him, do not disturb him. Remember that your husband does not belong to you alone. He belongs more to the country, to art, than to his family. And who knows but that each of those faults for which you reproach him has not been worth a master- ?" However, finally, wearied of being patient, she revolted, became indignant, felt herself unjustly treated; so that when the great man died seperation proceedings were about to be instituted and this illustrous name dragged through the third page of the sensational journals.

After the agitation of this unhappy union the disquietudes of the last illness, and the sudden stroke of death which had awakened for a moment the primitive affection, the first months of widowhood had upon the young woman the salutary and reposing effect of a long holiday. Her compulsory retreat, the tranquil calm of appeased sorrow, gave to her at 35 years of age a second youth almost as seductive as the first. Moreover, mourning became her. Then, she had the rsponsible and rather proud countenance of a woman living alone with all the honor of a great name to bear. Very careful of the glory of the defunct, that cursed glory which had cost her so many tears, and which was now growing from day to day like a beautiful flower nourished by the black soil of the tomb, she was seen draped in long dark veils, conversing with theatre managers, editors, arranging for the reproduction of her husband's operas, overlooking the printing of his post-humous works, and unfinished manuscripts applying to all these details a kind of solemn care and religious respect.

At this epoch her second husband met her. He also was a musician, almost unknown, an author of waltzes, of melodies, and of two small operas of which the scores, deliciously printed, were performed as much as they were sold. Possessing pleasant features, and a large fortune inherited from a family of the bourgeoisie, he had above all a supreme respect for genius, curiosity with regard to celebrated men, and the enthusiastic naivete of a young artist. Therefore, when the wife of the master was pointed out to him he became dazzled. She was the very image of the glorious muse which appeared to him. Immediately he was love-smitten and as the widow was already recommencing to go into the world, he was presented to her. In her house his passion was nourished by the atmosphere of genius which still was present in every corner of the salon. There was the bust of the master, the piano where he composed, his scores laid upon every article of furniture, melodious even to look upon, as if from their half-opened leaves the written phrases were reasoning musically. The positive charm of the widow placed amid these austere suroundings as in a becoming frame succeeded in completing the conquest.

Having hesitated a long time the good fellow declared himself, but in such humble and timid terms— "He was aware how unworthy he was of her, understood all the regret she might feel to exchange her illustrous name for his own, unknown and mean." And a thousand other naivetes of this kind. Be it understood that at the bottom of her heart the lady was extremely flattered with her conquest; but she played the comedy of the broken heart, of the woman whose life is finished without prospect of recommencement. Although she had never been so happy as since the death of the great man, she still found tears to regret his loss and exhibited an enthusiastic ardor in speaking of him. This, of course, only increased the reverence of her young adorer, rendered him more eloquent, more persuasive.

In short, this severe widowage terminated in a marriage, but the widow did not abdicate, although married, and remained more than even the relict of the great man, well understanding that in the eyes of the second husband this was her true prestige. As she felt herself less young than he, in order to prevent his perceiving it, she overwhelmed him with disdain, with a species of vague pity, with an inexpressed and wounded regret for the mesalliance. But he was not wounded by it. On the contrary, he was convinced of his inferiority and found it quite natural that the souvenir of such a man should be installed despotically in her heart. In order to make him retain this humble attitude, she occasionally read with him the letters written by the master when he was paying court to her. This return to the past made her 15 years younger, gave her the assurance of a beautiful woman, regarded through all the dithyrambics of passion and the charming exaggeration of written love. If she had changed since, her young husband did not care, and adored her on the faith of another, with a kind of singularly vanity. It seemed to him that these impassioned supplications were being added to his own, and that he inherited quite a past of love.

Strange couple! In society they were curious to look upon. I saw them occasionally at the theatre. Nobody could have recognized the fearful and timid young woman, who formerly accompanied the maestro, lost in the gigantic shade which he cast around her. Now, she showed herself in front of the opera box and by the hauteur of her glance drew all eyes upon her. One would have thought that she was wearing the aureole of her first husband, whose name resounded around her like a homage or a reproach. The other, seated slightly in the rear, with features embarrassed observed all her movements, attentive to serve her.

In their own home, this strangeness of behavior was still more marked. I remember a soiree given by them a year after their marriage. The husband circulated among the crowd of guests, proud and at the same time a little embarrassed to see in his house so many people. The wife, disdainful, melancholy, superior, was that evening widow of the great man whose like cannot exist again. She had a certain manner of looking at her husband over the shoulder, of calling him "my poor friend," at the same time overwhelming him with the work of receiving guests, as if to say: "That is all the good you are." Around her had gathered the circle of her former friends, of those who had taken part in the previous debuts of the master, in his struggles, in his successes.

With them she was full of affectation like a young girl. They had known her when ever so young. Nearly all of them addressed her as "Anais," her pet name. The poor husband used to approach respectfully to hear his predecessor spoken of. The glorious first performances were recalled, then the whims of the great man, his methods of working, when in order to obtain inspiration he would have his wife beside him, bejeweled and with bare shoulders. "Do you remember Anais?" And Annais sighed and blushed.

[illegible] those beautiful most passionate of all with its great duet traversed by moonlight, by the perfume of roses and the thrills of the nightingale. An enthusiast played it on the piano amid suppressed emotion. At the last note of this admirable morceau the lady burst into tears. "It is stronger than I," said she, "I have never heard it without weeping." The old friends of the master, suroundlng his unhappy widow with their sympathetic condolences, came in turn as at the funeral ceremonies, to shake feelingly her hand.

"Come, come, Anais, courage!"

And the most amusing thing was that the second husband upright by the side of his wife, and full of emotion, also distributed handshakes, and took part in the condolences.

"What a genius! what a genius!" said he, wiping his eyes. It was both comic and touching. ALPHONSE DAUDET.

The Origin of Cold Waves.

It is frequently asked, where do cold waves originate? The coldest portion of the North American continent, is, in all probability, in the Saskatchewan Valley, east of Mount Hooker and Mount Head, both of which are situated in the Rocky Mountain range that divides British Columbia from this valley and the Alberta country. The height of this mountain range prevents the eastern trend or flow of vapour from the Pacific ocean from crossing over into this valley, as it would were it not for the presence of this high range of mountains. Yet it must not be supposed that extreme cold always prevails here, because at certain intervals the vapor from the Pacific flows east by way of the Alaskan peninsula, through the upper valley of the Athabasca river into Alberta and the valley of the Saskatchewan, and there, meeting with a more southern and eastern flow of vapor that flows through the gap in the mountain range, made by the Bay of San Juan, it warms and expands the atmosphere, crosses the path of the cold wave, and a warmth of from 20 to 40 degrees is the result, as we often see graphically marked on the weather map by red dots here and there on its surface.

But this does not satisfactorily answer why it is that the cold wave leaves its home in the above-mentioned valley to go junketing on a southern tour at this time of the year, when the normal temperature should be sufficiently cold to meet the demands of the most exacting plumber. To find the cause of those successive cold waves which we are experiencing from time to time this winter, we will have to look in quite another direction, down to the northern tropical latitude, where the great evaporation of those warm currents and ocean surfaces is carried westward from the Atlantic Ocean by the trade winds, and is massed together between those winds and the eastern off shore winds, blowing sometimes from Florida and at other times from Texas, but in either case promoting a cyclonic action, which has the effect of enlarging the area of the storm, and the immediate result is an enormous expansion of the atmosphere usually deominated "low." As this low moves across the surface of the Middle or Eastern States it pours down large quantities of water in the shape of rain, and is constanfly receiving accessions of cloud matter to replenish its energies; and thus in this manner it creates more or less of a vacuum into which the air from the northwest is drawn with more or less momentum, and the cold wave is completed.—Washington Post.

Interesting Items for Farmers.

Now is the time, before the plants begin to start off, to apply potash and superphosphate to the strawberry plants. The nitrates can go on a little later.

Rye and crimson clover are said to be crops that require no land if they are turned under the soil, because they are seeded in the fall, remai on the ground during the winter, and are out of the way in time for planting the spring crops, occupying the land at a season of the year when nothing else can be grown upon it.

Mix the horse manure and cattle manure in the same heap, and use a liberal supply of muck, dry dirt, litter or marl to absorb the liquids. Should the heap begin to heat spread it out, throw water or urine on it, and more absorbent material and heap it again. This creates work, but it will make the manure more valuable than if it receives no care.

Get the new strawberry land in condition. New beds should have the plants in position before April 15, if possible, so as to give them the spring in which to get a start and become well established before the dry season sets in. A week or two is quite an advantage with strawberries. After plowing the land and harrowing it well, apply wood ashes and ground bone, and then harrow it again before putting out the new plants.

Tuberculosis may be stamped out by vigorous effort, but it is time to consider whether inbreeding, in some cases, has not weakened the herds and rendered the members more susceptible to the disease. Vigor is the best safeguard, and only vigorous and healthy animals should be used for breeding. It will always be an advantage to procure a male from a herd not akin to the cows. Cholera in hogs has been greatly prevented by avoiding inbreeding within the past ten years, and that fact is one that should not be overlooked by breeders of cattle.

THE PHANTOM BALAKLAVA.

"You may talk about your orthodox ghosts who haunt ancient castles, wailing and groaning, and carrying flaming lights from window to window for apparently no earthly, or rather unearthly, purpose save that of terrifying out of his wits some poor hind bearing home a bewildered brain after staying too long with 'John Barleycorn' in the village inn, but for something that has forever baffled me often wonder whether I was dreaming or awake, commend me to what I saw, or thought I saw, the night before Balaklava, Oct. 25, 1854."

And my father threw himself back in his armchair before the fire in the smoking-room grate as he took a long whiff of a newly lighted cigar and gazed dreamily into the flames that were crackling up the chimney.

The subject of conversation had drifted from the battlefields of yesterday, in Abyssinia and Zululand, to those of thirty years before, when the tall, heavy forms before us of my father and his old comrades in arms, Sir Langley Fetherstone and Colonel Elmhurst, with their gray, bristling mustaches, their still erect gait, their unconsciously imperative style and their solemn grave deportment, were as light as my own, Aubrey's or Bob Fetherstone's the night as we sat around listening to the stories of the hot days when our fathers were men as young as we.

"Hand me my memory, Aubrey," said my father, pointing to the huge cavalry saber that hung over the mantlepiece. The sword that had waved over the now iron-gray head, that then was chestnut, as its owner with a shout of defiance bore down upon the ranks of the Muscovites, in the wintry plains of the Crimea.

My father drew the sword from its scabbard and lovingly surveyed the glittering blade.

"Old 'never-failed-me'!" he said. "Do you see that dint in its edge, Lang? Got that crossing the Alma off the helmet of a Russian cuirassier. I sent the blow through steel and skull together. There is another! Got that the 25th of October from the commander of the Cossacks that charged the left flank of the 'heavies.' He struck at me, I parried, there is the mark."

"And then?" said Sir Largley.

"I swept it round and caught him across the throat," answered my father abstractedly. "I saw his body afterward when it was turned over to his relatives, for he was a noble, a grand duke I believe. The same angry frown was upon his handsome features as just before my steel entered his jugular. And here is another—but there! If I once got started telling anecdotes of every experience that old blade went through in my hands I would stay talking until morning. Put it up again, Vic. I love to handle it whenever I settle down to tell a story of the old days. It, as it were, inspires me, by bringing back the events of bygone years to my mind as if they but happened yesterday."

Seeing that we were all watching him in anticipation he again took some whiffs of his cigar and commenced:

"It was the night before the never-to-be-forgotten 25th of October. We were close to the Russian lines, our pickets being almost within hailing distance of the enemy.

"I was riding out to inspect the sentries stationed along the Grodno road. It was a clear wet, cold night, and I clasped my great coat close about me, and spurred my charger along the muddy road. As I reached the side of the valley I drew him in quickly as I heard a distant rumble, like the moving of some parks of heavy ordnance at the extreme end. I listened. All was still again. An occasional stray shot from the outposts, a distant challenge of a sentry, a light here and there peering through the murky mist from the doomed city, and between it and us a large, uneven mass of something indistinguishable that marked out the Russian lines.

"I rode on. I arrived at the station of the sentry, and as I did so some smart firing broke out toward the rear. Our pickets were evidently being driven in, and I sent the sentry back to hasten up the supports. He never returned. I subsequently heard that he had gone on with the re-enforcements he had been sent to summon, and been captured.

"I stayed cursing his delay for over half an hour. When I again heard the same rumbling noise I looked up the valley. All was dark, but the rumble seemed to be advancing at terrific pace. As it was coming from our lines, I thought it might be a night attack. Although, how cavalry could be of any service at such an hour, on such a night, I failed to see. But it is the soldier's duty to obey first, and to form his opinion afterward, and I eagerly awaited the oncoming of the force.

"A white streak appeared 200 feet away, the noise crashed upon me with full force, and in an instant I saw the charging ranks and the wild, eager forms of the soldiers seated on their foaming, galloping steeds. Forms, did I say? Yes, forms only! Forms pale and shadowy. Horse and man alike woven, as it were, out of the mist. On they came, icy breezes rushing with them as they swept by. My horse plunged and reared frantically. To save myself from being dismounted I sprang from his back into the snow, and, prancing and snorting, he made off toward our lines, giving rise to the subsequent rumor of my death.

"As I turned I saw the form of Louis Nolan. He was sitting half round in his saddle, his sword hanging from his wrist, his forage cap in his hand, which he was waving exultingly. His face was partially turned from me toward the ranks, but not a word passed the open mouth, with the ashen hue on the lips, though I could see a blaze in the glistening eye. On they came, hussars, lancers, dragoons, with all the pomp and glory and magnificence of war mingled with the mystery of the world unknown. There rode Major Halket. His proud, handsome face set firmly and unflinchingly, his sword clinched in his hand, as it was found next day when they raised his body from the blood-soaked soil. Then came Lord Fitzgibbon. You knew him, Lang, and so did I, since as children we played together in the green woods of Mount Shannon. He was pointing a shadowy finger ahead, and his attitude was as if he was calling to his hussars following close behind. As he dashed by he recognized me, and a sad, oh! what a sad smile, flitted across the pallid face for an instant as he tossed a last farewell to me, in his careless, boyish style, and disappeared into the mist. Next came Pigott, the Lovelace of the Seventeenth. The same serene light in those eyes that had broken many a maiden's heart in the drawing-rooms of Belgravia. And Hackett—Hackett of the Fifth—'the saint,' as we of the First Royals used to call him, that upright, God-fearing, great-hearted man, whose name was called on the muster roll of heaven ere the sun set next day. His eyes were now fixed on the murky sky above, his face bore the calm, assured, expectant look that Jerome must have worn at the stake. He was galloping far in advance of his men, as if anxious to obtain his recompense. In a flash he disappeared into the dark.

"The gusts of icy winds accompanying the rush of the phantoms were now declining in their force, the rumbling noise that had risen to the roar of a tempest during their progress past was now quieting down. As the last line of charging horses passed from my sight I saw a shadowy lieutenant of the Guards beside me. He pointed in the direction whither they had gone, a scornful smile was on his spectral face. His hollow voice echoed tauntingly in my ear:

"'So Major Hurst, of the First Royals, prefers discretion to valor because he belongs to the heavy and not to the light brigade!'"

"I aimed a blow at my traducer, but my hand only struck into the empty air.

"He laughed a mocking laugh, and again pointing down the valley said, 'Go!'

"The warm nose of my horse, who had returned, was pressing against my hand.

"'I will show you that at least one of the "heavies" can do as well as the men of the light brigade!' I cried, jumping into the saddle and galloping off after the vanishing cavalry. I felt like one bereft of his senses. I galloped on and on in the dark until I saw again the white streak approaching me in a contrary direction and the rumbling echo in the rear. A second and it burst upon my sight. But what a change! Horses, riderless, terrified, wounded, maddened with excitement. Not a single form of a soldier passed. Riderless horses! Riderless horses! Riderless horses! Here and there opaque pots upon the shadowy saddles, showing where human blood had washed down. I drew aside from the apparent stampede of ghostly steeds and waited. Then I saw another white streak approaching. It came nearer! It was upon me! The fur caps, the long riding coats, the leggings, the long lances, and, above all, the superb horsemanship displayed told me that they were the Cossacks of the Czar. But their faces were rigid as the dead. Instead of their habitual yells, in victory or defeat, not a sound escaped from their tightly closed lips. As I gazed like a man walking in his sleep I saw one of the silent host bearing full upon me, his lance in rest, his cold, dead eyes holding me transfixed so that I could not move a limb. I felt my charger tremble beneath me, but he never made an effort to break away. A moment more and a pang shot through my heart. Then all seemed dark, save for an occasional star shooting by. The stars increased in number; then more and more, until they formed a disk like the full moon, that again was transfigured into a sun, whose intense light almost blinded me. I struggled to place my hands over my eyes, and as I did so I heard a voice above me say:

"'He's coming to. My! but it was a close call.'

"I opened my eyes. I was lying swathed in blankets in the tent of one of the boys of the Ninety-third. My limbs and body were tingling from recent friction, and five bearded faces were peering anxiously into my half-opened eyes.

"I recognized Heathcote. Poor Heathcoate, that was afterwards killed at Delhi, just after his being gazetted as colonel of his gallant corps.

"'Why, old man,' he said, joyfully, 'you were near saving the Rusians a job! I found you laying stiff and stark near the Grodno road, as our boys came along to help the Twenty-sixth drive back the attack on the outposts. We brought you here and have had a big job getting you round. It is a wonder you are not minus toes and fingers, but there's only the tip of your ear frozen.'

"And," added my father, touching the uneven upper surface of his left ear, "there is the mark where the Russian frost bit me, but the vision I saw that night is in view of the events of the following day, far more indelibly implanted in my memory."

Fortunes From Fancy Risks.

The underwriters who were not afraid to take flyers on the cargo of La Gascogne, in spite of the fact that when she was six days overdue she had become what they term in insurance circles a fancy risk, are at present reaping the rewards for their daring. In one case some thousands of dollars clear profit was made by the turn of a couple of hundreds. It looked on the seventh day as if nobody in the business could be induced to take La Gascogne on any terms, and but three hours before the staunch ship was sighted off Fire Island an insurance man went all over the street literally begging his confreres to help him out of the hole he was in by consenting to relieve him of a share of his risk. But could not get rid of his policies on any terms, although the rates he offered were very tempting.

In fact this business of reinsuring risks when they have in the course of events become "fancy" has developed into something of a lottery, and the returns in not a few instances have been very profitable. La Gascogne, after every man in the profession had in his heart of hearts given her up as lost, has shown that a ship may be overdue more than a week from purely natural causes, and the alarm felt in similar cases will be much diminished hereafter. It is noteworthy that Captain Baudelon refused all aid in his distress, a fact which saved many thousands of dollars to his employers. In fact, the ocean liner captains are not permitted aid except in tremendous emergencies, as it is too costly, and the captain who comes into port without it is more highly esteemed than the one who brings his ship in home in better condition, but with the aid of tugs and tramps of one kind and another.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell Its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles ! Piles ! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelee's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money.'

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S. Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal.'

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

WITH TONGUES OF FIRE

INFLUENCE OF THE HOLY GHOST ON CHRISTIAN LIFE.

"Have Ye Received the Holy Ghost?" the Text of an Eloquent Sermon by Dr. Talmage—Necessary to an Understanding of the Scriptures as a Solace in Time of Woe.

NEW YORK, March 24.—When Dr. Talmage ascended the platform of the Academy of Music, this afternoon, he faced an audience quite as large as any that had assembled in the great building since these services began, while several thousand others were outside unable to secure seats or even standing-room. He took for his subject, "Tongues of Fire," the text selected being, Acts 19, 2: "Have ye received the Holy Ghost?"

The word ghost, which means, a soul, or spirit, has been degraded in common parlance. We talk of ghosts as baleful and frightful, and in a frivolous or superstitious way. But my text speaks of a Ghost who is omnipotent, and Divine, and everywhere present; and ninety-one times in the New Testament called the Holy Ghost. The only time I ever heard this text preached from was in the opening days of my ministry, when a glorious old Scotch minister came up to help me in my village church. On the day of my ordination and installation, he said: "If you get into the corner of a Saturday night without enough sermons for Sunday, send for me, and I will come and preach for you." The fact ought to be known that the first three years of a pastor's life are appallingly arduous. No other profession makes the twentieth part of the demand on a young man. If a secular speaker prepares one or two speeches for a political campaign, it is considered arduous. If a lecturer prepares one lecture for a year, he is thought to have done well. But a young pastor has two sermons to deliver every Sabbath, before the same audience, beside all his other work; and the most of ministers never recover from the awful nervous strains of the first three years. Be sympathetic with all young ministers, and withhold your criticisms.

My aged Scotch friend responded to my first call, and came and preached from the text that I now announce. I remember nothing but the text. It was the last sermon he ever preached. On the following Saturday, he was called to his heavenly reward. But I remember just how he appeared as, leaning over the pulpit, he looked into the face of the audience, and with earnestness, and pathos, and electric force, asked them, in the words of my text, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost?" The office of this present discourse is to open a door, to unveil a Personage, to introduce a Force, not sufficiently recognized. He is as great as God. He is God. The second verse of the first chapter of the Bible introduces Him: Genesis 1: 2, "The Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters."

Another appearance of the Holy Ghost was at Jerusalem, during a great feast. Strangers speaking seventeen different languages were present from many parts of the world. But in one house they heard what seemed like the coming of a cyclone, or hurricane. It made the trees bend and the houses quake. The cry was, "What is that?" And then a forked flame of fire tipped every forehead; and what with the blast of wind and the dropping fire, a panic took place, until Peter explained that it was neither cyclone nor conflagration, but the brilliance and anointing and baptismal power of the Holy Ghost. That scene was partially repeated in a forest when Rev. John Easton was preaching. There was the sound of a rushing, mighty wind, and the people looked to the sky to see if there were any signs of a storm, but was it a clear sky; yet the sounds of the wind was so great that horses, frightened, broke loose from their fastenings and the whole assembly felt that the sound was supernatural and Pentecostal. Oh, what an infinite, and almighty, and glorious Personage is the Holy Ghost. He brooded this planet into life, and now that through sin it has become a dead world, he will brood it the second time into life. Perilous attempt would be a comparison between the three Persons of the Godhead. They are equal, but there is some consideration which attaches itself to the Third Person of the Trinity, the Holy Ghost, that does not attach itself to either God the Father or God the Son. We may grieve God the Father and grieve God the Son, and be forgiven, but we are directly told that there is a sin against the Holy Ghost which shall never be forgiven, either in this world or the world to come. And it is wonderful that while on the street you hear the name of God and Jesus Christ used in profanity, you never hear the words, Holy Ghost. This hour I speak of the Holy Ghost as Biblical interpreter, as a human reconstructor, as a solace for the broken-hearted, as a preacher's re-inforcement.

The Bible is a man of contradictions, an affirmation of impossibilities, unless the Holy Ghost helps us to understand it. The Bible says of itself, that the Scripture is not for "private interpretation," but "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." No one but the Holy Ghost, who inspired the Scripture, can explain the Scriptures. Fully realize that, and you will be as enthusiastic a lover of the old Book as my venerable friend who told me in Philadelphia last week that he was reading the Bible through the fifty-ninth time, and it became more attractive and thrilling every time he went through it. I do not depreciate any of the helps for Bible study, but I do say that they all together come infinitely short without a direct communication from the throne of God, in response to prayerful solicitation. We may find many interesting things about the Bible without especial illumination, as how many horses Solomon had in his stables, or how long was Noah's ark, or who was the only woman whose full name is given in the Scriptures, or which is the middle verse of the Bible, and all that will do you no more good than to be able to tell how many bean poles there are in your neighbor's garden, Next consider the Holy Ghost as a human re-constructor. We must be made over again. Christ and Nicodemus talked about it. Theologians call it Regeneration. I do not care what you call it, but we have to be reconstructed by the Holy Ghost. We become new creatures, hating what we once loved, and loving what we once hated. If sin were a luxury it must become a detestation. If we preferred bad associations, we must prefer good associations. In most cases it is such a complete change that the world notices the difference and begins to ask, "What has come over that man? Whom has he been with? What has so affected him? What has ransacked his entire nature? What has turned him square about?" What has done it? It must be something tremendous. It must be God. It must be the Holy Ghost.

Notice the Holy Ghost as the solacer of broken hearts. Christ calls him the Comforter. Nothing does the world so much want as comfort. The most of people have been abused, misrepresented, cheated, lied about, swindled, bereft. What is needed is balsam for the wounds, lantern for the dark roads, rescue from maligning pursuers, a lift from the marble slab of tombstones. Life to most has been a semi-failure. They have not got what they wanted. They have not reached that which they started for. Friends betray. Change of business-stand loses old custom, and does not bring enough custom to make up for the loss. Health becomes precarious when one most needs strong muscle, and steady nerve, and clear brain. Out of this audience of thousands and thousands, if I should ask all those who have been unhurt in the struggle of life to stand up, or all standing to hold up their right hand, not one would move. Oh, how much we need the Holy Ghost as Comforter. He recites the sweet Gospel promises to the hardly bestead. He assures of mercy mingled with the severities. He consoles with thoughts of coming release. He tells of a heaven where tear is never wept, and burden is never carried, and injustice is never suffered. Comfort for all the young people who are maltreated at home, or receive insufficient income, or are robbed of their schooling, or kept back from positions they have earned by the putting forward of others less worthy. Comfort for all these men and women midway in the path of life, worn out with what they have already gone through, and with no brightened future. Comfort for these aged ones amid many infirmities, and who feel themselves to be in the way in the home or business which themselves established with their own grit.

The Holy Ghost comfort, I think, generally comes in the shape of a soliloquy. You find yourself saying to yourself, "Well, I ought not to go on this way about my mother's death. She has suffered enough. She had borne other people's burdens long enough. I am glad that father and mother are together in heaven, and they will be waiting to greet us, and it will be only a little while, anyhow, and God makes no mistakes;" or you soliloquize, saying, "It is hard to lose my property. I am sure I worked hard enough for it. But God will take care of us, and as to the children, the money might have spoiled them, and we find that those have to struggle for themselves generally turn out best, and it will be all well if this upsetting of our worldly resources lead us to lay up treasures in heaven." Or you soliloquize, saying, "It was hard to give up that boy when the Lord took him. I expected great things of him, and, oh, how we miss him out of the house." And after you have said that you get that relief which comes from an outburst of tears. I do not say to you, as some say, do not cry. God pity people in trouble who have the parched eye-ball and the dry eye-lid and cannot shed a tear. That makes maniacs. To God's people tears are the dews of the night dashed with sunrise. I am so glad you can weep. But you think these things you say to yourself are only soliloquies. No, no. There are the Comforter, who is the Holy Ghost.

Notice, also, the Holy Ghost, as the preacher's re-inforcement. You and I have known preachers encyclopædic in knowledge, brilliant as an ice-berg when the sun smites it, and with Chesterfieldian address, and rhetorical hand uplifted with diamond big enough to dazzle an assembly, and so surcharged with vocabulary, that when they left his life it might be said of each of them as De Quincey said of another that in the act of dying, he committed a robbery, absconding with a valuable polyglot dictionary, yet no awakening, or converting, or sanctifying result, while some plain man, with humblest phraseology, has seen audiences whelmed with religious influence. It was the Holy Ghost. What a useful thing it would be if every minister would give the history of his sermons. I call upon the ministers of America to give the history of sermons, for I believe it will illustrate as nothing else can the truth of that Scripture, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

On the Sabbath of the dedication of one of our churches in Brooklyn, at the morning service three hundred and twenty-eight souls stood up to profess Christ. They were the converts in the Brooklyn Academy of Music, where we had been worshipping. The reception of so many members, and many of them baptized by immersion, had made it an arduous service, which continued from half past ten in the morning until half past two in the afternoon. From that service we went home exhausted; because there is nothing so exhausting as deep emotion. A message was sent out to obtain a preacher for that night, but the search was unsuccessful, as all the ministers were engaged for some other place. With no preparation at all for the evening service, except the looking in Cruden's Concordance for a text, and feeling almost too weary to stand up, I began the service, saying audibly while the opening song was being sung, although, because of the singing, no one but God heard it: "Oh, Lord, Thou knoweth my insufficiency for this service. Come down in gracious power upon this people." The place was shaken with the Divine presence. As far as we could find out, over four hundred persons were converted that night. Hear it, all young men entering the ministry; hear it, all Christian workers: it was the Holy Ghost.

In the Second Reformed Church of Somerville, New Jersey, in my boyhood days, Mr. Osborne, the evangelist, came to hold a special service. I see him now as he stood in the pulpit. Before he announced his text, and before he had uttered a word of his sermon, strong men wept aloud, and it was like the Day of Judgment. It was the Holy Ghost.

In 1857 the electric telegraph bore strange messages. One of them read, "My dear parents will rejoice to hear that I have found peace with God." Another read, "Dear mother; the work continues, and I, too, have been converted." Another read, "At last, faith and peace." In Vermont a religious meeting was singing the hymn, "Waiting and Watching for Me." The song rolled out on the night air, and a man halted and said, "I wonder if there will be anyone waiting and watching for me." It started him heavenward. What was it? The Holy Ghost. In that 1857, Jaynes' Hall, Philadelphia, and Fulton street Prayer Meeting, New York, telegraphed each other the number of souls saved, and the rising of the devotional tides. Noon-day prayer-meetings were held in all the cities. Ships came into harbor, captain and all the sailors saved on that voyage. Police and fire departments met in their rooms for Divine worship. At Albany, the Legislature of the State of New York assembled in the rooms of the court of Appeals for religious services. Congressional union prayer-meeting was opened at Washington. From whence came the power? From the Holy Ghost. That power shook New York. That power shook America. That power shook the Atlantic Ocean. That power shook the earth. That power could take this entire audience into the peace of the Gospel quicker than you could lift you eyes heavenward. Come, Holy Ghost! Come, Holy Ghost! He has come! He is here! I feel Him in my heart. There are thousands who feel Him in their hearts, convicting some, saving some, sanctifying some.

How many marked instances of Holy Ghost power? When a black trumpeter took his place in Whitefield's audience proposing to blow the trumpet at a certain point in the service, and put everything into derision, somehow he could not get the trumpet to his lips, and at the close of the meeting he sought out the preacher and asked for his prayers. It was the Holy Ghost. What was the matter with Hedley Vicars, the memorable soldier, when he sat with his Bible before him in a tent, and his deriding comrades came in and jeered, saying, "Turned Methodist, eh?" And another said, "You hypocrite! Bad as you were I never thought you would come to this, old fellow." And then he became the soldier evangelist, and when a soldier in another regiment hundreds of miles away telegraphed his spiritual anxieties to Hedley Vicars, saying: "What shall I do?" Vicars telegraphed as thrilling a message as ever went over the wires. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." What power was being felt? It was the Holy Ghost. And what more appropriate? for the Holy Ghost is a "tongue of fire," and the electricity that flies along the wires is a tongue of fire. And that reminds me of what I might do now; From the place where I stand on this platform there are invisible wires or lines of influence stretching to every heart in all the seats on the main floor and up into the boxes and galleries, and there are other innumerable wires or lines of influence reaching out from this place into the vast beyond and across continents, and under the seas. for in my recent journey around the world I did not find a country where I had not been preaching this Gospel for many years through the printing press. So as a telegraph operator sits or stands at a given point and sends messages in all directions, and you only hear the click, click, click of the electric apparatus, but the telegrams go on their errand, God help now to touch the right key, and send the right message along the right wires to the right places! Who shall I first call up? To whom shall I send the message? I guess I will send the first to all the tired, wherever they are, for there are so many tired souls. Here goes the Christly message, "Come unto Me all ye who are weary and I will give you rest." Who next shall I call up? I guess the next message will be to the fatherless and widows, and here goes God's message, "Leave thy fatherless children, I will preserve them alive, and let thy widows trust in me." Who next shall I call up? I guess my next message will be to those who have buried members of their own families, and here it goes, "The trumpet shall sound and the dead shall rise." Who next shall I call up? I guess the next message will go to those who think themselves too bad to be saved. Here it goes, "Let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, who will have mercy, and unto our God, who will abundantly pardon." Who next shall I call up? I guess it will be those who may think I have not yet touched their case. Here it goes, "Whosoever, whosoever, whosoever will, let him come." And now may God turn on all the electric power into this Gospel battery for the last tremendous message, so that it may thrill through this assemblage, and through all the earth. Just six words will compose the message, and I touch the key of this Gospel battery just six times and the message has gone! Away! away it flies! And the message is, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost?" That is, do you feel His power? Has He enabled you to sorrow over a wasted life, and take full pardon from the crucified Christ, and turned your face toward the wide open gates of a welcoming heaven? We appeal to thee, oh Holy Ghost, who didst turn the Philippian jailer, and Saul, of Tarsus, and Lydia, of Thyatira, and helped John Bunyan out of darkness, when, as he describes it, "Down fell I as a bird shot from the top of the tree, into fearful despair, but was relieved by the comfortable word, "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin," and helped John Newton, when standing at the helm of the ship in a midnight hurricane, and mightier than the waves that swept the docks, came over him the memory of his blasphemous and licentious life, and he cried out, "My mother's God have mercy on me!" and helped one nearer home, even me, De Witt Talmage, at about eighteen years of age, that Sunday night in the lovely village of Clawenburgh, New Jersey, when I could not sleep because the questions of eternal desitiny seized hold of me, and has helped me ever since to use as most expressive of my own feeling:

Amazing grace! how sweet the sound,
That saved a wretch like me!
I once was lost, but now am found,
Was blind, but now I see.

Through many dangers, toils and snares,
I have already come,
'Tis grace has brought me safe thus far,
And grace will lead me home.

His Friends Were too Friendly.

John G. Whittier was greatly loved by strangers, who not only called on him, but thriftily insisted on putting up with him all night. "Thee has no idea," said his sister, "how much time Greenleaf spends trying to lose these people in the streets. Sometimes he comes home and says: 'Well, sister, I had hard work to lose him, but I have lost him. But I can never lose a her. The women are more pertinacious than the men; don't thee find them so, Maria?'"

THEIR ORIGIN ACCIDENTAL.

How Some of the Greatest Mechanical Ideas Were Stumbled Across.

It is curious the way that some of our most useful appliances were invented or discovered, says Locomotive Engineering. We are told that some Venetian mariners built a fire on a beach, where there was sand mixed with soda, and that they were surprised to find that the sand melted and formed a transparent composition. Some reflecting man was in the party, and by this accidental melting of the sand, discovered how to make glass. Years after this, the children belonging to a Dutch spectacle-maker were playing with the glasses which their father used, and they made the discovery that, by putting one glass in front of the other, they could make the steeple of a neighboring church appear nearer. Their father had sharpness enough to use this accidental discovery in making the first telescope.

A LAZY BOY'S IDEA.

Most engineers are familiar with the story of how the steam engine was first made automatic. In the early rude forms of the Newcommen engine, a boy was employed to open and shut the cocks which admitted steam and the condensing water. A boy named Humphrey Potter, who was engaged on this work, was anxious to play, and the movement of the engine gave him very little opportunity. To increase his leisure, he devised an arrangement of strings connected with the walking-beam, which opened and shut the cocks. This was the first move toward making the engine's mechanism to perform the operations of admitting and releasing steam.

THE FIRST SIGNAL TOWER.

The moving of a distant signal by means of a wire seems a very simple operation, and one which called for little ingenuity to invent. Still the earlier railroad engineers could not devise satisfactory means of operating a distant signal until a working signal man showed them the way. It is told that in 1846, an English signal man had to attend to two signals, placed some distance apart at a station. To save himself the trouble of walking to and fro between them, he procured some wire and pulleys, and made a crude arrangement, by which he was able while in his box to operate both signals. An official who had been trying to devise some means of protecting trains standing at stations happened to see this primitive arrangement, and applied it to the working of distant signals.

DEAR SIRS.—I am thankful to say that through the use of B.B.B. I am strong and healthy to-day. I was troubled with scrofula and Spots and Blemishes all over my body. Being recommended to try B.B.B. I did so, and can positively say it made a perfect cure. The first bottle was very successful, and before I had taken half second I was completely well. I recommend B.B.B. to all comers.

TWO OPERATIONS.

BOTH FAILURES

A Case of Kidney Complaint that Would Not Yield to Surgery or Medicine until B. B. B. Was Tried.

GENTLEMEN,—After having undergone two operations for Kidney Complaint without securing the least relief, and hearing of some remarkable cures made by B. B, B. in our neighborhood, I decided to try it. I was given up by the doctors after the operations failed, and it was providential that I heard of B. B. B. After the use of six bottles I experienced so great relief and so great a change for the better that I felt the good effects would be lasting, as indeed they have been. The seventh bottle perfectly cured me, and I am now stronger and better than I ever was before. People who saw me before I took B. B. B. and who see me now can scarcely believe that I am the same person.

ANIMALS CRAZED BY FIRE.

The panic there is inspired in the minds of horses by a phenomenon so strange as fire can be understood only by those who have witnessed a fire in a large stable where numbers of horses are kept. The scene that ensues is one of the most frightful that can be conceived. The horses are rescued from the burning building with the most difficulty, and only with most serious peril to the lives and limbs of the rescuers. The animals go mad with fright, rear, kick, and dash from side to side so wildly as to make an attempt at rescue as perilous as an advance on a hostile battery. When rescued they will often break away from those who hold them and charge back at full speed into the burning building, there to perish in the flames. They resist every attempt to take them out. They have been known to tear their rescuers with their teeth, to throw them to the ground and trample on hem, to kick out their brains. As the fury of the flames increase so does the panic of the unfortunate animals. They scream out in agony as the fire reaches their bodies, yet they will not, for all that, seek safety in the open air. They are seized with fear, and yet remain to be burned to death when a ten-seconds run would carry them to liberty. But they never make the run, and, as a rule, are burned alive in the stalls, where alone they seem to fancy they can find security.

There is but one way to get them out, and that is to blind them with some convenient cover, such as a coat or a blanket, and thus, unable to see the dangers about them, trembling in every limb, apparently ready to fall to the earth with fear, they may be led out. But the cover must not be quickly removed from their eyes, in fact it should not be taken off until the animals are out of sight of the burning building, otherwise they will break away from the persons leading them and, in spite of the stoutest efforts, will dash back to perish in the flames.

For cows a burning building does not seem to have the same fascination that it possesses for horses. It is said that when a cow stable is burning the animals may be led out without serious difficulty, save that which may result from their fright and the use they may make of their horns in their own frantic efforts to escape. It is a singular fact, however, that has often been noticed along the line of railroads, that the headlight of a locomotive exercises on calves, and sometimes on their mothers also, a species of fascination nearly akin to hypnotism. Engineers tell many stories of this peculiar fact. Not long ago, on a railroad running out of this city toward the South, the engineer of a night train noticed something ahead of him on the track. Always apprehensive of danger, he blew his whistle, put on his brakes and guardedly approached the spot where the obstacle was observed. It was soon seen to be a calf that stood in the centre of the track, staring with wide open eyes at the headlight. The whistle screamed a shrill alarm, the calf did not move, the bell as violently rung, but the animal heeded it not. With some difficulty the train was brought to a halt within a few feet of the fascinated calf, that stood with head erect gazing at the light as though petrified. The fireman jumped down form the cab, seized the calf by the ears to drag it from the track, when instantly, the moment its eyes were taken from the light, the full possession of every faculty seemed to return, and, with a bellow of fright, the calf broke from his hands and ran away at full speed. The animal had undoubtedly been the victim of a species of hypnotism, and the moment its gaze was diverted from the object that fascinated it the spell was broken and the calf ran away.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Tramps in the United States.

According to the New Haven Palladium, Prof. John J. Melook of Trinity College, in a lecture recently said that he had been making a special study of the tramp question, had written to the Mayors of cities all over the country regarding it and collected information in other ways. In the course of his lecture he said; "A recent writer asserts that there are about 60,000 tramps in the United States. This number is a trifle large, although it is safe to state that there are over 40,000. This is larger than the army of Wellington at Waterloo. We look on tramps as human wrecks and driftwood, and yet the majority of them are in the prime of life and in better than the average health. Only 8½ per cent. of the tramps from whom my statistics were gleaned claimed, in the dead of winter, while the grip was raging, that they were in bad health. They are robust, and will fill you with envy, malice and all other jealous feelings when you hear them snoring at midnight. From this we may easily say that neither age nor health is a bar to their working. Most of them have been out of work for months and Yellow as a guinea —The complexion in a case af unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick head ache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURES which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels there after to become regular. High professional sanction has been accorded to it; and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00, Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-smile of their signiture. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Greenway Receives a Remarkable Letter From the United States.

Winnipeg, Man., April 7.—At Gleichen, N.W.T., yesterday a coroner's inquest was held on the body of Frank Skynner, Government issuer of rations, murdered by Scraping Hides, a Blackfoot Indian. Constable Rogers, who shot dead the murderer, was acquitted after formal trial.

The weather throughout Manitoba and the Territories continues magnificent, and farmers are making great progess with their seeding. The unusual earliness of the season well-nigh assures an abundant crop.

Joseph Louie, one of the pioneer settlers of Selkirk, while crossing the ice of Red River yesterday, broke through and was drowned. A dozen people saw him drowning, but could render no assistance, fearing to venture on the ice.

The attention attracted by the Manitoba school question appears to be limited only by the bounds of the earth. Letters are being received by the Government from all parts of the American continent and the Old Country, some endorsing the stand taken by the Government and others asking for information. A characteristic epistle came to hand yesterday from a gentleman in Washington, D.C., who, after referring to the stand taken in the United States for equal rights and non-sectarian education, promised the aid of 100,000 men and $3,000,000 to back up the Government in case they had to defend their position by a resort to arms. This offer came from an organization that has a membership of 3,000,000 in the States.

The Winnipeg Tribune, Premier Greenway's organ, says: "With 800 Orangemen in the constituency of Haldimand and with the Manitoba school question made the main issue. the people of Canada will have an opportunity of seeing to what extent principle counts when partyism is in the scale."

FRENCH SHORE QUESTION

Sir Robert Bond's Remark Being Largely Criticized.

MAIL SERVICE TO NEWFOUNDLAND

Ottawa, April 8.—One of the stipulations which the Newfoundland delegates will make in the event of Union taking place will be a fast steam service between the nearest Canadian point available and the west shore of the Island, there to connect with the railway which is now under construction.

Few men in the Dominion have had a more varied professional career than Mr. Sandford Fleming, the well-known engineer. Learning that some years ago he had taken an interest in the development of Newfoundland, your correspondent called upon Mr. Fleming yesterday and asked him for some information upon the point.

"More than 30 years ago," Mr. Fleming remarked, "I first began to make diligent enquiries about Newfoundland and its possibilities. In my preliminary report on the surveys for the Intercolonial Railway made in 1864 you will find at some length a reference to Newfoundland.

"In making the explorations between Quebec and Nova Scotia I found the country very sparsely settled, and it became my duty to seek out possible sources of traffic for the projected railway on which an enormous amount of Canadian money was to be spent. I conceived the idea that in connection with a line across Newfoundland the Intercolonial could be utilized as a link in a great passenger and mail route between the continents of America and Europe. My views on this subject are fully set forth in my first report on the Intercolonial Railway, published in the spring of 1865. They are likewise appended to my history of the Intercolonial Railway, published by Dawson Bros. in 1876.

"I may say that my thoughts were first directed to Newfoundland in 1863, when I crossed the Atlantic on board the Great Eastern, and found that although the passage between Liverpool and New York occupied 12 days, that great ship ran with ease from land to land in five and three-quarter days. When I became chief engineer of the Intercolonial the same year I formed the opinion that the matter was worth looking into. As I have said, I referred to it in my official report to the Government in 1865, and two or three years later I instituted, on my own responsibility and cost, an examination of the Island.

"In 1867-68 I despatched an engineer, Mr. Walter Bellairs, to make the examination. Mr. Bellairs was about the first civilised man to pierce the interior and to cross Newfoundland from the extreme east to the extreme west. About the time the examination was made I crossed the Atlantic thoroughly imbued with the idea of a great inter-continental communication with a steam ferry across the narrowest part of the Atlantic. I visited ship builders and naval architects in the Clyde, in Manchester and elsewhere and satisfied myself that steam vessels of greatly improved speed and comfort could be constructed so that the ocean passage could be reduced to four days. Since that date the speed of steamers has been so much increased that the short passage could, indeed, be made in little more than three days. I likewise visited Valencia and other points on the west coast of Ireland to gain a knowledge of the best harbors to be used in connection with the Newfoundland project. Having discovered that there were possible difficulties in connection with the French treaty claims on the west coast of Ireland, I determined to proceed to France to seek an audience with Napoleon III., and lay the whole project before him. While in London, however, taking steps in the proper quarter to obtain an audience at the French Court, I was dissuaded from carrying out my intentions. I was informed that it was a matter within the domain of diplomacy, and that gentlemen of the diplomatic service could succeed where I would fail. This information may have been quite correct. Be that as it may, the matter has remained in the domain of diplomacy ever since, and I have always regretted that my designs were frustrated. Having some knowledge of the peculiar character of the late Emperor, I cannot help thinking that progress in the enterprise would have been made, and there is a strong probability that Newfoundland would have been opened up to the traffic of the world and the fortunes of the ancient colony would long since have been linked with Canada."

"Was anything more done to carry out the scheme?" asked your correspondent.

"Oh, yes," Mr. Fleming replied, "although my personal efforts were to a large extent suspended owing to pressing engagements, the project was talked about a good deal, and after some years an instrumental survey for a railway was made across the island under my own directions as engineer-in-chief."

"Was anything more done in connection with the project, or did the whole matter end there; and, if I may ask you, how did you expect to be compensated for all the trouble and expense?" queried your correspondent.

"I cannot say it came to an end; I can only say that I have been unable to follow it up. I was deeply engaged in the construction of the Intercolonial Railway then and for several years afterwards, and in 1871 there was added to my duties the Pacific Railway, which for the following 9 or 10 years absorbed my thoughts and every moment of my time. In the little I had to do with Newfoundland I may say that I was inspired solely with a desire to serve my country and my generation, and the feeling, rightly or wrongly, that I was so engaged was my ample reward."

Naturally, Mr. Fleming is taking a deep interest in the proceedings of the present conference and he is strongly in hopes that the result will be the entry of Newfoundland into Confederation.

The remark of Hon. Robert Bond of Newfoundland that the French shore difficulty is more sentimental than real is being greatly criticized. In the last volume of Dr. Kingsford's History of Canada, the learned writer deals with this subject at some length, and quotes in full the text of the royal declaration annexed to the treaty of Versailles in 1783, under which the fishery rights of France on the west shore of Newfoundland were confirmed.

The royal declaration says: In order that the fishermen of the two nations may not give cause for daily quarrels, His Britannic Majesty will take the most positive measures for preventing his subjects from interrupting in any manner by their competition, the fishing of the French, during their temporary exercise of it, which is granted them upon the coasts of the island of Newfoundland, and he will for this purpose cause fixed settlements which shall be formed there to be removed. His Britannic Majesty will give orders that French fishermen be not incommoded in cutting wood necessary for repair of their scaffolds, huts and fishing vessels.

Dr. Kingsford demonstrates clearly what an injury to the development of Newfoundland this valuable concession has been, and very pertinently he remarks that in any other treaty with France the continuance of these fishery rights will form a matter for serious consideration. Referring in his work to blunders of administration in North America, committed by British statesmen in the past, the historian says: "No man of capacity in public life in Canada can at this hour suppose that what we may describe as Imperial interests ought at any time to be unduly sacrificed to assure the weal of the Dominion. On the other hand it must be plainly understood by Imperial statesmen and by British officeholders, many of whom cling to past traditions, that our just and fair claims are not to be set aside in subordination to party exigencies of the ministry in power in England."

These are bold words of Dr. Kingsford's, and yet they are quite justifiable, even in these modern days. Canada has many a fight for justice and fair play. The struggle for home rule on the copyright question has been in progress for the last six years, and Canada will never rest until she has achieved victory. Similarly for nine years Canada has been asserting her rights to hunt seals in the Northern Pacific. The Paris award went in her favor, but after what a struggle? And with what result? A win for Canada on every point, and had it not been for the high-handed procedure of Sir Julian Pauncefote in signing a treaty of reference to arbitration despite Canada's protest that the arbitrators should be asked to award the amount of damages, if any, to which seized sealers were entitled, this vexed and still unsettled question would have been disposed of in our favor long ere this.

For some time past the practice has been growing of endeavoring to discredit the Postoffice Department by allegations that money enclosed in letters has gone astray or been stolen. Unscrupulous parties have written letters to business houses with whom they have had dealings pretending to remit moneys owing by them, but never enclosing the money in the letters. When an alleged money letter has thus reached its destination, the firm receiving it has at once communicated with the writer notifying him that no remittance was contained in it. Thereupon the Postoffice Department has been blamed for having dishonest officers in its employ. Careful enquiry has been made by the chief inspector's branch in cases of this kind, with the result that it has been shown that often the charge against the service was altogether false. With a view to putting a stop to this irregular proceeding, which is an indictable offence under the criminal code, the Department has issued a warrant against an individual in Ontario and has secured the imposition of a sentence of two months with hard labor. This should prove a salutary warning to any parties who may think they can fool with the Department with impunity.

A copy of the will of the late Colonel Allan Gilmour was mailed to-day to Toronto. It involves the largest sum of any will ever admitted to probate in Ottawa, the total in Ontario being $1,422,825, of which one and a quarter millions represent bank stock or deposits. There is also $67,000 in Quebec. The colonel's collection of paintings is valued at $11,000. Among the bequests are: To the Protestant Hospital $25,000, Old Men's Home and Orphanage $5000 each. Two sisters in Scotland get $10,000 each. John Mather, lumberman, gets $20,000. To John Manuel, his life-long companion, is willed the bulk of the estate, valued at $1,300,000.

The Colonial Office has sent to Lord Aberdeen the copy of an Imperial order-in-council dated Feb. 2, 1895, giving effect to the extradition treaty between Great Britain and Germany.

F. M. Hamel, Assistant Engineer of the Public Works Department, is under suspension for shortage in his accounts. It is understood that the amount has been made good.

The Governor-General and Sir Mackenzie Bowell have accepted invitations to the civic banquet which is being tendered to the Newfoundland delegates.

The Department of Railways and Canals will shortly call for tenders for supply of 25,000 barrels of Portland cement, it being the practice of the Department to supply all cement used on works under its control. In order to guarantee the quality of the article, Canadian manufacturers are urging that the Canadian cement only be used.

In view of the opposition which is being manifested by shippers of live stock to the change by order-in-council in regard to spaces for cattle on ship-board, it may be of interest to quote the precise verbiage of the new regulation. It reads as follows:

No. 2. Fat cattle carried on the upper or spar deck must be given a space of 2 feet 6 inches clear in width, by 8 feet clear in length each, and not less than 6 feet 3 inches in height, but cattle carried on any other deck must be given a space of 2 feet 8 inches clear in width by 8 feet clear in length each, and not less than 6 feet 3 inches in height, and in no case shall more than four head of cattle be allowed in each pen, except at the end of a row where five may be allowed together; provided, however, that five cattle, each 1000 lbs. weight or under, commonly known as "stockers," may be carried in a pen instead of four fat cattle. Pens for sheep shall not be less than 7 feet in height, divided into two compartments, 3 feet 6 inches in height each. Not more than eight or nine sheep will be counted equal to one fat ox on the spar deck, and not more than eight or ten sheep will be counted equal to one fat ox between decks according to the discretion of the inspector. Cows in calf are to be given the same space as fat oxen.

Letters patent of incorporation have been issued to the Dominion Gold Dredging and Placer Mining Company, the Featherstone Piano Company and Maclaren Match Company.

Toronto, April 8.—The session of the Local Legislature was short on Saturday, though several measures of importance were pushed on a stage. It was the intention of the Government to finish the business of the session on Thursday next, but it is doubtful now whether they will be able to carry out this program. In case the session lasts over Easter it will run well into the week following before prorogation. In the Public Accounts Coommittee Mr. Marter attempted to discredit the evidence of Mr. Walter Scott, foreman of the Central Prison workshops, but utterly failed. He succeeded, much to his chargin, in proving that since the workshops at the prison had been established the poor man of the province had been able to purchase all kinds of goods that are manufactured there much cheaper in the open market.

U. C. C. GETS $83,000.

Hon. Mr. Ross moved the second reading of his bill to empower the University of Toronto to settle the claims of Upper Canada College to the Russell Square lands. Under the agreement Upper Canada College was to receive $100,000 from the sale of the lands at the end of seven years. The bill authorises the University to pay on June 1 next the value of the $100,000 which would have seven years to run at 4 1-2 per cent. The amount payable in June will be something about $83,500.

Mr. Howland feebly opposed the bill, but was so rambling in his remarks that his argument could not be followed. No one on the Government benches thought his effort worthy of reply. The bill received its second reading.

ONE MAN ONE VOTE.

Hon. Mr. Ross moved the second reading of his bill to amend the Manhood Registration Act. He said that it extended the provisions of the act to towns and provided that members of the permanent militia and students attending any educational institution might vote in the cities or towns in which they might be situated on election day.

Mr. Howland objected to the passage of the bill on the ground that it was introduced at too late a stage of the session. He wished the bill left over until next session.

Hon. Mr. Ross said that the bill was such a moderate extension of the Manhood Suffrage Bill of last year that it required no special consideration. The bill of last year had been argued at great length in Parliament and it would be useless to continue the discussion. The bill was read a second time.

NOTES.

Hon. Mr. Hardy moved the second reading of his bill to empower the rangers in the Algonquin National Park to arrest persons taking furs in the park, and also to seize the furs. The bill passed the second reading.

The Metropolitan Street Railway bill was considered by the Railway Committee on Saturday. The company asked to be allowed to run their cars on Sunday. This was prohibited, except in the case of milk cars.

The electric railway companies made a strong fight before the Railway Committee on Saturday to have the new Electric Railway Act amended so as to allow the running of Sunday cars. Nearly every electric concern in the province was represented. Mr. William Laidlaw, Q.C., acted as their spokesman. He said that if the clause prohibiting Sunday cars was allowed to stand the Hamilton and Dundas road would not be changed from steam to electricity, and that the Government would ruin the promotion of the Hamilton, Grimsby and Beamsville Railway Company, who had begun the construction of their road upon the understanding that they would be allowed to operate their railway on Sundays. Sir Oliver Mowat promised that the Government would fully consider the matter. Petitions by the thousand are crowding in from members of the W.C.T.U. from all over the province protesting against allowing cars to run on Sunday.

CHINA MUST ADMIT FOREIGNERS.

London, April 8.—The Central News correspondent in Shanghai states the conditions of peace proposed by Japan. In addition to the independence of Corea, the war indemnity and the cession of Formosa and Liao-Tung Province, including Port Arthur, Japan requires, he says, that China shall allow the unhampered importation of machinery into her territory and the establishing and management of manufactures by foreigners. She must pledge herself, moreover, to open to the vessels of all nations the Yang-Tse River as far as Chung-King-Foo, the Sieng-Kiang as far as Siang-Tan-Kien; the Canton River as far as Oue-Hoo-Foo, the Wusung River and the canal as far as Soo-Choo to the north and Hang-Chu-Foo to the south. China must remove permanently the Wusung Bar and provide means to maintain constantly a depth of water sufficiently for large vessels, and the cities of Chung-King-Foo, Oue-Hoo-Foo, Soo-Choo-Foo, Hang-Chu-Foo and others, to be hereafter agreed upon, must be opened up to foreign commerce.

Japan emphasizes the fact that she does not desire for herself commercial advantages that are now extended to the other treaty powers.

As to Snake Bites.

That no less than 20,000 people should have perished last year in the Indian province of Bengal from snake bites shows how little progress has been made by science toward the discovery of some antidote for the poison of these reptiles. The trouble is that the poison of nearly every species seems to affect a different organ of the body. Thus the bite of a cobra seems to paralyze the lungs, while the poison of the dabola produces terrible convulsions. From time immemorial physicians of every clime and race have devoted their energies to the discovery of cures for these bites; but judging from the heavy list of casualties from this source alone in Bengal, the most highly civilized province and possessed of the best system of medical supervision of all English colonial dependencies, it would seem that all efforts in this direction have been abortive.—New York Tribune.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Hamilton Spectator is repenting in sack-cloth and ashes for the abuse (it must have been abuse because it was false) heaped upon Sir Charles Tupper because he rid up his desk in the department of the Minister of Justice, and like the Isralites of old got all ready to leave the land of calamity. The fact that the angel of death withheld his hand leaves the Tory press in the predicament of the man that the Black Knight tells about who was taking his first ride in a train. The train dashed into a tunnel and the novice in fast transit exclaimed. "It's all up now" and tore up his ticket. His trouble commenced when he got out of the tunnel.

The Spectator says that there is good ground for the opinion that Sir Charles Tupper is the most misrepresented man in Canada. Well its a question, and one we guess the Tory press will have to settle whether Sir Charles or Mr. Laurier's tariff policy is the more misrepresented by them.

So it is with the visits of Prof. Dorenwend to Belleville. On his last visit he was so busy that many ladies and gentlemen were unable to be attended to—he is therefore returning to give all who desire it another opportunity of procuring his art goods for the head. Prof. Dorenwend is undoubtedly one of the leaders of his profession on this continent—his skill in arranging the coverings for the head of either lady or gentleman is well known. His goods are acknowledged to be perfect and in every way true to nature. They are the best protection to the head besides giving a refined and youthful expression to the face. Call and examine these marvels of his art and have them fitted in order to judge of the effect. Consult him about your hair, he will (free of charge) give you advice as to the preservation of it. He will be at Hotel Quinte on Thursday 11 April 1895.

TUPPER LOST HIS TEMPER

A Challenge the Minister Did Not Accept.

CAMPAIGNING IN ANTIGONISH, N.S.

Sir C. H. Tupper on Manitoba Schools—Declines to Answer Questions by the Reform Candidate—His Indefinite Way of Handling the Subject.

Halifax, N.S., April 7.—A good deal of interest was attached to the political meeting held in the town of Antigonish Saturday afternoon in connection with the bye-election for Antigonish County. It was anticipated that Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, who was one of the speakers, would make an important pronunciamento on the order in council regarding remedial legislation for the Catholic minority of Manitoba. Although the Minister of Justice devoted nearly the whole of his address to that question, he treated it in a rather indefinite manner.

Sir Charles Tupper was the first speaker. The Manitoba school question, he declared, was the one great and overwhelming issue of the campaign. He said he would not charge Mr. Laurier or the Liberals with arousing the prejudices of the electors, but D'Alton McCarthy and a band of other agitators were engaged in the fell purpose of perpetrating an injustice to the minority in the province of Manitoba.

The Government looked for encouragement in their educational policy to the electors of the County of Antigonish. The defeat of the Government candidate in this constituency would be a severe blow to the Government.

For his part, he did not believe Mr. Laurier would oppose the purpose of the Government on this educational question. Indeed, he expects that the Government could force Mr. Laurier to vote in support of the Government policy on this question.

He pledged himself that if his party were false to honor and justice he would turn his back on them. The Government had taken the first step and were now asking the electors of Antigonish to follow them. If the Liberal candidate were elected, a greater blow would be inflicted to the Government by this county than could be given by any other county in Canada. But the Government were prepared to risk such a fatal blow.

He expressed the hope that Premier Greenway, in the interval between now and the date when Manitoba Legislature re-assembled, would decide that justice should be done to the minority. If that were so it would be all the more satisfactory. If he did not, the difficulty of settling the matter would devolve upon the Parliament of Canada to carry the measure foreshadowed by the Remedial Order.

Sir Sharles' references to the Manitoba school question at this meeting and at a meeting at St. Andrew's on Friday were much more indefinite than at an earlier meeting of the campaign.

Hon. C. F. McIsaac, the Liberal candidate, challenged Sir Charles to state whether or not the Dominion Government would pass remedial legislation if Manitoba Government did not, but the Minister did not accept the challenge. Mr. McIsaac's vigorous arraignment of the knight caused the latter gentleman several times to lose his temper.

VENEZUELA WILL FIGHT

If Britain Refuses to Arbitrate the Boundary Dispute.

Washington, April 8.—Notwithstanding the generally-expressed opinion by the State Department officials and British officials that nothing but a peaceful outcome will develop out of the Venezuelan boundary dispute, those familiar with the temper and feeling of the Venezuelan Government and people on this subject emphatically and unequivocally declare that Venezuela will go to war if Great Britain retains its present attitude and refuses to submit to arbitration the right to the territory which Venezuela claims has been usurped by British Guiana. There is no question that Venezuela, in the event of trouble between herself and Great Britain, would look to the United States for moral, financial and material support. But this, after all, is a secondary condition. Venezuela feels that the country in dispute belongs to her, and insists that self-respect will not permit her to remain passive one minute after it becomes clearly evident that Great Britain purposes retaining possession of it. Venezuela's army on a peace footing does not exceed 8000 men, but it is claimed she could in an emergency place 100,000 troops in the field within 60 days. Many of these troops are veterans.

WILDE MAY GET TEN YEARS.

The Disgraced Poet and Author Arraigned in Court

London, April 6.—Oscar Wilde's friend, Taylor, was arrested and taken to the Bow-street Police Station this morning.

When Wilde was arraigned in the Bow-street Police Court this morning, Alfred Taylor was placed in the prisoner's dock, charged with being accessory to Wilde's crimes. As Taylor stepped into the dock Wilde smilingly recognized him. Taylor is a man of medium size with sharp features and a fair complexion.

Charles Parker, 19 years of age, was the first witness examined. He gave in detail the particulars of his introduction to Wilde by Taylor, and stated that the latter said Wilde was "Good for money." Parker testified that he had frequently dined with Wilde at various restaurants, and detailed the conversations between them on these occasions. He also told of visits to the Savoy Hotel with Wilde, and of meeting Wilde at his chambers at St. James' Place.

The story told by Parker, if true, proves the case of the Treasury against Wilde. Counsel for Wilde and Taylor reserved the right to cross-examine Parker.

May Get a Life Sentence.

The World's London cable says: If Oscar Wilde's indifference during the revelations in court to-day was assumed, it was an excellent piece of acting. It seems certain that he will be convicted. The minimum penalty for the offence with which he is charged is 10 years' imprisonment; the maximum punishment is penal servitude for life. There will be a demand for an exemplary sentence, as public sentiment is aroused against the group to which he belongs. Other prosecutions may follow. Much sympathy is felt for Mrs. Wilde, who is a very estimable woman, and for his two beautiful children. A singular feature of English law is that, even if her husband is convicted and sentenced to penal servitude, Mrs. Wilde cannot get a divorce on either ground.

JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE.

A Penetang Man Killed by Another in Self-Defence.

Penetanguishene, April 8.—"From the evidence we consider that the wound caused Thompson's death, and that Muirhead gave the blow in self-defence; therefore, we consider the case one of excusable homicide." This was the finding of the jury empanelled to enquire into the death of John Thompson, killed by W. J. Muirhead by breaking his skull with a whiffletree. Thompson and one Bowks, while drunk, assaulted Muirhead in his own house, Thompson striking Muirhead with a chair and later viciously assaulting him with an ax. Muirhead took refuge upstairs, closing the stairway with a few boards. In attempting to get upstairs Thompson was dealt the blow which resulted in his death.

THE TALLEST EXTANT ANIMAL.

Male Giraffes Have Reached the Height of Eighteen Feet.

Compared with their extinct allies of earlier periods of the earth's history, it may be laid down as a general rule that the large animals of the present day are decidedly inferior in point of size. During the later portion of the territorial period, for instance, before the incoming of the glacial epoch, when mammals appear to have attained their maximum development, there lived elephants alongside of which ordinary individuals of the existing species would have looked almost drawfs, while the cave bear and the cave hyena attained considerably larger dimensions than their living representatives, and some of the sabletooth tigers must have been considerably larger than the biggest African lion or Bengal lion. Again, the remains of red deer, bison, and wild oxen disinterred from the caverns and other surficial deposits of this country indicate animals far superior in size to their degenerate descendants of the present day, while some of the extinct pigs from the Siwalik hills of northern India might be compared in stature to a tapir rather than to an ordinary wild boar. The same story is told of reptiles, the giant tortoise of the Siwalik hills, in spite of its dimensions having been considerably exaggerated, greatly exceeding in size the largest living giant tortoises of either the Mascarene or the Galapagos Islands. The latter rocks have also yielded the remains of a long-snouted crocodile, allied to the gavial of the Ganges, which probably measured from fifty to sixty in length, whereas it is very doubtful if any existing member of the order exceeds half the smaller of these dimensions, if, moreover, we took into account totally extinct types, such as the megatheres and mylods of South America, and contrasting them with their nearest living allies—in this instance the sloths and anteaters—the discrepancy in size would be still more marked, but such a comparison would scarcely be analogous to the above.

To every rule there is, however, an exception, and there are a few groups of living large mammals whose existing members appear never to have been surpassed in size by their fossil relatives. Foremost among these are the whales, which now appear to include the largest members of the order which have ever existed. The so-called white, or square-mouthed rhinoceros of South Africa seems almost to be fully equal in size to any of its extinct ancestors; and the same is certainly true of the giraffe, which may even exceed all its predecessors in this respect. Whether however, the fossil giraffes, of which more anon, were or were not the equals in height of the largest individual of the living species, there is no question but that the latter is by far the tallest of all living mammals, and that it was only rivaled in this respect among extinct forms by its aforesaid ancestors. Moreover, if we exclude creatures like some of the gigantic dinosaurian reptiles of the secondary epoch, which, so to speak, gained an unfair advantage as regards height by sitting on their hind legs in a kangaroo-like manner, and limit our comparison to such as walk on all four feet in the good old-fashioned way, we shall find that giraffes are not only the tallest mammals, but likewise the tallest of all animals that have ever existed.

As regards the height attained by the male of the tallest of quadrupeds, there is, unfortunately, a lack of accurate information, and since it is probable that the majority of those now living are inferior in size to the largest individuals which existed when the species was far more numerous than at present. It is to be feared that this deficiency
edied. By some writers the h

Profits are made up to a high figure in some instances of the adoption and practice of the system; but they are never allowed to assume a proportion which will excite the business zeal of the shareholders. When they become too large for the principle of unselfishness involved, they go to extraordinary charitable interests. But the liquor sold is not marked down cheap for the purpose of reducing profits. On the contrary, it is marked up, and is going steadily higher. The reduction in the profits of the shareholders below what would be normal receipts is accomplished by the surrender of large proportions of the net incomes to the city or town government upon the understanding that the fund shall go to public works or to charity.—Providence Journal.

England and America.

When Lucan spoke of a more than civil war, he must surely have alluded to such a war as would be waged between Great Britain and North America. The parent devastating the fair inheritance of the child, kindred hands employed in rooting up that prosperity, the increase of which has overflowed in a tide of riches into this island, are subjects too painful for contemplation, and from which the mind of every Englishman turns aside with unconquerable disgust.

Let us have war, if need be, with any other nation, but not with those colonies—the proudest historic monument we possess, the most enduring memorial of Anglo-Saxon greatness.—Robert Lowe.

Keeping Cabbage for Winter Use.

To keep cabbage so as to have them convenient for use during the winter a grower suggests as follows: Cut off the stalks and pack the heads in a clean barrel, filling in with dry, clean sawdust, as the cabbages are put in, until the barrel is full, leaving a good layer of sawdust on top. Set the barrel in the barn or under shelter, but not in a damp cellar. They may freeze, but it will do them no harm.

A Diet of Blood.

The use of blood as a curative agent is said to be on the increase in Paris, and certainly it appears that persons still resort to the abattoires every morning to partake of this nauseous form of so-called cure. Although French doctors do not often prescribe these forms of treatment, "blood-baths" are not infrequently used, and certain patent medicines are sold under the name of "poudre de sang," and other titles.

Facts About Hail.

From the Swiss meteorological records since 1883, Dr. C. Heiss finds that hail is more frequent in valleys than on mountains, that it occurs more often near marshes and in lake valleys than over wooded country, and that river valleys in the path of thunder storms favor its formation, while cultivated land and hilly forests reduce the intensity of hail storms.

NICOTINE BLINDNESS.

"Did you ever hear of tobacco blindness?" said a doctor. "It is something we meet with quite frequently, yet not so much as one would suppose, when the great consumption of tobacco is considered. Yet there are many who are on the threshold of tobacco blindness, who have, or may not have, an experience with the disease.

"For, in tobacco poisoning, like that produced by other drugs, the system can resist the influence of the invader up to a certain point, when the smallest further dose of the poison will produce the same symptoms as the taking of a larger dose would. Thus, in the case of many people, the mere smoking of a pipe or two more a day would produce in them all the advanced symptoms of tobacco poisoning. So it is that doctors make it imperative in such cases that the smoking habit must be dropped entirely. To smoke moderately will not do. You cannot afford to take the chances of giving the system that little bit more of nicotine which would cause the case to be serious.

"Tobacco blindness can, fortunately, be cured. With the smoking habit abolished, plenty of outdoor exercise, a good nerve tonic which would assist in the purification of the blood, as well as toning up the general system, and absentation from alcoholic beverages, there is no reason why tobacco blindness cannot be cured. Alcohol drunk in any of its forms is liable to produce tobacco blindness in a fairly heavy smoker.

"But the strangest part of it all is that a person does not have to smoke tobacco to become afflicted with tobacco blindness. In fact, one of the most obstinate cases I ever had was that of a waiter in a city cafe. He was a nonsmoker, and a total abstainer, yet he came to me with tobacco blindness fully developed, caused by being compelled to work all day in the atmosphere of tobacco smoke, breathing the poisoned air polluted by thirty or forty smokers. It is a wonder why more of the disease is not developed when this is considered. But, fortunately, nature is more kind to us than we are to ourselves, so she gives us strength to throw off many evils to which we are carelessly exposed."—Boston Post.

The Price of Champagne.

It is reported from France that the price of champagne will be, if anything, higher this year than it has been previously. This is somewhat surprising, for although a great deal of money is spent on the manufacture and bottling of the wine, nevertheless its cost of production appears to be wholly out of proportion to the charge at which it is retailed, not only in America, but also in French restaurants. In Paris you must pay 12 francs, or $2.40, for a not strictly first-class bottle of champagne, and the same wine will cost at least $3 in New York. Turning to the bill of fare given in a little guide book to Paris published in 1803, the most expensive champagne is quoted at $1.20 a bottle. To be sure, Chambertin, Volnay, Pommard and Nuits were only $1 per bottle then. A beefsteak with potatoes was 20 cents; and "bouilli" garnished with vegetables only 3 cents; but mutton cutlets were dear, being cited at 20 cents apiece; and a fried sole cost 40 cents, if the book is to be believed. Be this as it may, the value of the champagne produced in France is daily increasing. In the Department de la Marne alone it has increased from $1,327,000 in 1884 to over $6,000,000 in 1891. The strangest circumstance connected with champagne is that the French themselves have little liking for the vintage of Epernay. In fact, the average Gaul rarely touches "fizz," save on the occasions of marriages, birthdays, and grand balls; at the carnival, and sometimes at race meetings. At smart dinner parties this vintage is never served, being deemed vulgar. There is an immense amount of champagne drunk at first-class Paris restaurants, but the consumers are for the most part foreigners—English, Russians, Germans, and especially Americans, who for some unaccountable reason dote on this wine and consider no feast complete without it.—New York Tribune.

The Bloomer Question.

"The first day that seemed spring-like," says a woman who owns a bicycle, "the bloomer question popped up, and it's been my constant companion ever since. Last summer I said I would give up life itself before separating from my skirts. Yet when I would get my feet tangled up in petticoat ruffles and torn facings I would pray for enough commons sense to make me see the error of my fastidious ideas. Now, however, I happen to possess a style of bicycle that will not admit of the wearing of skirts, and at last I've come face to face with the bloomer nightmare. I've given the matter a great amount of study and thought, and have in fancy conjured up an ideal wheeling costume. I want bloomers of corduroy. They will come just below the knees and will be simply full knickerbockers. Then I shall have a very trim, stylish, tailor-made outfit with long jacket and stunning skirt of walking length and heavy plaited back. This skirt will open down the side, the opening being concealed by a narrow panel or revers. Then I will wear leather leggins and a plain little sailor hat and veil. When I ride I'll wear the jacket over the shirt waist, and the jacket will be long enough to hide most of the knickerbockers. Then I'll strap the skirt, neatly folded, of course, to the handle bars, and the moment I alight from my wheel I'll hook my skirt around me, and there I'll be as nice and comfortable as you please, and protected from the stares and jeers of small boys. The question of color is bothersome, too, but I've argued away all hues except brown and green. Black shows the dust and dark blue has been worn to death. I think that brown corduroy bloomers, with a brown and tan novelty suit, will make what ought to be nearly perfect."—Chicago Herald.

THE GAS OF THE FUTURE

SUCH IS THE CLAIM MADE FOR ACETYLENE BY EXPERTS.

Its Remarkable Brilliancy — Latest Facts Concerning the High Candle Power Illuminant, Which is Produced by Electricity From Lime and Carbon.

Since the recent lecture at the Franklin Institute on the new process of producing at low cost the wonderful illuminating gas acetylene, considerable popular interest has been aroused in the possibility of the new gas superseding many of the present methods of lighting in the household. Like many of the other important discoveries in science, the production of gas in large quantities and at a cost sufficiently low to enable it to be used as an illuminant in place of more expensive light was the result of chance. While working with an electric furnace, and endeavoring by its aid to form an alloy of calcium from some of its compounds, it was noticed that a mixture containing lime and powdered anthracite, under the influence of the temperature of the arc, fused down to a heavy, semi-metallic mass, which, having been examined and found not to be the substance sought, was thrown into a bucket containing water, with the result that violent effervescence of the water marked the rapid evolution of a gas, the overwhelming odor of which enforced attention to its presence, and which, on application of a light, burned with a smoky but luminous flame.

HOW THE GAS IS MADE.

Investigation of the cause of this phenomenon soon showed that in a properly constructed electric furnace, finely ground chalk or lime, mixed with powdered carbon in any form, could be fused with the formation of the compound known as calcic carbide, containing 40 parts by weight of the element calcium, the basis of lime, and 24 parts by weight of carbon. On the addition to this of water, a double decomposition takes place, the oxygen of the water combining with the calcium of the calcic carbide to form calcic oxide or lime, while the hydrogen unites with the carbon of the calcic carbide to form acetylene, the cost of the gas so produced bringing it not only within the range of commercial possibilities for use per se, but also the building up from it of a host of other compounds. In addition, the production of the calcic carbide from chalk and from any form of carbon renders us practically independent of coal and oil, and places in our hands the prime factor by which nature in all probability produces those great underground storehouses of liquid fuel upon which the world is so largely drawing to-day.

PROPERTIES OF THE CARBIDE.

The calcium carbide is a dark gray substance, having a specific gravity of 2.2, and when pure a pound of it will yield on decomposition over five feet of acetylene. The density and the hardness of the carbide protect it to a great extent from atmospheric action, so that in lumps it does not deteriorate as fast as would be expected from its great affinity for moisture. For commercial purposes it will be cast direct from the electric furnace into rods 12 inches long and 1 1-2 inches in diameter, which weigh one pound, and will give about 5 cubic feet of the gas.

The acetylene is a clear, colorless gas, with an intensely penetrating odor, which somewhat resembles garlic. Its strong odor is, therefore, a great safeguard in its use, as the smallest leakage would at once be detected, and it would be impossible to go into a room containing any large quantity of the gas.

In all the phenomena of ordinary combustion which we employ to provide us with heat and light there are no compounds of greater interest than the class of organic bodies which, being formed of carbon and hydrogen in various proportions, have been termed hydrocarbons, and it is to this class of bodies that all the gases which can be used as ordinary illuminants owe their luminosity. Among the hydrocarbons the simplest compound is acetylene, and it has been long known that if a stream of hydrogen is passed through a globe in which the voltaic arc is produced between carbon points from a sufficiently powerful current, this gas is produced in minute quantities, but, until the discovery that it could be made in an electric furnace, the gas was practically a laboratory curiosity.

THE COMMERCIAL POSSIBILITIES.

The acetylene gas can readily be liquefied by pressure, and in this way enormous volumes can be compressed into the liquid state in small wrought iron or steel cyclinders, and by means of suitable valves and burners stored and burned. Used in this way, it will be of the greatest possible value for floating buoys, and the small cylinders can also be arranged in the form of portable lamps, while for use in the country, where no gas is available, a large cylinder of the liquid gas placed in an outhouse would supply a country house with light for a very long period; and there is no doubt that there is a very great field for it in this direction, as by utilizing suitable burners a consumption of half a cubic foot an hour will give a light equal to from 20 to 25 candles.

The high illuminating power of the gas as compared with its small bulk, opens up a wide field of usefulness for it in localities where there are neither gas works nor electric lighting plants. With a properly-designed cylinder the carbide in stick form, coated with a slowly soluble glaze, may be mixed with the right proportion of water and used in portable lamps for dining and drawing rooms. As the glaze dissolves from the surface of the stick of carbide acetylene is generated, and the five cubic feet are compressed by their own pressure, the cylinder being placed in a vessel of cold water while the gas is generating, and the gas can then be burned from a suitable jet at the rate of half a cubic foot per hour, which will give a light of over 20 candles for something like ten hours. When the gas is all burned the lime formed is washed out, and the cylinder is charged as before.

COST AS COMPARED WITH COAL GAS.

The economic value of an illuminant such as acetylene becomes apparent when a comparison is made of the cost of the gas for equal illumination with the light obtained from other illuminants. Philadelphia gas has an illuminating power of 16 candles, while that of acetylene is 240 candles, and this at $1 per 1,000 cubic feet would, in lighting value, be equivalent to Philadelphia gas at about 6 1-2 cents a thousand feet.

There is also to be considered that the volume of the new gas to be consumed is exceedingly small as compared with combustion are required in a like degree since a smaller quantity of the gas is burned to secure the same degree of illumination than is the case with ordinary coal gas. In the production of light by means of gas or oil there is produced in the atmosphere of a room carbonic acid gas, the same as given off by a number of persons breathing in the apartments. Experiments made as to the vitiating of the atmosphere of an ordinary room where the burners gave an illumination equal to 48 candles showed that with a consumption of 25 cubic feet of coal gas there was produced 13 cubic feet of carbonic acid gas, or equivalent to the presence in the room of 22 persons, while with acetylene the same power of light given by 1 cubic foot of gas produced only 2 cubic feet of the poisonous carbon dioxide, equivalent to the breathing of not quite four people.

The scope and possibilities of such a discovery cannot be fully realized until many factors are more thoroughly worked out. Nevertheless, the remarkable illuminating power of the new gas its portability, the intensity of the light and its remarkable cheapness open up for it a wide field of usefulness in the household and in the various industrial arts.

Reached the Limit.

"Paper flowers are all right in their place," said a gentleman who boasts of the joys and comforts of married life, "but I'll be hanged if there isn't a limit even to paper flowers. My wife and daughter have the craze, and they have it bad. If I attempt to light the lamp I invariably set fire to a tangle of honeysuckle. If I go to the library I am frightened to death lest I break one of the branches of morning glories that hang like cobwebs in front of the glass. If I attempt to sit down, stand up or walk, I am compelled to reconnoitre about and to indulge in all kinds of Fabian tactics before I can move. I did not object. They enjoyed it and I was satisfied. But Sunday the limit was reached; then my real anger was aroused. I have a small conservatory, which is the joy and pride of my life. On Sunday one of my business friends came up to see me, and I took him out to show him my flowers. That's where the trouble was. My wife and daughters had paper flowers in every nook and corner. Every plant in the place had a paper flower. That settled the matter. That night there was an extremely large bonfire in our yard."—Cincinnati Tribune.

Romancing About the Moon.

The novelists will not let "the young moon" or the "crescent moon" alone, and three times out of four they contrive to get it in the wrong place. How to explain the conviction that haunts the minds of so many of them that the crescent moon may be seen almost any fine evening rising gracefully in the east is altogether beyond us. The point seems to be one for psychologists. Here is a thing that never was seen since the world began, and yet a number of otherwise sane gentlemen are firmly persuaded that it is a regularly recurring natural phenomenon.

Surely the philosophy of this hallucination deserves investigation. The last case that has come under our notice is a well-written story called "A Comedy of Masks," by Ernest Dawson and Arthur Moore. Two friends are sitting out one summer evening looking over the Thames, and, the story goes on, "By this time the young moon has risen, and its cold light shimmered over the misty river." A novelist need not be an astronomer, but he should at least try to draw from nature, and should not pretend to have seen the young moon rising at the hour when it was being packed off to bed.

Some day perhaps a little acquaintance at first hand with the broadest facts of nature will be thought a requisite for writing a good novel, but the time is not yet. Meantime, if our novelists would try to bear in mind that the young moon, like other young things, goes to bed early, that nature does not trust it out late at night, they might get into the way of seeing it at the right time and in the right place, and not treat us to "cold shimmers" that are not moonshines in the least favorable sense of the term.

A singular blunder occurs in an article entitled "Notes from a Marine Biological Laboratory," written by a man of science and a college professor, and printed in a recent number of this magazine. It read as follows:—"It was a beautiful, clear and starry night when we sailed into Windward Passage. The grey mountains of Cuba, outlined against the northern horizon, were slowly fading from view, where the crescent moon rose out of the waves in the east."—Popular Science Monthly.

The Man and the Microbe.

A philosopher has been saying that the main discovery of modern times is that man was made for the microbe. The two elementary principles in connection with it appear to be, first, those things that are wholesome communicate disease; secondly, those things that are unwholesome cause disease. So air, water, milk, butter, oysters, mussels, watercress, foreign fruit, and even the harmless, pleasing kiss, are all capable of conveying infection. Moreover, cabs, dogs, cushions in railway carriages, shaving at barber shops, clothes from the tailors, washing from the laundry, bank notes, books, glasses at restaurants, mud on one's clothes, are other medium for the distribution of disease. Civilized man, then, may only expect to live an average term of life by continuous immersion in boiling water, accompanied by absolute isolation. Beyond that, whatever he eats, drinks, wears or touches should be boiled before he comes in close contact with them. It is remarkable that our predecessors thrived, despite the eternal, though at the time, unascertained, laws of science. Is civilization a failure? Perhaps not; but the good die young and the tough citizen lives to commit crimes and bring civilization disgrace.—New Orleans Picayune.

AN INDUSTRIOUS FORGER.

"Sandy" Campbell Defrauded Numerous Banks of Small Amounts.

Whitby, Ont., April 7.—A. J. Campbell, a commercial traveler well known as "Sandy" Campbell, was put on trial Saturday for fraud and forgery. He was stormstaid here six weeks ago and used this plausible excuse and a forged letter of credit to draw through the Western Bank upon a Port Hope hotelkeeper for $10, who dishonored the draft. A warrant was at once issued for Campbell's arrest, but before this could be accomplished he had managed to put through drafts upon the Whitby Evaporating Works for sums ranging from $12 to $15 from Millbrook, Norwood, Brockville, Sterling, Kingston, two from Cornwall, two from Smith's Falls, Iroquois and Carleton Place. He was arrested at Belleville, just after he had succeeded in discounting a bogus draft for $15. When arraigned he pleaded guilty, and sentence was suspended for a week to enable the Crown to gather information as to his antecedents. He was formerly a resident of Brighton, but his wife and family are supporting themselves in Toronto.

A BANK TELLER'S SUICIDE.

Toronto, April 8. — C. Spencer Millichamp, paying teller of the Bank of Toronto, committed suicide at 2.30 Saturday afternoon. The tragedy was enacted within the wires of the teller's cage at the head office of the bank, Church and Front streets. The bank had been closed for business at 1 p.m., and the 15 clerks employed were engaged at their books. Their tasks were almost completed and the time was drawing near for closing the bank, when Hector Read, receiving teller, who was at work close to Millichamp, heard a sound resembling a moan or stifled groan. Thinking it was the cry of a child he raised his eyes from his books and was horrified to see his fellow-teller flourishing a revolver.

"O don't, for God's sake, don't!" shouted Read as Millichamp's purpose flashed to him. At the same time he rushed for the cage in which Millichamp stood, in the hope of intercepting the arm on its mission of death. Millichamp raised the revolver to his head, and as Read reached the cage door the report rang out and the victim fell in a lifeless heap.

BEAT THE INSURANCE CO.'S.

Coal Oil Poured on Half-Burned Goods After the Fire.

Findlay, Ohio, April 7.—A sensational insurance case was concluded here Saturday. April 8 of last year the large drygoods store of L. & W. R. Carnahan was burned. The owners computed their loss at $75,000, for which amount the goods were insured in 22 companies. The companies refused to settle and the firm brought suit. The companies set up that the goods were insured for twice their value and that the store was set on fire. Many witnesses swore to having squeezed coal oil out of the partly burned goods, it being claimed that W. R. Carnahan put the oil over the goods and then fired the store. The Carnahans contend that insurance detectives poured on the oil after the fire and then hired people to discover the traces. The jury looked at it that way and brought in a verdict for the full amount of the insurance, with interest.

Mr. Sim is very ill, but is expected to recover. Both are over 70 years old.

Tuberculosis may be stamped out by vigorous effort, but it is time to consider whether inbreeding, in some cases, has not weakened the herds and rendered the members more susceptible to the disease. Vigor is the best safeguard, and only vigorous and healthy animals should be used for breeding. It will always be an advantage to procure a male from a herd not akin to the cows. Cholera in hogs has been greatly prevented by avoiding inbreeding within the past ten years, and that fact is one that should not be overlooked by breeders of cattle.

TEMPERANCE

The W.C.T. U gave a very enjoyable parlor social at the home of Mrs. Holden on George street, Saturday night from 7.30 to 10 o'clock. Rev. Mr. George presided and an interesting programme was rendered. After the singing of a hymn and prayer Miss M. Holden rendered delightfully a piano solo, Mr. Frank Lewis sang a solo in splendid voice, Mrs. Larke gave a very pleasing rendering of a recitation and Mr. Pasco McLean sang a rollicking sailor song with good effect. Mrs. Eva Rose York then read an interesting paper of which some extracts follow:

"The Society under whose auspices we have met to-night is an organization of Christian women united in the interests of temperance. Then it was fitting when asked to write a paper for this gathering that I should turn to the Holy Book for guidance regarding the line of thought that by God's blessing could be an incentive to us to still more earnest endeavor. I opened my Bible and read from the revised version, 'And every man that striveth in the games is temperate in all things. Now they do it to receive a corruptable crown, but we are incorruptable.'

"It is easy for most people," she said, "to be temperate in some things. It is easy for some people to be temperate in all things, but they are not the people who ever attain to any great height intellectually or spiritually."

Speaking of temperance in conversation she said: "It has an ethical as well as strictly christian significence. Many a man who is not a christian is faithfully at work building character. But he is making a lamentable mistake in his architecture. What would we think of an architect building a massive and beautiful structure, planned and finished in most exquisite taste but with no windows? And there is being built many a noble character from which is being shut out the light of the world. The Lord's Christ is the light 'that sheweth in a dark place, until the day dawn and the day star arise in your heart.'"

'Of all means for the destruction of the peace the happiness, the lovliness of the individual, of the home of society of the state, of all agencies at work doing the Devil's work, the tongue is the most active and the most efficient. The tongue that is uncharitable, the tongue that is polluted, that with the ease and grace of Satan himself can speak of things that should not be spoken of, the tongue that backbites, that slanders, is a greater power for evil, is a darker blot upon a christian community than all the strong drink that community can manufacture. Give us pure tongues, give us kind tongues and many of the so called unsoluble mysteries of life will be cleared away."

"Temperance in matters of adornment might be enjoined upon christians more especially perhaps upon christian women. In olden times men who strove in the games were temperate in diet that they might not carry unnecessary weight in their race. And is it not possible for the lavish adornment of our persons or our homes to become a burden to the soul in its race heavenward?

"Be temperate in your amusements" is advice often given and as often disregarded. * * * Excess is wrong for the Christian because it makes too great a draft upon time and strength and money; life is short and the King's business requireth haste.'"

"Regarding the work in the interests of which we have met to-night, it seems to me that nothing new can be said. It is the old story of the Siren's song wooing to inevitable death. It is the old story of fragrance and sparkle, of weakness and surrender. It is the old story of ruined homes, broken hearts and lost souls.

"I am afraid I shall disappoint this audience in what I shall say regarding the manufacture of strong drink. I have no convictions as to the duty of the State in this matter. I do not know its duty. But those upon whom the responsibility rests should know and should act accordingly. A man who has not the courage of his convictions has not the right to be in the State nor in the Church nor any place else where his influence can be felt. A moral coward is about as mean a specimen of humanity as can be found.

"But I can say this regarding the manufacture of intoxicants. The man who has been redeemed by the sacrifice of the guiltless for the guilty, by the law of love, and yet make it the business of his life to manufacture that which he knows will ruin his neighbor, body and soul, sins against his Redeemer against his neighbor and against his own soul. If a man is not a Christian his responsibility in manufacturing strong drink is in proportion to his moral sensibility.

"Regarding the sale of intoxicants and the pernicious practice of treating the word of Jehovah is this: 'Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink that putteth the bottle to him and maketh him drunken.'"

At the antique tea recently given in the Tabernacle, the most characteristic part of it all, as far as antiqueness went, was the selections from some sermons preached in 1663 read by Rev. Dr. Gardiner. The Dr. has favored us with some excerpta that will be interesting as examples to pulpit oratory of two centuries ago and which we accordingly give:

The paper concluded by impressing the belief that the ultimate success of the Temperance cause was dependent not on Parliament or organization but upon the efforts of the Holy Spirit working in every Christian life; and that success could not be attained until every Christian was awake to his individual responsibility.

After a few minutes intermission for conversation, Mrs. York and Miss Holton interested the gathering with some more piano melody. Mrs. Campbell played a delightful medley of Scotch airs. A recitation, a touching and pathetic story with a moral, delightfully told by Miss Jessie Brignall, concluded the evenings entertainment.

I. Text. "I have learned in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content." To allay our discontents, we who are wilfully and peevishly honest. This world is for worldlings to posses and enjoy it. They are best qualified to thrive in it, who can lustily bustle and scramble; who can fiercely swagger and huff; who can fawn, and wind and wriggle like a serpent; who can neatly shuffle and juggle; who can veer any whither with any wind. Those who have a spirit so limber that they can stretch it; who have face enough and conscience enough to do anything, without regard to what they say or what they do. They flourish in the world.

II. "Rejoice evermore." Men rove through all the forest of creatures, in pursuit of joy. We learn that religion doth oblige us to be joyful. The gospel is good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. God's great gift is a most blessed Comforter. The Kingdom of Heaven consists in righteousness, and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. The doctrines, institutions, precepts and promises, fit us to rejoice evermore. Every kind of faith, which embraseth divine truths, which applieth God's, mercy and ensureth God's promises, is a spring of joy; that bringeth much ease and peace in our hearts.

III. "I made haste and delayed not to keep thy commandments." Preserving our soul's health, and curing its distempers, requires time as any other Art or Science. Virtue is not a mushroom. But a delicate plant, that needs care in this worlds unkindly weather. It is a prize too noble to be won by a charm. Neither is vice a spirit or adversary to be dispatched with a stab. If we mean to be good or happy, it behooveth us to be up and at our great task; to use all means for the reforming of our hearts and lives; to set out early. As for the gentle whispers and touches of Divine Grace, to persons settled in their lies, they are but gusts of wind, to supple a callous heart. Let us speedily and earnestly set upon the work.

IV. Providing for honest things not only in the sight of the Lord, but in the sight of men. Men commonly neglect their duty; or comply with sin out of modesty. They are afraid of men's faces. This is a perverse and unmanly modesty. A vile, a shameful shame, fie on it. Is it fit that any man, should be ashamed of yielding due reverence, rendering due gratitude, or performing due service to his Creator, sovereign Lord and great Benefactor. We ought to perform these things with greatest confidence.

Men prizing the favor of men, dreading their hatred and disdain, are scared from their duty. But this is a base, silly sorry fear. Is this a reasonable, an excusible, tolerable fear? The fear of God should exclude the fear of men. We should be courageous in defence of goodness. It is a part of duty to despise obloquy, to expose and lose reputation for God's sake. The profession of our faith in God, by confessing our Lord before men, is requisite to salvation.

Palm Sunday at St Michael's

Yesterday being Palm Sunday most of the worshippers at St. Michael's church carried twigs of Cedar, that in this northern clime do duty for palms. At the morning service Monsgr. Farrelly spoke briefly. Referring to the tragic scene that the day commemorated he said that all those who persisted in transgressing the law of God crucified Christ afresh.

He spoke at greater length regarding the late Sister Monica who died at the Convent last week. Her life of self abnegation faith, purity and humility was an example. He referred to those who from the public platform and the pulpits of other churches declaim against all nuns and priests.

There were bad priests and bad nuns, he said, there had always been and probably would be. There were bad ministers of other sects. But the Catholic church had never taken a fallen woman or a debased minister of another church and put them up in their sacred altar to revile the church they had disgraced. A question his hearers might ask those who declaimed against the purity and living of the priesthood and the nuns was whether they had ever heard, known or read of this being done in the Catholic church.

The musical service was very fine. Mr. J. N. Doyle sang a solo and his magnificent baritone voice filled the arched isles in the strains of a beautiful hymn,

DEAR SIRS—During the winter of 1892 93, I was covered with pimples on the inside of my right leg between the knee and the ankle. As I never had anything of the kind before I was anxious about it, and sought medical advice, but getting no relief from the doctor I tried a bottle of B. B. B., applying some of it to my leg as well as using it internally, and to my surprise the nasty disease, whatever it was, disappeared within three weeks, and I am thankful to say it has never re-appeared.

A MANIAC'S DEED

The Tragedy was Committed on Cedar Island this Morning—The Victim Well Known—Not a Bright Career

It was rumored on Front street this morning that Mrs. David Gerow, who with her husband, lives in a little shanty on Cedar Island, about three miles down the bay and about one hundred yards from the Ameliasburg shore, had committed suicide. On the strength of the rumor a reporter of the ONTARIO procured a horse and buggy and started for the scene of the tragedy. After a four mile drive through roads that sometimes took the horse over his knees in slush and water, he drew up at a farm house almost three-quarters of a mile from the Island. Then began a walk to the Island which took almost an hour as the mud was deep and after the ice was reached which separates the Island from the mainland the water was sometimes over a foot deep. The island was reached however without any accident and there the scribe was treated to a sight which he hopes he may not see again.

The shanty is a low structure and one can just stand in it with comfort. There are two rooms—one which is used as a kitchen and the other a bed room. Everything was in general disorder, unwashed dishes on the table and things scattered on the floor in a way to indicate that the inmates were not of a tidy disposition. The reporter was shown into the room in which the suicide had taken place. There were two beds in the room, one which indicated that it had lately been slept in, and in the other the body lay covered up by the bed clothes. On the stand beside the bed was a testament and a hymn book and one hairpin, a nail, and a piece of steel, evidently a part of a rib from an umbrella. These are supposed to have been taken from the deceased head before she retired and had been used to keep her hair in place. When the blankets were removed the body lay on its back with the head slightly turned towards the wall, the left hand was placed across her breast and the other lay out across the bed beside which laid the keen edged razor with which she had cut her throat. She had evidently taken the razor and with one stroke had severed the juglar vein, a large gash being just below the left ear. The blood had saturated her clothing and lay in a large clot on her left side. Her face wore a calm, peaceful expression like one in sleep. The body was left without being touched waiting for the arrival of the coroner, Wm. Peck, of Albury. When notified of the tragedy he did not think an inquest necessary.

HER HUSBAND'S STORY.

David Gerow, the husband of the unfortunate woman, told the following story: He arose at 2.30 this morning and started out on the bay to bring in his fish shanty before the ice had got any weaker. His wife was then sleeping and he said he thought that he would return before she awoke.

When he returned she was still breathing but she expired shortly afterwards. She had got up and walked across the room to where the razor was kept and then lay down and cut her throat. She had not been in her right mind for some two months past and yesterday was worse than usual.

Mrs. Gerow, as far as can be learned, was a woman of about 50 years of age. Her maiden name was Lizzie Daw, and twenty years ago she was a frequent habitaut of the jail as a street walker and vagrant. Then an old weaver named Gillespie who lived in Ameliasburg, came up to the jail and wanted a housekeeper and Lizzie was recommended. They lived together as man and wife quite happily until about ten years ago when the old man died, During all the time both of them were somewhat addicted to drink, but she was reputed to take good care of the old man.

About six years ago she married Dave Gerow, and latterly they have not got along well. Last fall she came into the police station here and told a pitiful story of neglect and abuse. She had earned some money, she said, and bought some groceries, and he had gone off with them all, and she had to wade through the water to the mainland.

Gerow's first wife died very suddenly some eight years ago. She was milking a cow and he was standing beside her when she fell over, so the story goes. The body turned black shortly afterwards, and it was thought that she had broken a blood vessel. He had a large family by his first wife but no children by the deceased.

HE STOPPED THE FLOW OF SILVER

The Horse Buyer who had Spent $3000 on Front st Quits Because the Chief Told him to Move Down a Little

Nearly all day Saturday a considerable crowd was assembled on Front st. near the corner of Bridge and extending down towards the market. They were the disinterested spectators of the operations of Mr. J. Silver the horse buyer and part owner of the Grand Repository, Toronto. The curtain fell suddenly early in the afternoon. Chief Newton requested the buyer to move a little further down street so as not to block the crossing, but Mr. Silver would brook no interference and under the impression that he had been affronted, he immediately quit work.

Mr. Silver was seen by a reporter of the ONTARIO in the Quinte House Saturday evening and then was very indignant over the matter. He said he had during his visit to Belleville paid out $8000 and he thought it was not the right kind of treatment to receive from an official whom he thought evidently did not know his business. "I do not intend to buy another horse in Belleville," exclaimed Mr. Silver. "I shall go to Cobourg on Monday morning and buy my horses there. I had ordered a car to ship a car-load from here but I had only purchased six horses when I was told to stop buying. I have bought horses in a good many places in this province and I never received such treatment before. If the police objected to the crowd they should have dispersed them. They had no business there, I was not buying them. I like Belleville and I have paid the largest prices here for any horses I ever purchased in the Dominion. I sold a team of horses in Toronto last week for $500 which I purchased here on Front street. Another sold for $230 and another for $255. Now as I spend a good deal of money here I think I should have received better treatment. I am not a sharper who swindles the farmers and they know it and I have just begun to be known well enough to do a good business but I shall not attempt to again buy any more horses here."

Pulling a large roll of bills from his pocket which amounted to about $700 he exclaimed "That money is what I should have spent here this afternoon, but now it will be spent in Cobourg." Mayor Walmsley went down and saw Mr. Silver and tried to smooth things over but the horsebuyer did not care to discuss the subject.

THE CHAMPION OARSMAN

Jake Gaudaur is in the City Looking up the Prospects of a Regatta in July

Jake Gaudaur, the champion oarsman of America, and the man who has the strongest claims on the championship of the world, as he has on two occasions beaten the championship holder, Stansbury, of Australia, once by thirty boat lengths, is in the city. He was interviewed yesterday by an ONTARIO reporter in the parlors of the Queen's Hotel, where he is at present stopping, the guest of Mr. W.W. Power. Jake was present at a meeting of the Carnival Committee on Saturday afternoon in H. Corby's office when the question of a regatta was brought up. To the reporter Jake expressed his opinion of the advisibility of holding a regatta here this summer.

"I have no doubt but what it would prove an immense success," remarked the champion sculler, "either for a two or three days event. You could have canoe races for one day, yacht races the second, and a sculling race for the third day. The bay is a first-class place for a sculling race and could be seen by a large crowd of people. Two or three courses could be laid out and the one adopted which could be used to the greatest advantage. When I rowed Hanlan at Orillia two years ago it was witnessed by ten thousand people, and it was not advertised as it should have been. If your papers would boom it as it should be, I have not the least doubt but that it would bring a larger crowd to your city than it has been known in its history."

In reply to a question by the scribe as to whether or not Harding could be induced to row here for a purse of $1000, Jake said he was certain if Harding came over to the regatta which is held at Austin, Texas in May he could be induced to race in Belleville before he returned to England. "If I succeed in beating Harding he will want a chance to get back at me you know," said jake with a smile. "When a man is defeated he is sure he could win the next time, and in that way he would be induced to race again."

The Texas regatta is to be held in Austin next month and Jake with his trainer, James Rice, leaves this week and will at once go into training for the event. The champion at present weighs 206 pounds, but will be reduced to 175 when the race comes off. His boat is a Ruddick and is 36 feet by six inches and weighs 28 pounds. Jake is not only prepared to race Harding here but any man in the world. His record which he made in 1886 of 19¼ minutes for three miles has never been beaten by anyone.

"If Harding cannot be persuaded to come" said the Champion, "I shall try to get Teemer, or Peterson the California champion to row. I will advertise Belleville in Austin this summer and if arrangements can be made I will be ready at the end of July to race in Belleville." He will leave for his home in Orillia to-night preparatory to going to Texas.

Foot Bridge Approach

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ONTARIO.

SIR.—I ask the use of a brief space in the columns of the ONTARIO for the purpose of drawing the attention of the proper authorities to the disgraceful state of the road leading from Front street to the footbridge. A few hours labor would remove the ice from this neglected spot, and put it in such a state as would make it fit for human beings to pass over. If the ice were removed and a small channel cut on each side of the board walk, a gentle breeze would, in a few hours, dry the boards, and make the walk fit for pedestrians. I trust the energetic chairman of Public Works will not allow another day to pass without causing this necessary work to be done, and I am sure if he had passed over this place recently, he would have seen the necessity of it himself. It is a matter of surprise to everybody who sees the vast crowds who use the footbridge, morning, noon and night and every day in the week why some attention is not given to the cleaning up of this place. To church goers it is simply intolerable, as they not only have to wade ankle deep in filth but are in constant danger, as many have already done, of measuring their length in the mire. I think I speak the feelings of all who have occasion to use this thoroughfare when I say it is simply a disgrace to the city and shows a gross lack of duty on the part of somebody. Yours etc.

Mr. H. E. Eplett, a student at the O. B. College died yesterday morning at his boarding house on Hotel street, of hemmorage of the lungs. His home is in Cold Water, Midland, where his father is station agent on the G. T. R. He came to the city about the first week in February. He had only been ill about a week. He was a member of Mr F. E. O'Flynn's bible Class, the members of which attended the removal of the body to the depot this morning. The pall bearers were Messrs. Robinson, Johnson, Osborne and Baker. A large number of the students from the college also attended. The floral tributes were very beautiful, The college sent a large pillow and the students and members of F. E. O'Flynn's class each sent a wreath. The young man was a great favorite with his class mates and friends who deeply regret his sudden demise.

Fire at Rossmore

A fire occurred on Saturday evening in Rossmore when the frame house owned by Edward Reddick and used as a shoe shop by Edward Kane of this city was totally destroyed to-gether with some of its contents. The fire occurred about nine o'clock, it being caused probably from the fire which was left burning in it at the time. There was an insurance on the building of $200 which will nearly cover the loss.

A small vacant shop next door was also burned. Mr. Reddick's home was the oldest building in the village.

Yellow as a guinea.—The complexion in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick head ache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURES which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. High professional sanction has been accorded to it; and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.

The Best Pill.—Mr. Wm. Vandervoort Sidney Crossing, Ont., writes: "We have been using Parmelle's Pills, and find them by far the best Pills we ever used." For Delicate and Debilitated Constitutions these Pills act like a charm. Taken in small doses, the effect is both a tonic and a stimulant, mildly exciting the secretions of the body, giving tone and vigor.

- WALL PAPER -

THE DESIGNS of our spring wall papers are beautiful and the colorings exquisite. The effects they produce upon the wall have been studied with intelligent sympathy, and the "long-felt wants" of a few years ago have been provided for with cultivated taste. A judicious employment of any of our papers leaves little to be done in a room—a few ornaments according to the taste or wealth of the occupant are all that is necessary to contribute to its beauty and comfort. Our papers thoroughly represent the standard of the prevailing taste in interior decorations.

NO WASTE FUEL.

Success of a Seven Months' Test in Yorkshire Mills.

A seven months' test of the new process of heating boilers with hot air and gas instead of cold air and slack, at one of the Yorkshire plants, is reported as having proved very satisfactory. In this process the cold slack is not stopped in the boiler furnace, but is placed in a brick chamber some distance from the boilers, and is there turned into gas; the air is heated by being made to circulate in flues round the chamber made hot in the process of gas making, and the gas and air in their heated state are carried in flues to the boiler furnace, where they mix and are ignited, both the upper and lower parts of the furnace being blocked by these flues, so that nothing can enter but the hot gas and hot air. No part of the furnace is ever opened and no cold air ever strikes boiler plates or heat space. Where there is a high chimney it is necessary that the damper be lowered, or the furnace will contain a mere torrent of fire rushing to the chimney, and, as the damper is lowered, the flames will rise and spread until the whole space, below as well as above the bars, ash place as well as furnace, will be filled with flame—a sea, instead of a torrent of fire—the same effect being practicable by reducing the height of the chimney. By using a fan to increase the air supply, the heat can be raised to any possible temperature—even to a glare requiring colored glasses to look upon—with a chimney no higher than a house chimney. Thus, with this sea of burning gas, it is impossible to have smoke, and, with no waste in smoke or escaping gases, a great reduction in fuel is claimed.—New York Sun.

INCOME TAX RENDERED HALVED.

Washington, April 9.—The decision of the Supreme Court on the income tax law was rendered to-day. Chief Justice Fuller read the decision of the question whether or not the tax on rents from real estate is a tax on real estate and therefore a direct tax, and announced that the court has decided that it is a tax on real estate, therefore a direct tax, and as provided for in the present law unconstitutional. The opinion of the chief justice also declares that the tax on municipal and state bonds is unconstitutional. On all other points the court is equally divided and no opinion thereon is given. The decision of the court below on these points is reversed and a similar entry made in the case of John G. Moore.

Justice Harlan was of the opinion that a tax on gains, profits, income derived from rent of lands was not a direct tax, that under numerous decisions of this court the income derived from municipal bonds was not the subject of specific taxation in any form by the United States.

Associate Justice Field read an opinion declaring the whole income tax provisions of the tariff law of 1894 to be unconstitutional. Associate Justice White dissented from the view of the court and protested against a re-opening of the decisions of the court of a hundred years past. He concurred with the majority of the court, however, upon the question of the taxation of state and municipal bonds.

On the question of the constitutionality of the taxation of incomes from state and municipal bonds, it was unanimously in the negative. Upon the question of the taxation of rents the court stood six against the law, two for. Upon the general question of the constitutionality of the law the court divided as follows: For the law, Justices Harlan, Brewer, Brown and White. Against the law, Chief Justice Fuller, Justices Field, Gray and Shiras.

Will Cut the Revenue in Half.

The effect of the Supreme Court decision in the income tax law so far as the Treasury Department officials can determine after a hurried estimate will be a reduction of about one-half in the revenue originally estimated as obtainable from that source, thus making the annual revenue to be expected about $15,000,000. The original estimate of $30,000,000 per year was passed on the assumption that the law would be held to be constitutional in all its provisions.

Collectors of internal revenue will be notified of the decision and instructed to make whatever corrections may be necessary through the decision rendered in the blank form furnished them by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. No new forms will be issued and the work of preparation for the collection of tax will proceed without delay.

Will Make the Tax More Unpopular.

Rochester, April 9.—The Democrat and Chronicle says editorially regarding the decision of the United States Supreme Court on the income tax:

"The law stands except as to the parts decided adversely. It is not, however, rendered more equitable or just or tolerable by these eliminations. For instance, the owners of great landed estates, like the Astors of New York, will not be taxed on their princely incomes derived from rents, nor will aliens who own lands in the United States. The planters of the South are also exempt from taxation on earnings from their broad acres. But manufacturers who have hundreds of thousands of dollars invested in active enterprises must hand over a share of their incomes to the Government, as also must bankers, merchants, business men and the salaried and professional classes who receive $4000 a year or upwards. Thus there is a grossly unfair discrimination which will make the law more unpopular than ever and will undoubtedly lead to its early repeal."

No Extra Session of Congress.

Washington, April 9.—The President on being asked this afternoon whether, in view of the decision of the Supreme Court on the income tax law, an extra session of Congress would be called, said that neither he nor the Secretary of the Treasury saw any necessity for such action, and that, unless there was an unexpected change in conditions, he had no idea that Congress would meet again before the time appointed for its regular session.

FLOODS AT GORRIE.

A Sawmill and Dam Swept Away—Loss Over $4500.

Gorrie, Ont., April 9.—One of the most disastrous floods that has taken place in Gorrie on the River Maitland took place to-day, in which William Dane, miller, and Hammond Bros., lumber merchants, were the chief losers. The flood washed away Dane's dam and totally wrecked Hammond Bros.' steam saw mill and office. At present every indication is that the new bridge, built last summer, will go. The total losses are estimated to be not less than $4500.

Forged His Mother's Name.

Montreal, April 9.—W. H. Sibley, who was arrested some 10 days ago on the charge of being an accomplice of Victor Anderson, while attempting to pass a forged cheque on the Bank of Montreal, was brought before Judge Desnoyers this morning and acquitted for want of proof. He was not allowed, however, to step out of the box a free man, for he was rearrested on a warrant sworn out by Superintendent Carpenter of the secret service, with having forged his mother's name to three promissory notes for amounts of $275, $300 and $25. All three notes, which are denied all knowledge of by Mrs. Sibley, who resides at Port Arthur, were presented at and discounted by the Bank of Montreal. Sibley, who pleaded not guilty, will be brought up for examination to-morrow.

New York Central Electric Road.

Buffalo, N.Y., April 8.—This morning the New York Central put a big gang of laborers at work upon the new electric line that will run between Buffalo and Niagara Falls. The roadbed from Tonawanda to the falls has been improved, and the tracks will be straightened somewhat. Three cars which will be used on this line are at Tonawanda. They are furnished with great elegance.

Balmy Spring in Colorado.

Denver, Col., April 8.—Owing to the terrific snowstorm which has prevailed in the vicinity of this city and Eastern Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska, trains have been stalled on all the railway lines east of Denver and hundreds of men and several snowplows are now engaged in clearing the tracks of drifting snow and sand.

Norwood, April 9.—A peculiar robbery took place here yesterday, in which the house of George Hendren was entered some time during the day, and $300 in cash was stolen belonging to his son, Stanley Hendren. A note for $60 was also taken.

Franco-Canadian Treaty Not Ratified.

Paris, April 9.—The ratification of the Franco-Canadian treaty is held in abeyance pending the Dominion's legislation on certain points involving the "most favored nation" provision.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S UNION ASSURED

Delegates Confident That Terms of a Basis of Union Can Be Agreed Upon—Reported Influx of Settlers Into the Edmonton District.

Ottawa, April 9.—There was no conference between representatives of Canada and Newfoundland to-day, each side being engaged, it is understood, in drafting a basis of union for submission to the full conference. From these two proposals it is anticipated that an agreement will be reached. Up to Saturday, the financial condition of the island was under discussion. It is stated that both sides are satisfied, from what has already been done, that terms of union can be arranged.

Reports received at the Interior Department indicate an active immigration movement into Northern Alberta this spring. "During the month of March," one report says, "370 settlers have arrived and settled north of Calgary, and this in the month when nothing more than locating the land and perhaps getting out a few logs or fence rails can possibly be done. The bulk of these settlers have come from the Western States, our neighbors, and are people who know exactly what the country is like before coming, having either sent delegates to inspect the country's resources or have heard from their friends, who have been here before them. These settlers are not coming empty handed. Thirty-four carloads of stock and effects were brought in by them. There were eighty-five settlers on the last train leaving Calgary, over half of whom came through to Edmonton, four from England and sixty-nine from various parts of the United States."

The Department of Trade and Commerce has received a report from its correspondent in Norway, Mr. Sontnum, of Christiania, in which he makes mention of the growth of the exportation of frozen milk from Norway to Great Britain. The freezing process has been patented, and the inventor expects to be able to ship by May 1 100,000 pounds of milk per week to the leading cities of Great Britain. The commencement of this business has led to a loud outcry in England. The Mark Lane Express the leading agricultural authority, calls upon the Government to check it by means of regulations such as apply to the sale of oleomargarine and like products.

In a letter received by the Marine Department from Mr. Smith, Deputy Minister, he states that Sir Edward Reed, chairman of the departmental enquiry into the undermanning of ships, is at present down with influenza, and consequently the committee is unable to prepare its report.

Considerable comment has been aroused in this city from the fact that Mrs. Langtry is billed here for a one-night stand on Good Friday. Local church people are indignant at the selection of this night for the presentation of Mrs. Langtry's play. The matter is being very strongly condemned by some of the Anglican and Roman Catholic clergy. Since the matter was referred to from the pulpit by Archdeacon Lauder in Christ Church, Rev. Mr. Pollard, St. John's; Rural Dean Bogert, St. Alban's; Mr. Snowdon, in St. George's, and others have taken it up.

In December last there was a reorganization of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Ottawa upon a scale which did not include in the new management any of the old party stalwarts. Then followed a similarly constituted convention in March. The latter move stirred up the older heads, and in the morning papers they duly advertised the annual meeting for the 15th. The evening Opposition organ contains a similar notice signed by the new officers, so there are likely to be two annual meetings next Monday night.

Sir Donald Smith arrived from Montreal this evening, and had a short interview with the Premier.

Mrs. Thomas Raphael, a daughter of the late James McLaren of Buckinghham, died at Wakefield this morning.

Commander Spain of the Fisheries Protection Service goes east to-morrow to arrange for putting the protection cruisers into commission.

$20,000 FOR ALIENATION.

Woodstock, April 8.—J. S. Mackay, barrister, acting for his client, Mrs. Nickerson, has issued a writ against the widow of the late W. C. McLeod, Woodstock's well-known millionaire, claiming $20,000 damages for the alienation of her husband's affections.

The plaintiff is the wife of Nathaniel Nickerson, a farmer, residing near Braemar. She is a cousin of the defendant.

American Swindler Caught in Paris.

Paris, April 8.—The Temps says an American swindler named Wing has been arrested in Paris for obtaining advances upon the bogus securities of the Rock Island, Peoria and St. Louis Railroad, a concern which, according to the railway authorities, has no existence. Wing formerly occupied grand apartments in the Hotel Continental, but when he was arrested he had only two francs on his person.

Small Boy's Vain Hunt for Relatives.

Buffalo, April 8.—A 10-year-old boy named McGlade was sent to St. Catharines this morning. He had come from that city to seek his sister, but was unable to find her. The police have had him in charge since Saturday.

Strathroy Saw and Grist Mill.

Strathroy, Ont., April 9.—Sunday morning fire totally destroyed the saw and grist mills of Andrew Thompson. The loss will be about $5000, insured for $1600 in the Northern.

Juvenile Female Samson.

Montreal, April 8.—Louis Cyr's little daughter made her debut as a strong girl last night. She is only 7 years old and weighs 65 pounds, yet she lifted two dumbbells of 306 pounds, a 33-pound dumbbell above her head, a 150-pound one with one hand and two weighing 89 with one finger.

Duke of Edinburgh's Daughter Betrothed.

Rome, April 8.—The Giornale announces the betrothal of the Prince of Naples to Princess Alexandra of Saxe-Coburg.

A despatch from Darmstadt says that the Princess Alexandra is already betrothed to Prince Ernest of Hohenlohe, eldest son of the Viceroy of Alsace-Lorraine.

If you once try Carter's Little Liver Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable, small and easy to take. Don't forget this.

BRITISH LOCAL VETO.

The Bill Passes Its First Reading in the Commons.

London, April 8.—In the House of Commons to-day Speaker Peel made the announcement that owing to the condition of his health was obliged to resign his office. He expressed regret at leaving the post, which he had filled for 11 years. During that time, he said, he had constantly been the recipient of evidences of consideration and forbearance from all sides of the House, and for these manifestations he desired to express his sincere thanks.

Sir William Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, introduced the local veto bill, which is substantially the same as the measure submitted in 1893. Sir William Harcourt, referring to the question of making compensation to keepers of public houses who had been legislated out of business, said that compensation to them was not practicable upon a pecuniary basis. The only compensation that the Government could offer, he said, was that a fair and reasonable length of time should be offered before the licenses were withdrawn.

The House of Commons passed the Local Veto Bill through its first reading without division.

Sir Edward Grey, replying to a question by Sir Thomas Esmonde, said the Government could not interfere in the case of ex-Queen Liliuokalani of Hawaii.

Replying to a question by Sir George Baden-Powell, Sir Edward said that the Government had not yet received any response from Venezuela in regard to England's demand for an explanation of the recent insult to the British flag in British South American territory.

The Coming Speaker.

Mr. William Court Gully, who is the Government candidate for the Speakership when Mr. Peel vacates the chair, is a distinguished member of the English bar. He is a leading counsel on the Northern Circuit, and for several years he has regularly attended Carlisle Assizes, where he has been engaged in many important cases. He became a student at the Inner Temple at the age of 18, in 1853, was called in 1860, took silk in 1877, and was appointed recorder of Wigan three years ago. He is the second son of the late Dr. J. M. Gully, formerly of Great Malvern, and he was born in London. His grandfather was in his youth a well-known pugilist. Mr. Gully graduated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he was president of the union. After twice making a valiant but vain attempt to oust Mr. Cavendish-Bentinck from the representation of the neighboring borough of Whitehaven, he was, in 1886, returned for Carlisle, and has sat for that constituency ever since.

THE WAR IN INDIA.

London, April 8.—Advices from Calcutta received to-day report that the Chitral expedition succeeded in carrying the fords of the Swat River on Saturday. The entire expedition, with provisions, munitions, etc., were transported and proceeded by forced marches to Dir. The second brigade forced the passage, doing excellent work with their battery and Maxim guns. The Bengal Lancers after fording attacked the enemy, who retaliated slowly. The Lancers charged the enemy, who broke into a run. They were pursued for miles by the Lancers, who killed hundreds of them. Further up the river the Scottish Borderers made a crossing and succeeded in capturing Umra Khan's fort. The British losses were slight.

Italian Victories in Africa.

Rome, April 8.—The Government has received information from Massowah that the Italians, after a series of skirmishes, have succeeded in capturing Salama, where they took 48 guns from the enemy. Gen. Baratieri has occupied Gamama. An Italian syndicate is projecting a railway from Massowah to Kassala.

French Campaign in Madagascar.

Paris, April 8.—A despatch from Tamatave, by the way of Port Luis, Mauritius, says Charles Sherventon, the British commander-in-chief of the Malagasy forces, has resigned from the service of Madagascar and intends to return to England. The Hova works near Tamatave were bombarded by French cruisers on April 4. The forts feebly replied to the fire of the ships. The health of the French troops in Madagascar is excellent.

Two British Warships for Corinto.

Panama, April 8.—The British cruiser Wildsman has arrived in port. She will probably join the cruiser Royal Arthur in the hostile demonstration at Corinto, Nicaragua, in case the Nicaraguan Government fails to pay Great Britain's claim for the expulsion of Pro-Consul Hatch.

CANTON THREATENED.

Forty Jap Transports in Readiness to Attack the City.

London, April 8.—A despatch from Hong Kong to The Globe says forty Japanese transports have assembled at the Pescadores, and it is reported that it is intended to make an attack upon Canton. Preparations are actively making to defend that city, and torpedoes are being placed in the river to prevent the enemy's ships from ascending.

OPENING OF NAVIGATION.

Soo Canal Will Not Be Clear of Ice Before May First.

Sault Ste. Marie, April 9.—Everything points to a late opening of navigation, May 1 being the earliest date set, and it may be two weeks later. On March 10 last year small boats were running to the Canadian Sault. At this date the ice is solid, making the probable date of opening much later under similar conditions than it was last season, when it opened April 17. The present prospects are boats can reach the Sault earlier this year than they can get through to Lake Superior.

BALFOUR READY TO MEET ACCUSERS.

Says the Attack Upon Him Was Made for Political Reasons.

Buenos Ayres, April 9.—Jabez Spencer Balfour told me, just before sailing for Europe, that he was prepared to meet the charges against him, based upon assumed losses and would endeavor to retrieve the deficits of the Liberator Group.

Chamberlain and others had attacked him, he declared, purely for political reasons, and to overthrow Rosebery. Influential friends in England sent Balfour £5000. This was spent in paying legal fees and expenses, and he was now penniless.

Had less hostility, he said, been shown to him by the press and his political enemies when the warrant for his arrest was issued, he would have started for England at once.

Five million cans of tomatoes were put up in this country last year. And yet there are people living in this country who can remember when tomatoes were not eaten. They were called love apples, and raised for ornament.

General Booth is planning to send such an industrial colony to Canada as will astonish the world. His scheme comprehends the transportation of 10,000 people, and he is sanguine that these people will stay and prosper there.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell Its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money.'

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. CITY FINANCES

The most interesting feature of last night's council meeting was the discussion of the city's finances that arose out of the consideration of the Public Works Committee's report regarding the Front st. sewer. The occasion was opportune as the auditors' report was among the papers that cumbered the clerk's desk. Ald. Yeomans who as Chairman of Finance is looked to by every chairman to grant all the money his committee may "need" and by every alderman for the price of every improvement that his particular ward "needs," and at the same time "must" keep down the rate, told the council that he was travelling in the shadow of an ill-visaged deficit of from four to seven thousand dollars. He was therefore loath to undertake the construction of the whole or any part of Front st. sewer.

The aggregate aldermanic mind at once reverted to the Mayor's elysian outlook at the opening of the year of an eight thousand dollar surplus to be devoted to permanent improvements. Ald. Yeomans submitted a statement culled from the auditors' report that he averred proved his contention. Here are the figures in round numbers. Liabilities at the end of '94: Unpaid accounts, $494 26; due the bank, $47,746; debentures due December 31st. and unpaid $3,000; amount of guarantees held back on Bridge street sewer $267, new pavement $926; total $52,433. Assets to meet these liabilities: Cash on hand $192; registration fees $79; Gas Co. dividends $504; rent from C. P. Holton $60; taxes unpaid for '94 $40,923, which, allowing for shrinkage on the basis of the last five years gives $34,789; debentures issued for Bridge street sewer and granolithic pavement $12,817; total $47,943. This shows up a deficit of about $4 500, for which Ald. Yeomans accounts roughly as follows: Public works over-drawn estimates, $1,052; interest on debentures over estimate, $635; interest on the floating debt over estimates. $1 044; Gas Co. dividends not received $575; Bridge Co. dividend over estimated $1,200.

His Worship, however, didn't see that this deficit of '94 should militate against his surplus of the present year. The Chairman of Finance was in favor of applying this "surplus for permanent improvements" to the paying off of last year's debt and if after the estimates for the present year have been brought down and any surplus is still in evidence the permanent improvements might then be proceeded with.

One thing is certain, the citizens at large are very much at sea as regards the city's financial position. They can do no better than assimilate as best they can the contradictory statements of the council chamber and the present unsatisfactory condition, points strongly to the necessity of printing the auditor's report each year as it is brought in. Then the citizens would have some basis of accurate information upon which to found their conclusions of the city's financial position.

The 'Intel' tackled the problem the other night, but it only evidenced its weakened condition after a too long wrestling with the Liberal tariff policy. In the first place it stated that Mayor Walmsley had claimed a surplus of eight thousands dollars for last year while every one knows who read his new year speeches that his hopes were in the year '95. The Intel was looking "through a glass darkly" and took no pleasure from the view, yet advised a grant to a sectarian college. We may still have our surplus and the only change is a change of its application from permanent improvements to last years deficit.

This much however is certain that if the city cannot afford to rent $1800 for a sewer that everyone admits to be necessary it cannot afford $1000 or $1500 for a carnival to boom the new street railway.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Ald. Yeoman's statement in the Council Chamber last night that the long-talked of electric railway for months deemed a certainty early this summer, was again removed to the realm of misty uncertainty, fell with something of a dull thud. Enquiry was at once made as to the amount of the forfeit bonds of the Company. Ald. Wills stated that the proposed legislation that had somehow dissolved the purposes of the Railroad Co. affected only radial lines, but Ald. Yeomans made his statement on the authority of the President of the Company.

The Hamilton Spectator has undertaken the responsibility of assuring the electors that Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper is not a lunatic. Of course the Spectator knows, and the information is timely.

RUNNING CARS ON SUNDAY

Electric Roads May Operate 1½ Miles From Towns.

PROVINCIAL AID TO HOSPITALS.

A Bill to Give Municipalities Control of Advertising on Streets—Amendment to the Insurance Law—The Members on Sabbath Observance.

Toronto, April 9.—The Sunday car question was the chief topic of discussion in the Ontario Legislative Assembly yesterday. Hon. Mr. Bronson's Electric Railway bill came before the committee of the whole House. The bill provides that electric railways shall not operate on Sunday more than 1 1-2 miles outside cities and towns. Mr. German was the first to protest. He could not see why steam roads should be allowed to run on the Lord's Day and electric roads be debarred from the same privilege. He could not see why the Government should attempt to make Christians by legislation. He thought that this function should be left to the churches. (Cries of, Hear, hear!) He said that it would do the workingman and his family far more good on Sunday to go to a cool park or garden than to sit in a hot church and listen to a stupid sermon. "Why," he said, "should the rich man be allowed to have his coachman and pair to drive him about on Sunday and the poor man deprived of the right to go abroad with his family? Would you deprive me of the right to go to a livery and hire a rig to take my family into the country?" He thought that the whole matter should be left to the conscience of the people. "Don't attempt to legislate people into heaven," he concluded.

NO UNNECESSARY DESECRATION.

Hon. Mr. Bronson said that the Government had no intention to make the attempt to legislate religion into the people, but he held that no unnecessary temptations should be placed in their way. (Hear, hear.) The running of electric roads, he continued, on Sunday would be affording the means of desecrating the Lord's Day.

Mr. Haycock said that if the act was not retroactive roads at present built would be allowed to run on Sunday, while a road running parallel which might be built after the passage of the act would not be allowed to run.

PRESENT ROADS NOT AFFECTED.

Sir Oliver Mowat said that it was still an open question whether street cars could run at all on Sunday. In any case the present bill did not deal with that subject. If the bill passed the rights of existing roads would remain exactly as they were.

Mr. Conmee said that this looked like class legislation. He said that the parks in Toronto were open on Sunday and there was nothing to prevent any man who had sufficient money having a livery rig and driving through them. Why then should the man who had not sufficient money to do this not be allowed to go to them on a car?

Mr. McDonald, a Patron member, said that if the people of the province had not enough respect for the Lord's Day to keep it holy it was the duty of the members to compel them to do so. (Cries of "Oh! oh!" and loud laughter.)

It was finally decided to insert words to make the bill conform to Mr. Bronson's view, and also to extend the limit Sunday cars might run outside cities and towns to one and a half miles.

HOWLAND'S JOKE ABOUT PASSES.

Mr. Howland introduced an amendment compelling all electric roads to issue free passes to all Legislative, and municipal officials.

At Mr. Bronson's request this amendment was allowed to stand until the bill comes up for its third reading.

GRANTS TO HOSPITALS.

Hon. Mr. Gibson moved the second reading of his bill respecting charitable institutions. It provides that no Government grant shall in future be given towards the support of paying patients; hospitals are not to receive aid when they are established in municipalities where there is already a hospital; municipalities are to pay for poor patients who reside in their districts for eight weeks, at the rate of $2 per week. The bill passed its second reading.

INSURANCE LAW AMENDMENTS.

Hon. Mr Gibson moved the second reading of his bill to amend the Insurance Law. He said that when the law was first passed three years ago, the clauses dealing with friendly societies were not complete. Since then several of these institutions have gone into liquidation. The chief feature of the bill was to provide speedy and cheap machinery for the winding up of these concerns. The master in ordinary and two other local masters had fully considered the bill and had agreed that its provisions were required. They all had experience in winding up these companies and knew what kind of machinery was necessary. The bill was read a second time.

Mr. Howland moved the first reading of his bill to amend the Ontario Architects' Acts. It changes the terms of apprenticeship and the qualifications for registration, and makes it penal to use the title "architect" unless registered as a member of the Ontario Association of Architects.

Mr. German moved the first reading of his bill to amend the Municipal Act. It gives power to municipalities to pass bylaws regulating the use of the streets for advertising.

Hon. Mr. Ross' amendment to the Manhood Registration Act was changed in committee so as to make the extension of the act apply only to county towns.

In committee of the whole Hon. Mr. Gibson introduced a clause into his bill for the further protection of children, providing that in cases of alleged wrongful detention of children the county judge may upon application instruct the district superintendent under the act to hold an inquiry.

Mr. Langford will ask the ministry whether it has been brought to the attention of the Government that the capital stock of the Toronto Street Railway Company is $6,000,000, notwithstanding that the act of incorporation of 1892 limits the stock to $1,000,000? Has the company in any way corresponded with or consulted the Government in reference thereto?

Lindsay, Ont., April 8.—The initial number of The Daily Post made its appearance in Lindsay this afternoon, and its neat print and bright newsy reading matter made it a host of friends. The enterprise of the proprietors of The Post in instituting a daily newspaper in Lindsay deserves well of the public, and we are convinced that liberal support will be forthcoming, and that The Daily Post has come to stay.

JUST ABOUT ANIMALS.

A Georgia farmer killed 1,500 rabbits during the recent snow, and made enough out of them to settle with the men who picked cotton for him in the fall.

One cold night a Lee County (Ga.) farmer, after being away during the evening, returned to the house and found cuddled up on the hearth in his room five live wild rabbits.

A large flock of ducks dashed at night against the glass lens of a search-light on the steamer Nutmeg State in Long Island Sound, and more than a score were killed by the collision.

Dr. Megnin of the Paris Academy of Sciences is authority for the statement that the kissing of pet dogs is one of the most common agencies in the spread of diseases, especially consumption.

Finland must be a sportsman's paradise. In ten years 90,000 domestic animals, including 24,000 reindeer, were destroyed by wild beasts, and in that time 1,100 bears, 1,200 wolves, 55,000 lynxes and foxes, 19,000 ermines, and 56,000 birds of prey, eagles and hawks, were killed.

Baltimore has a society formed to import and raise the finest breed of canary birds. One of the members says:—"People do not know what the pure sweet, singing canary bird is. We intend to import the best singers obtainable, and the members of the society will undertake to breed them with the view of making them more common."

The Prince of Monaco, well-konwn to the scientific world, has been lecturing on the results of his recent dredgings in the South Atlantic. His yacht, the Princess Alice, is equipped with every scientific apparatus, and the remains of curious fish and animals drawn up from the ocean 200 miles off the coast of Central America are to be presented to the museum in Paris.

One of the curios in the Philadelphia Zoo is the Belideus sciureus. He is a native of Australia, and is also called the squirrel-like phalanger. Most of the time this animal looks like a hanging bird's nest. It goes into the corner of its cage, climbs up to the top, and grappling hold of the wires with its four feet together, hangs down like a huge pear. Its heavy breathing is the only sign that it is alive. There are two of them at the Zoo. They bear a faint resemblance to a flying squirrel when not tucked up in the corner. Their faces are like the faces of a monkey, and are funny enough to raise a laugh every time they are shown.

BISMARCK ON HAPPINESS.

He Has Had Very Little of It—Emperor William Had More.

At Leipsic the other day Prince Bismarck made a speech, in the course of which he said:—

"In my long life I have rarely been happy. If I were to figure out the total of the rare moments of happiness that I have had, I would find perhaps in all about twenty-four hours. In politics I have never had time enough to be happy. I have always had to struggle, and when I was victorious, cares came with the victory, and I had to make the most of them.

"In my private life I have had moments of happiness; first in my youth when I shot my first hare, and then afterwards when I became a farmer. I was also happy with my wife and children. But to know how to enjoy good fortune—a peculiar gift that my old master, the Emperor, possessed in a high degree—it is necessary to be both phlegmatic and sanguine. I often had a great deal of difficulty in bringing him to a resolution, but once formed, it was solid. You could build houses on it. He placed truth above everything, and sometimes public affairs compelled us to remove ourselves a little from the truth. That was always hard for the old Emperor. But he was very happy, and yet, for all that, how unfortunate he was!"

All of which goes to prove that, so far as Bismarck is concerned, notwithstanding his wonderful achievements, the game was wasn't worth the powder.

Do Snakes Hear.

The popular idea that snakes are charmed by music and can be made to dance is entirely exploded by the investigations of some of the most eminent naturalists. It is claimed that sounds affect snakes only as the vibrations reach their sense of feeling. To prove this a number of cobras were placed in a room and musicians were ranged on a pile of rugs and required to play. A light screen was brought and set up so that the snakes could not see the players, who piped and scraped with might and main, without causing the slightest movement on the part of the reptiles. The screen was then taken away, when the cobras began to rouse up, and, standing erect, moved their heads from side to side, following the swing of the violinist's elbow. A piper, who sat perfectly still, did not seem to attract their attention in the least.

A single cobra was then selected for experiment. "Do you ever think, George, dear," she said, and her voice was soft and low as befitted the perfect beauty of the night, "how closely true happiness is allied with tears."

"I don't believe I ever do," replied George.

"Yes," she went on, looking up into his face, "when one is truly and wholly happy there is but little to divide a smile and a tear."

"That's a fact," said George, "but I never thought of it before. There's nothing but the nose."

TEMPERING ALUMINIUM.

The successful tempering of aluminium so as to give it the consistency of iron is the latest triumph of F. Allard, the Levis blacksmith, whose rediscovery of the lost Egyptian art of hardening copper startled the mechanical world some three or four years ago, and only failed to make the fortune of its author because of the expensiveness of the process. A recent trial of Allard's tempered aluminium has proved a success of his new method in Quebec and the practical purposes to which it can be applied. He had made and hardened a cannon, which has just been tested in presence of Col. Spence, the American Consul, with the greatest success. This cannon is 26 inches long and five inches in diameter, the metal of the gun outside the bore being only a quarter of an inch thick. A charge, consisting of a pound of powder, has been successfully fired out of the little piece of ordnance without having any appreciable effect upon it. A new and more scientific trial of the cannon has been ordered by the Canadian military authorities to be held immediately at the Quebec Citadel by the artillery experts there and the United States Consul. In view of this move, is understood to have encouraged Mr. Allard to manufacture as speedily as possible, a cannon 12 feet in length for shipment to Washington, but whether this is to be at Allard's risk or by instructions from the United States Government is not known and cannot be learned.

The great advantage of cannons made of aluminium, everything else being equal, lies, of course, in the lightness of the metal. The cannon just tested weighs 14 pounds. If it were of iron and the same dimensions it would weigh 180 pounds. Allard's friends, and military enthusiasts over the project, assert that if the tempered aluminium supersedes iron for the making of big guns, field artillerymen, instead of being dependent upon horses and gun carriages for dragging their weapons over rough country, will be able to shoulder them like muskets. In appearance the finished specimen looks as though it was made of burnished silver.

FISH PRIZE FIGHTING.

It is One of the Popular Amusements of the People of Siam.

The two fighting fish are placed in a huge bottle together, and they proceed to take each other's measure, shoulder up to each other in schoolboy fashion, and back and push around the "ring," the small fins vibrating rapidly all the time, and each little being quivering with excitement and wrath. This goes on for some minutes, until, as the spectators are growing impatient, one fish suddenly makes a dart and a bite at his adversary's tail. Henceforth there is no hesitation until one or other gives in.

The Siamese back their fish just as money is placed on horses here, and then the battle is continued until one fish is chased around the bottle by the other. But this is usually an affair of an hour, and frequently three or four. The fish are reared specially for fighting, and display wonderful pluck and determination.

The tail is the part which shows most damage, although it is very easily torn; but a good grip on the side fin is very effective. They display considerable agility in evading their opponent's mouth, and also in suddenly twisting round and taking a piece out of its tail. In twenty minutes or so these appendages, which looked so brave and bright as they started to the fray, are torn to ribbons.

Paris Boulevards.

In no other streets in the wide world can one see such varied types as on the grand boulevards of Paris. Why, a trip through them, on top of an omnibus, from the Bastile to the Madeliene—and it takes perhaps an hour—will give you a kaleidoscope view of life to be found nowhere else. At the Bastile, the Boulevard des filles du Calvaire and du Temple, you meet the laboring classes. On Sundays in their "bestest best," and on week days in white blouses and cotton jackets. Beyond the Place de la Republique the picture changes. Here are the little merchants and shopkeepers, and some large ones, too. Farther on, up near Rue Vivienne, new blood enters this great artery of Paris—it is tinged with a golden sheen, for we are in the heart of the exchanges, among brokers and coulissiers; aye, among just such types as Zola drew from for his book entitled "Money." Now the shops are becoming more gay and beautiful, the cafes more elegant; and the siren voices of Paris make its joys even more alluring and more tempting. To appreciate it, you must do more than view it from an outsider's standpoint. You must take part in it, live in it, and for the time being forget that you ever were anything but a confirmed and hardened boulevardier.

There! follow my advice, and I will guarantee that you will see Paris as Paris is, and not as tourists see or describe it. Sit down with me at the terrasse of yonder cafe and watch the stream of humanity as it flows by. What a cosmopolitan throng! Rich and poor, merchants and clerks, unmistakable Britishers, blase journalists, fetching-looking actresses, chic little Parisiennes of the petite bourgeoisie, newsboys and beggars; aye and Americans, too—all "touching elbows," as the French say. Is it not dizzy to look upon in its whirling activity, its abandoned merry-making?

See that young exquisite with pointed patent leather boots? Poor fellow! He has mislaid his brain and might find it there. He is one of the society men of the boulevard.—Home and Country Mazagine.

Treed by Snakes.

A snake story, which is the first and best of the season, comes from Clarke County. A farmer was digging fence post holes last week, and while at work ran across a nest of twenty young snakes. Five were rattlers, ten were moccasins, two were king snakes and three were chicken snakes. They all attacked him, and he was forced to climb a tree to save himself.—Atlanta Constitution.

Montague Will Have to Fight for Every Vote.

HOT CAMPAIGN IN HALDIMAND.

The Patrons May Have a Candidate—D'Alton McCarthy Billed for Several Meeting—Manitoba Sending Assistance Against the Government Candidate.

Caledonia, Ont., April 9.—The election fight between Hon. Dr. Montague and Mr. Jeffrey A. McCarthy is on in earnest. Mr. Fee, McCarthy's organizer, has made Caledonia his headquarters, and consequently there is more stir here than in any other part of the country. A number of young men from Toronto arrived here to-day, and were sent to different parts in the McCarthy interest, and D'Alton McCarthy will speak three or more times this week.

Dr. Montague speaks here on Thursday evening, when he will have a large meeting.

The Patrons have an idea that if they bring out a candidate their man may sit in the House the balance of this Parliament. They will have a convention in Cayuga on Tuesday to discuss the advisability of contesting the riding.

The McCarthyites are to have speakers here from Manitoba on Monday, and the program includes two meetings daily up to polling day. Fighting Joe Martin wired from Winnipeg that he expected to be in the riding on Saturday.

Nominations take place on Wednesday, and with good roads that day week Haldimand will poll the biggest vote in its history.

Conservatives declare that Hon. Dr. Montague's majority will be counted by hundreds; the McCarthyites assert that their man will come under the wire a winner, while the Reform element not under the Third party wing concedes an easy victory for the Doctor.

JOE MARTIN GOING TO HALDIMAND.

He and Mr. Sifton Will Speak for McCarthy—Manitoba Local Option Declared Ultra Vires.

Winnipeg, April 9.—The long-pending fight between the liquor men and prohibitionists ended to-day disastrously to the latter. The judges of the Court of Queen's Bench to-day handed down a decision quashing the local option bylaws passed by several Manitoba municipalities, holding that the province cannot prohibit the sale of liquor, the legislation being its ultra vires. Manitoba will now in all probability join Premier Mowat in his appeal to England on this point.

Firebugs are causing much alarm and trouble in Regina. Several incendiary fires have been started, one resulting in the destruction of the Court House, and last night Rielly Bros.' planing mill had a narrow escape.

A Conservative convention for Selkirk constitutency will open in Winnipeg tomorrow. George Bradbury of Ottawa is running as a Conservative, but a section of the party oppose him. The Patrons and Liberals each have strong candidates in the field.

Joseph Martin, member for Winnipeg and author of the Manitoba school law, which is stirring up so much trouble, leaves on Wednesday for Haldimand to deliver a series of addresses in the interest of Jeffrey McCarthy. Attorney-General Sifton goes with him and will also speak several times in Haldimand. The principal object of Sifton's trip, however, is to consult with D'Alton McCarthy and other eminent lawyers on Manitoba's position in reference to the Remedial Order in the school case.

In the Slocan Mining district of British Columbia they are shortly expecting a visit from President Van Horne. It is said Sir William has a scheme for connecting the principal mines by electric tramway.

John Winter, aged 29, a tailor, attempted, while in a drunken frenzy, to murder his mother, an old, white-haired, feeble woman, who had sought to turn him from his evil habits.

At Niagara Falls, James Rich, aged 73, tried the laudanum route. He is still unconscious, but may recover.

Paris, April 8.—The Marquis d'Andigne, a General and Senator of France, is dead.

Lacrosse at Harvard.

Cambridge, Mass., April 8.—For the first time in many years a game of lacrosse was played at Harvard Saturday afternoon, before a large crowd of spectators. It was the new Harvard team's first contest, and they naturally lost, though only after a hard struggle, to the Boston Lacrosse Club. Score 5 to 3. The Boston men were the stronger in team play, excepting Klein, the strong man, who tended the Crimson goal, was very weak.

HER HUSBAND A BIGAMIST.

Toronto, April 9.—With a five weeks' old baby on her arm, Mrs. Hymeon Haber, a Hebrew woman of middle age, arrived in Toronto from New York city Friday evening in quest of her faithless husband, only to find that he had married another and fled at the first intimation of her presence in the city.

Nearly 11 years ago Haber and Mrs. Haber No. 1 were married. They lived happily together until two years since, when Haber met with Miss Annie Bower, a comely Jewish maiden.

Nine months ago Haber left New York, telling his wife he was going to Canada, where he had procured a good situation, and would send for her and their 9-year-old daughter.

Haber left and with him left Miss Bower. Their destination was Toronto, and they found a home with Harris Swartz, Chestnut-street. Haber was a fur-cutter by trade, and procured employment almost immediately with R. Wolfe, Yonge-street. From January to July his remuneration was $12 per week, and from July to January $15. To allay any misgivings which might arise in the minds of his lawful wife through his failure to communicate with her, he sent her letters containing small sums of money, at irregular intervals. These missives were sent from here to London, Ont., from which place they were dated and re-posted by a friend of Haber's. This caused Mrs. Haber to believe that her husband was in London, and, having heard of only one London, she concluded her husband had crossed the Atlantic.

Haber and Miss Bower were married shortly after their arrival here. Mr. Swarts had been suspicious for some little time, but soon after the marriage come into the possession of facts which disclosed to him the identity and true character of his guest. A Jewish lady who was leaving Toronto on a visit to New York was entrusted with the task of locating Haber's legal wife, and informing her of her husband's whereabouts and second marriage. Mrs. Haber arrived in the city Friday evening and proceeded to the address in Chestnut-street of Mr. Swarts.

Haber in some manner became aware of his wife's presence in the city, and when Mrs. Haber went to Mr. Wolfe's store on Saturday morning, expecting to meet her runaway spouse, she was disappointed, as he has not since reported for duty. The matter was placed in the hands of the city detective force, who have since been searching in vain for Haber.

When seen by a ' reporter last evening at 112 Teraulay-street, where she and Haber have lived since their marriage, wife No. 2 admitted her flight with a subsequent marriage to Haber. In broken English she told her story pleading as justification for her act, that Haber had shown her papers which he represented to her as showing that he had been divorced from his wife, and was free to marry a second time. The last she saw of Haber was when he left the house Saturday morning, saying he was going to his work. She heard of Mrs. Haber's arrival when the detectives called Saturday afternoon to enquire for Haber.

Mrs. Haber No. 1 is in destitute circumstances, and is being assisted by the Hebrew residents of the city. It is her intention to remain in the city until her husband is located and a settlement effected between them.

THE MIDDLEMARCH MURDER.

Toronto, April 9.—At the conclusion of the trial of W. D. Welter and John Hendershott for the murder of William Henry Hendershott at St. Thomas, Mr. J. A. Robinson, counsel for the prisoner Hendershott, asked His Lordship, under the provisions of the new Criminal Code, to reserve a case for Hendershott for argument on the following ground, viz.: That the evidence against him was not sufficient to go to the jury; that the evidence of Mrs. McConnell, Mrs. French and the lad, Delacey, was illegally admitted, and that there was no proof of the insurance on the life of the deceased.

Chief Justice Meredith has decided not to reserve a case on either of the points asked. Mr. Robinson says the defence may yet go to the Court of Appeal with the same application, but this is highly improbable.

Madame Joniaux Must Die.

NO WASTE FUEL.

Success of a Seven Months' Test in Yorkshire Mills.

A seven months' test of the new process of heating boilers with hot air and gas instead of cold air and slack, at one of the Yorkshire plants, is reported as having proved very satisfactory. In this process the cold slack is not stopped in the boiler furnace, but is placed in a brick chamber some distance from the boilers, and is there turned into gas; the air is heated by being made to circulate in flues round the chamber made hot in the process of gas making, and the gas and air in their heated state are carried in flues to the boiler furnace, where they mix and are ignited, both the upper and lower parts of the furnace being blocked by these flues, so that nothing can enter but the hot gas and hot air. No part of the furnace is ever opened and no cold air ever strikes boiler plates or heat space. Where there is a high chimney it is necessary that the damper be lowered, or the furnace will contain a mere torrent of fire rushing to the chimney, and, as the damper is lowered, the flames will rise and spread until the whole space, below as well as above the bars, ash place as well as furnace, will be filled with flame—a sea, instead of a torrent of fire—the same effect being practicable by reducing the height of the chimney. By using a fan to increase the air supply, the heat can be raised to any possible temperature—even to a glare requiring colored glasses to look upon—with a chimney no higher than a house chimney. Thus, with this sea of burning gas, it is impossible to have smoke, and, with no waste in smoke or escaping gases, a great reduction in fuel is claimed.—New York Sun.

Rich Beyond Most Dreams.

Two much talked of women at present are Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs and her sister, Miss Fair, the daughters of Senator Fair, whose recent death has left them even greater heiresses than they were before. Both of these women are extremely pretty. Of medium height, slender and graceful, with singularly glossy hair and white skins and always well gowned, they would be belles even without their large fortunes.

They are noted for being most gracious hostesses, and at the ball they gave last summer at Newport many pleasant comments were made as to their untiring efforts to see that their guests enjoyed the evening. They are very charitable, but with very decided views as to how their charity should be dispensed.

Miss Birdie Fair is said to have a more than ordinary talent for business and to possess her father's gift of turning everything she touches into gold. It is said she has speulated more than once, and with most satisfactory results to herself. She makes it a point to thoroughly understand all about her own property. She is a remarkably cultivated young woman and is very fond of all sort of sport, plays golf well and is considered one of the best women bicyclists. She is also a good conversationist and is fond of going into society.—New York Letter.

Long Enough.

Stephen A. Douglas and Mr. Lovejoy were once gossiping together when Abraham Lincoln came in. The two men immediately turned their conversation upon the proper length of a man's legs.

"Now," said Lovejoy, "Abe's legs are altogether to long and yours, Douglas, I think are a little short. "Let's ask Abe what he thinks of it?"

Then, turning to Lincoln, he said:

"We're talking about the proper length of a man's legs. We think yours are too long and Douglas, too short and we'd like to know what you think is the proper length."

"Well," said Mr. Lincoln, "that's a matter that I've never given any thought to, so of course I may be mistaken, but my first impression is that a man's leg ought to be long enough to reach from his body to the ground."

Napoleon Portraits.

No face is better known through portraits than that of Napoleon, yet the best-known picture of the great Corsican is believed to be the least reliable. There are in existence over fifty portraits, taken in his own time, and the variance between them is so great that it is sometimes difficult to trace any resemblance. It is evident that the portraits by David are idealized, while the little known portrait by Trumbull represent him as a beefy, overfed man, with little intellectuality of expression. In youth and during the last few years of his life he was undoubtedly ugly; between 1800 and 1810, after his emaciation disappeared and before he became gross, he was only passably good-looking. There were in his face and manner a personal dignity and an air of command that inspired respect in all beholders.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

THE SEWER TO BE BUILT

THE COUNCIL ADOPT THE REPORT AFTER A LONG DISCUSSION

The City's Financial Position—A $4,500 Deficit—Some Important Additions to the Fire Department—Ald. Falkiner in Fighting Trim.

The City Council met last night in regular session Mayor Walmsley in the chair. Those present were Alds. Walker, Green, Falkiner, Marshall, Landenberger, Mackie, W. H. Gordon, Yeomans, Hay, Doyle, Petty, Grills, Bogart, Clarke, Jas. Gordon, Robinson, Hart, Starling, La Roche, and Wills.

COMMUNICATIONS

A communication was read from the Secretary of the Provincial Board of Health re Belleville sewerage. From the Street Inspector re Bridge Street sewer. He advises the city to induce the contractor to repair the street. One from E. T. Cherry. He asks the city to fill in a lot on Bridge street which belongs to him and he will do city printing to the amount of $15.

Ald. Green said the letter from the Street Inspector should be dealt with at once. The company should be made to put the street in a proper condition.

Ald. Yeomans moved that it be referred to the Public Works Committee and they with the City Solicitor could see to the matter.—Carried.

The reports of the various committees were read as have already appeared in these columns.

The Mayor informed the Council that the deputation sent by them to Toronto had accomplished their object and Belleville saved her market fees. He also complimented the City Solicitor for his work and thanked Messrs. Haggerty, W. H. Biggar and others for their support.

The Council then went into committee of the whole Ald. Doyle in the chair.

The clause in the Executive committee's report recommending that the officials and employees in the employ of the city shall be insured to the total amount of $10,000 in the Manufacturers Insurance Co. was carried.

The auditors report also passed and was referred to the Printing committee to be printed.

The report of the Fire Committee caused considerable discussion. The clause recommending the purchase of ten tarpaulins was laid over until the estimates were brought down and if they could be purchased within the amount estimated they would be recommended.

Ald. Starling said it was a necessity to procure a new hose waggon for No. 2 station. The men were in danger of losing their lives by riding on the hose reels.

The report of the committee carried with the exception of the tarpaulins.

The clause which was recommended by the public Works committee re purchase of hemlock plank for sidewalks did not meet with the approval of the council.

The Street Inspector was heard and he said that hemlock was a very poor material for sidewalks. It went to pieces in a very short time.

Ald. Yeomans said he would like to see the report carried. The committee simply asked for tenders and it was not necessary to accept any tender either for hemlock or pine.

Ald. Green held the same views as the chairman of the Executive Committee.

The report of the committee carried with the words, "more or less" added to the clause re the purchase of lumber.

The Water and Gas Committee's report was also carried.

The report of the Industrial Committee was referred back at the suggestion of Ald. Yeomans for the City Solicitor's opinion on the matter.

Ald. Yeomans moved that the report of the special committee on sewerage be also referred back. When the committee had made its report it was thought there would be a special amount left over to be applied on permanent improvements. Since then it has been discovered that there was no such amount. There was a deficiency to be met this year of $4533. It would hardly be safe to go into this expenditure when the Council had this deficiency to meet.

Ald. Landenberger wanted to know if Ald. Yeomans wanted the report to be referred back for the purpose of issuing debentures to secure $2500 for the building of the sewer.

Ald. Yeomans replied that the committee could deal with it as they saw fit.

Ald. Starling said that the astonishing surplus of $8000 which was reported to have existed had turned out to be a deficiency of $7000. Some one had evidently stuck a pin in the baloon.

The Mayor said that in rising to support the sewer he wanted to correct some eroneous statements which had been spread about since last meeting. It had been said that instead of having a surplus of $8000 there was a deficiency of $7000. He never said there was a surplus of $8000 and no one would believe that the chairman of Finance for last year would bring the city out at the end of the year with a debt of $7000. Therefore the spreading of such statements was not only detrimental to the city but reflected on the Aldermen who had worked hard in the interest of the city. He referred to the surplus of this year and not last, and the end of the year would bring out his statements as correct He would vote for the building of Front street if he was the only one.

Ald. Clarke said it was about time that this sewer was thrashed out. The uncollected taxes and the non-resident taxes were available assets and instead of a deficiency we had a surplus. He could not see why the Front street sewer could not be built.

The sewer was a necessity and it would cost twice as much to build it after the street railway had been built.

Ald. Landenberger said the sewer was a necessity and should be built if the money had to be borrowed to do so. It would cost twice as much to build it when the railway was constructed. If the city had to borrow the money to build the sewer why not let the sewer be extended from the upper bridge to the bay. He would ask that debentures be issued for the work.

Ald. Robinson said that the property holders on Front should do as the people did on Bridge street. The citizens should not be asked to support it. The people in Murney Ward would not be benefitted any by it. He could not support it.

Ald. Landenberger said Ald. Robinson would soon be asking for another grant for the Catharine street sewer and that did not benefit the citizens generally.

Ald. Robinson—Yes, and we'll get it too.

Ald. Wills, said there was no necessity for referring the matter back. The sewer had been promised for three years and it was time the people got it.

Ald Grills said that Catharine street drain was a different thing. It did not drain cellars, it drained the water from property. He was not, however, against the building of Front street sewer if the money could be procured.

Ald. Walker said that the sewer was a necessity. This policy of money standing in the way of the sewer was a poor one. If typhoid fever broke out in this locality the city would be poorer than if the sewer was built.

Ald. Falkiner said he would like to see the sewer built from start to finish. If there was no outlet the city would be involved in a law suit. If the sewer was built in part the government would make the city finish it. He also read the Health Act to substantiate his argument.

Ald. Yeomans said it was not prudent to go on with the work at present. He had gone over the auditors' report very carefully. Taking the most careful and favorable view the city was short over $5000. Say the actual deficiency is only $2000 would it be prudent to go on with this work. In 1893 the Mayor stated that instead of there being $23,000 behind as you were three years ago we are ahead $2000. "You will not be called upon to pay your taxes into a hole, the hole is filled up and sealed." The chairman of Finance the next year claimed a deficiency of $2000. In regard to borrowing money the council could not do any such a thing. The statute forbade it. The ratepayers could sue the members of the council individually for any excess of the tax money. The letter which was received from Dr. Byrce should not be lost sight of. His idea was to wait until the tax collectors brought in their money, and if the money warranted the outlay all right, and if not it would have to lie over another year.

Ald. Wills said if the matter was left over until the first of July the electric railroad would be in progress and then it would be impossible to build the sewer.

Ald. W. H. Gordon said the financial condition of the city was such as not to warrant the outlay of so much money. He would like to see the sewer built.

Ald. Yeomans said that in reply to Ald. Wills' argument re electric railway, it was a question whether or not the railway would be built. The President informed him last week that owing to pending legislation the road may not be built.

Ald Petty said there is something which will light like a boom shell among citizens.

Ald. Starling said the acts only applied to extentions in the line and would not interfere with a line running from the station to the wharf.

Ald. Green said if the report of the committee was to be refered back for the purpose of drafting plans and specifications to be submitted to the Provincial Secretary it would only cause a delay of about two weeks.

The committee rose and reported progress and asked leave to sit again.—Carried.

It being eleven o'clock time was extended for one hour. Carried.

Ald. Hart said he voted against it last year and this year we had a great many new projects to support. He would however have to vote for the sewer.

Ald. Yeoman's said he thought it would be better to refer it back to the committee and they could report as soon as they saw fit.

Ald. Clarke moved in amendment that the report be adopted.—Carried.

The clause reccommending that the tender of Walter Allord be accepted was also adopted.

The committee rose and reported progress.

It was moved in amendment that the report be not now adopted but be amended so that the sewer will not be be built without the consent of the Provincial Board of Health.

The amendment lost.

The report carried.

Ald. Starling wanted to know from the chairman of Water and Gas how the city was in darkness.

Ald. Robinson.—Its moonlight.

Ald. Grills wanted to know if the street inspector was going to do anything with the snow and ice in the footbridge gangway.

Street Inspector Hulme—Yes right away.

Ald. Wills wanted to know if the auditors report was to be printed. He was informed that it was.

The council went into committee of the whole on by-laws. Ald. Landenberger in the chair.

The committee rose and reported progress. The report of the committee was received and adopted. The by-law for the return of the collector's rolls was read a second and third time and numbered 87.

Ald. Yoemans' notice of motion re grant to the hospital was laid over until next meeting.

Ald. Robinson gave notice that he would at the next meeting of the council ask that a committee be formed to look into the unpaid fines mentioned in the auditors report.

Council adjourned. Time 11.40.

The Disease Disappears in Three Weeks by the use of B. B. B.—Letter From Manitoba Fully Describing It.

DEAR SIRS—During the winter of 1892 93, I was covered with pimples on the inside of my right leg between the knee and the ankle. As I never had anything of the kind before I was anxious about it, and sought medical advice, but getting no relief from the doctor I tried a bottle of B. B. B., applying some of it to my leg as well as using it internally, and to my surprise the nasty disease, whatever it was, disappeared within three weeks, and I am thankful to say it has never re-appeared.

THERE SHOULD BE AN INQUEST

The Consensus of Public Opinion Regarding the Gerow Suicide

Almost the whole topic of conversation on the streets to-day is the Cedar Island tragedy and considerable surprise is evinced over the fact that the coroner did not deem an inquest necessary. It is thought that an inquest would be in the interests not only of the public but also of the husband of the dead woman. Reeve Anderson and Councillor D. A. Walker were in the city this morning and purchased a coffin in which to inter the remains. In conversation with a reporter of the ONTARIO both the gentlemen expressed the opinion that an inquest was necessary.

The coroner held that as the woman was insane the act was committed by herself. The public are not, however, so complacent about the matter and the feeling is pretty general that an inquest would have been more satisfactory, and they would like to have had the assurance of a jury's deliverence. The public sum up the circumstances much after this style: The two were living alone in the little shanty a mile from the nearest farm house, they have not lived happily of late and the husband had not been as good a provider as he should be, which is shown by the fact that neighbors had contributed food for them during the winter months. When the body was viewed it was seen at once that there had been no struggle, there was no blood upon the pillow and there was no sign of blood on the victim's hands, the left hand was laying across the left breast and the other arm was outstretched across the bed and the razor lay near the hand. The fingers were out perfectly straight and evinced no signs of having recently grasped a razor, the cut is also under the left ear.

It seems strange too that there were not more blood stains about. A medical man remarked this morning that had the woman's throat been cut while she was living the blood would have spurted. The only blood noticed by those who saw the body first was what had run down on the dress and formed a great clot by the side of the deceased.

The razor was kept behind a cupboard on the far side of the room from the bed and if Mrs. Gerow committed suicide she must have got up, walked across the room and took the razor, then got into bed, pulled the blankets over her and cut her throat. The blankets, however, show no signs of blood stains.

A RUMOR.

It was rumored about town this morning that David Gerow had committed suicide by cutting his throat, but no confirmation of it could be learned and Reeve Anderson saw him alive this morning.

FRAUD AND FORGERY

A Confidence Man Arrested Here Pleads Guilty in Whitby.

A. J. Campbell, a commercial traveller well known as 'Sandy' Campbell, was put on trial at Whitby on Saturday for fraud and forgery. He was storm-stayed there six weeks ago, and used this plausible excuse and a forged letter of credit to draw through the Western Bank upon a well-known Port Hope hotelkeeper for $10, who dishonored the draft. A warrant was at once issued for Campbell's arrest. but before this could be accomplished he had managed to put through fraudulent drafts upon the Whitby Evaporating Works here the sums ranging from $12 to $15, from the following places: —Millbrook. Norwood, Brockville, Sterling, Kingston, two from Cornwall, two from Smith's Falls. Iroquois and Carleton Place. He was finally arrested on March 29th in this city, just after he had succeeded, by means of a forged letter of credit from a well-known doctor here, in discounting a draft for $15. During the week he has been in gaol in Whitby, word has been received from different places about spurious drafts he has been raising money on for years back. When Arraigned Saturday he pleaded guilty, and sentence was suspended for a week to enable the Crown to gather information as to his antecedents He was formerly a resident of Brighton, but his wife and family have not been able to tolerate him for years, and are supporting themselves in Toronto.

FOR THE MARCHMONT HOME

Mr and Mrs Wallace Arrive in the City With Emmigrant Children

Rev. R. Wallace and wife arrived in the city to-day with 84 boys and 14 girls for the Marchmont Home. They are from different parts of England. Next week they will be supplemented by a company of 72 boys, and a party of girls will arrive in the city during the month of May. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace both look much better for their trip. They took passage by the steamship Vancouver and report a pleasant voyage. The children are a healthy looking lot and will no doubt make good citizens of their adopted country.

Sold Mortgaged Cattle.

Division Court was held to-day before Judge Fraleck and about the usual number of cases were disposed of with the usual felicity. Samuel Bull had a case against John Snell to recover the value of three steers that he had bought from a man named Welsh of Tyendinaga who had given Mr. Bull a chattel mortgage on them. His honor remarked that if men would lend money to this class of people they may expect to get their fingers burnt and bear it with what smiles they may. He reserved judgment.

Nelson Sophey was arrested yesterday morning for being drunk. He has just been released from the county jail and has not had a drink all winter. He took so much that he had a fit in the police cell and raved at a great rate. This morning he was severely lectured by the Magistrate for abusing the laws of nature and ordered to leave the city.

The value of a present is seldom estimated at its commercial worth more frequently the friendship, of which it is a token, outweighs the momentary value. L. W. If parents or friends require spectacles now is a chance for a birthday present.

POOR INFANT DIET NEARLY ROBBED A MOTHER'S HEART OF ITS TREASURE

A lady whose little one was saved by the use of Lactated Food, says:—

"When quite small baby began to fail, and we had to give him the bottle. We thought for some time he could not live. Our doctor recommended us to use Lactated Food and baby began to improve Immediately. We continued giving it until he was a year old, when he was a fat, healthy boy. I keep one of the boxes for him to see, when he grows to the age of understanding, what saved his life. I can never say enough in praise of Lactated Food."

Try Lactated Food, dear mother at this season, if your baby is weak, sickly, cross and peevish; it will work wonders for the little one.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND MAKES PEOPLE WELL.

THANKFUL PEOPLE EVERYWHERE ENDORSE THE GREAT MEDICINE

It is a Blessing to the Whole Canadian Dominion.

Physicians Acknowledge its Great Curing Virtues.

It Makes Strong Nerves and Pure Blood.

It Cures Disease and Long-standing Troubles.

An Ontario Man Strongly Testifies.

"I am a living witness to the worth of Paine's Celery Compound."

This is the statement of Mr. G J. Smyne of Sheffiield, Ont.

It makes people well!

This fact is so widely known and so fully borne out by thousands of magnificent cures, that the simple statement is in itself sufficient.

The whole dominion has been blessed by the marvellous work of the great medicine, and an army of rescued and saved men and women bless the noble discoverer, Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M.D., L.L D.

Master minds amongst the medical men of the present day readily acknowledge the potent and curing virtues of Paine's Celery Compound. They find that it makes strong nerves and pure blood, two essentials necessary for perfect health and strength.

Long standing troubles and diseases are cured by Paine's Celery Compound when all other medical agencies fail in their work. For kidney and liver troubles, it is the infallible remedy. Nervous debility, exhaustion, sleeplessness and headaches are quickly swept away by the curing powers of Paine's Celery Compound.

This is the season when the sick, must of necessity, recuperate lost strength, and gain the healthfulness so necessary to make life pleasurable for the summer. All should bear in mind the fact that Paine's Celery Compound "makes people well."

The following letter from Mr. G. J. Smye, of Sheffield, Ont., speaks of a wondrous cure after all ordinary means had failed to do the work;—

"It is with great pleasure that I testify to the value of your great medicine, Paine's Celery Compound. For nearly two years I suffered from indigestion, kidney and liver troubles. After trying several medicines that did not effect a cure, I decided to try your Compound. Before using it I was low in health that I could not eat or sleep. I could not lie in bed owing to pain in my back; it was only by resting on elbows and knees I was enabled to obtain a slight degree of ease. Before I had fully taken one bottle of your medicine I began to improve. I have in all taken fourteen bottles with grand results. I am a farmer and am now working every day. Anyone may refer to me in regard to those statements, or to any of my neighbors around Sheffield, where I am well known. I am a living witness to the worth of Paine's Celery Compound."

THE COLONY IS NOT BANKRUPT.

Ottawa, April 10.—The citizens' banquet to the visiting delegates from Newfoundland in the Russell House last night was one of the most brilliant social gatherings ever held at the Capital. About 150 guests sat down under the presidency of Mayor Borthwick. Among the guests present, in addition to Messrs. Bond, Morris, Emerson and Horwood, from Newfoundland, were the Governor-General, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir A. P. Caron, Messrs. Haggart, R. N. Scott, Costigan, Curran and Wood, Judge MacMahon and others. The dining-room had been magnificently decorated with flags, bunting and shields, and presented a very pretty appearance. The menu was specially appropriate, and was surmounted with the coat of arms of the ancient colony. The usual loyal toasts were enthusiastically drunk.

In replying to the toast of his health, which was proposed by the chair, Lord Aberdeen said that the occasion on which they were gathered was highly commendable. As neighbors and fellow-colonists, if he might use the term, it was proper that they should give the delegates a hearty welcome to the city. As to confederation, he said that no doubt very soon a satisfactory solution would be arrived at. That was about all that he could say in regard to the subject, which was still under consideration. It was proper that we should entertain strangers, but more especially those strangers whom we expected some day to be part of our own kith and kin, as in the present case. (Cheers.)

Sir James Grant, in proposing the toast of "Our Guests," said that Newfoundland occupied the same position in the mouth of the St. Lawrence as Gibraltar did in the Mediterranean, and therefore the importance of its becoming part of Canada was apparent. He spoke of the value of the Newfoundland fisheries, and added that there was no time when Canada was looking forward so anxiously for confederation with the island as at present. Union was absolutely necessary for the maintenance of the power and prestige of the empire, as Newfoundland was one of the links which connected that chain between England and India. (Cheers.)

Hon. Robert Bond, in reply, said that it was not the first time that he had been the recipient of princely hospitality at the hands of the people of Canada. He referred to the time when he met Sir John Thompson and the other Canadian delegates at Halifax in 1892, and afterwards touched upon the generosity of Canada when hardship and destruction overtook the Island. The great generosity of that occasion did away with the innumerable transgressions of which Canada had been guilty towards Newfoundland —(laughter)— for it must be remembered that Newfoundland had its grievances against Canada, and Canada its grievances against Newfoundland. But there never was a better prospect of establishing peace with honor than there was at present.

As to the question of union, he said that 37 years ago, in 1858, when the Government of Canada asked the different provinces to meet, with a view of Confederation, Newfoundland was the only one to respond at that time. He said there must be something radically wrong somewhere when she is the last to remain outside. Was the cause due to Canada or the unreasonableness of Newfoundland? Between the two countries there was a great gulf, and consequently very erroneous opinions were held about Newfoundland. He might tell them that Newfoundland was only two and a half hours' sail from Canada. With Canada the Island was connected by electricity.

He would like to give some idea of the extent and wealth of the Island. Newfoundland covered 42,000 square miles. It was equal to the size of Denmark, Norway and Sweden. Its position at the mouth of the St. Lawrence made it the key for England to its North American possessions. Being within three days' steam of England, it was the natural terminus. Along the 2000 miles of coast line of Newfoundland there were some of the finest harbors in the world. Then there were the bait fisheries, without which neither the United States nor the Canadian fisheries could be prosecuted. There were engaged in the fisheries some 36,000 fishermen. England owed her strength to the navy, and Newfoundland was the nursery for her seamen. The value of the fisheries annually was $6,700,000. It ought also to be remembered that they were but partially developed and unprotected.

There were 2000 square miles of white pine and the output of the forests this year was valued at $300,000. This industry was but comparatively new. It was only about nine years ago since lumber was first exported.

Then there were 3700 square miles of mineral land untested. In mines already in operation there were $5,250,000 invested. This was the result of random discoveries along the coast lines. Up to a very recent date there were no connections between the coast line and the interior. A large coal area had been retained in the hands of the Government. This would be an inducement to the ministers to win over the Island to Confederation, because, as he understood, a large part of the coal fields of Canada had been given over to an American syndicate.

The fourth largest exports to any country from Canada were sent to Newfoundland, and still there was only a population of 207,000 people.

He had heard great tales as to the debt of Newfoundland. It was only in the neighborhood of $10,000,000 and that included the cost of its railways up to the present time. There were also drydocks and a municipal debt of $1,250,000 included in these figures. The fact was that Newfoundland had assets for all its liabilities. There was no truth in the story of the Island being bankrupt. When the crash came there were $4,500,000 deposits in the banks, or about $20 per head. Newfoundland also had a dependency four times the size of herself. On the Labrador coast she had possessions of 140,000 square miles. The timber land was of great value. The hanging up of the convention, which they had succeeded in making with the United States, had prevented the opening up of markets, which helped to bring on the financial troubles on the Island.

Newfoundland was not knocking at the door of the Dominion, but was merely taking advantage of that invitation which was open to them for the past 28 years to come in and join confederation. They were in Ottawa anxious to know what the Dominion was to do for them. If Canada would do for Newfoundland what would enable her to stand the storms of the future, then she would join the Dominion. (Cheers.) Not only would she join the Dominion, but would aid in building up a structure bound together with bonds of patriotism and adding lustre and prestige to the empire of which she is a part. The empire at present comprises one-fifth of the globe, and of which Canada then would form one-half. (Cheers.)

Messrs. Morris, Emerson and Horwood also replied, each of them expressing the hope that union would be the result of the conference now going on between both countries.

Mr. Joseph Kavanagh proposed the toast of the Parliament of Canada. Sir Mackenzie Bowell was the first to reply. He spoke of the parliament as being second to none, not even the Imperial House. Referring to the time when Confederation of the Dominion took place, he said that all political parties forgot their differences, even their quarrels about Separate schools, to accomplish that great work. He trusted that the result of the conference would be to establish satisfactory terms of union.

Sir Adolphe Caron and Hon. R. W. Scott also spoke to the toast.

Mr. Sandford Fleming proposed Trade and Commerce, and Hon. Mr. Haggart replied, stating that if confederation was not brought about, the fault would not be with Canada. His Excellency proposed a vote of thanks to the chairman, which closed the proceedings.

It is expected that the Sault Canal will be available for the passage of vessels of 14-foot draft the first week in May. There is a little cleaning up to be done at both the eastern and western entrances, and a week later it is anticipated that the largest sized craft on the lakes will be in a position to pass through the canal. The Minister of Railways and Canals has taken a deep interest in the utilization of electricity for opening and closing the lock gates. The system was tested on the Beauharnois locks last year, and naturally there is a desire that it should be successful on the new canal.

The Newfoundland conference was in session this morning, but there was no meeting in the afternoon.

The inland revenue accrued last month amonted to $591,024. In the same month last year it exceeded a million, owing to a scare paragraph in the newspapers that the government intended increasing the excise tax on whisky, which led to a rush to release a large quantity of spirits from bond.

Mr. Kemp, oyster expert of the Fisheries Department, leaves for the Maritime Provinces at the end of this week, going first to Tracadie, N.S., where an oyster bed was cleaned up last year. Mr. Kemp purposes to plant it with young oysters this spring and then proceed to some other location to continue the work of oyster cultivation.

Dr. Wakeham, International Fishery Commissioner, has just received a communication from Mr. Rathbone, his colleague, proposing that the work of the commission shall be resumed early next month. Dr. Wakeham has acquiesced, and the two gentlemen will likely spend the whole of May on the Coast of Nova Scotia inquiring into the condition of the shore mackerel fishery. From there they will go west to the Pacific Coast.

Argument upon evidence adduced before Referee L. A. Audette took place this afternoon, Mr. Hogg, Q.C., representing the Crown and Mr. Guerin of Montreal representing the suppliant in the case of Mrs. Catherine O'Connell v. The Queen. This case arose out of an accident during the construction of the famous Curran bridge at Montreal, whereby the husband of the petitioner was killed. Mrs. O'Connell filed a petition of right claiming damages against the Crown in an amount of $10,000, and upon motion the case was referred to the registrar of the court for enquiry and report as to the cause of the accident and the damages. Reference was commenced at Montreal on June 8 and 9, 1894. The petition of right of James Owens for $5000 for the death of his son arising out of the same accident, by agreement, has been made to depend on the result of the O'Connell case.

The Queer Fix of a Snake That Was Killed on a Kentucky Farm.

"When I got down to my farm in Hardin County, last week," said a lawyer, "I found my men still talking about a snake one of them killed during the last snow. Silas Warner, who manages the farm, was passing through an apple orchard on his way to a mound of turnips that had been covered for winter use. He carried a hoe with which to dig out the turnips. As he walked along a small footpath made by the cows in going to the spring for water, he was surprised to see half the body of a big cow snake almost erect, and fanning the air vigorously.

"He stopped in surprise, for snakes in motion in the winter time are most unusual. The snake's body dropped down to the ground in a minute or two, and he seemed to be resting. Then the body again assumed a motion, and the tail began to be gradually lifted into the air, and the quick threshing of the tail repeated. Warner waited for the same programme of action to be gone through a third time without disturbing the snake. Then the cold began to make itself felt, and Warner resolved to investigate the reptile's actions without further delay.

He walked over to where the snake was and found the front half of the reptile buried in a small opening in the ground. It was kept from going entirely into the hole by a big round ball that was about the centre of the snake's body. Warner pulled the snake out of the hole with the hoe. The reptile refused to move. He cut the snake in two. What was his surprise to find that the swelling was caused by a gourd, which was worn smooth and shiny. On cutting the gourd open he found that it was stil juicy and apparently fresh. Where and when the reptile swallowed the gourd was not quite plain to Warner. The only man who raised gourds lived quite three-quarters of a mile away from my farm."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Dr. Guerin's Little Joke.

An amusing anecdote is related of Dr. Alphonse Guerin, the well-known surgeon, and the author of a number of valuable medical works, who has just died at a good old age. A short time before the war of 1870, when he was surgeon to the St. Louis Hospital, he was summoned to Rome to perform an operation on Pius IX., a task of which he acquitted himself with the utmost success, and much to the satisfaction of the Pope, who, in his enthusiasm, pronounced him to be the greatest doctor in Christendom. "You see," the doctor used to remark, with a smile, when he told the story. "I was obliged to believe that he was right in his opinion of me, for is he not infallible?" Dr. Alphonse Guerin performed his last operation only a week ago.

DEALT IN FORGED STAMPS

U.S. Postal Authorities Unearth a Fraud.

HAMILTON SAID TO BE THE CENTRE

Advertised Two Cent Stamps at a Discount—The Fraud Detected by a Broker in Chicago—A Novelty Company in Hamilton Under Suspicion.

Chicago, April 10.—A package of counterfeit stamps, which was seized yesterday by Government officials, was addressed to Nathan Herzog, a cigar dealer in the rotunda of the Chamber of Commerce. They were shipped by express from Buffalo by the Canadian Novelty and Supply Co. of Hamilton, Ont. When a messenger brought the package Mr. Herzog examined it, and finding the stamps were counterfeit refused to receive them. He then telephoned the U.S. Marshal and Postoffice Inspector Stuart. Four packages similar to the one Herzog received were delivered by the express messenger to the people to whom they were addressed, paying for them without raising any objections.

Mr. Herzog said to-day, in explaining his innocent connection with the scheme: "I dispose of about $100 worth of stamps daily, my customers being the tenants of the Chamber of Commerce. I buy the stamps from wholesale dealers and firms who do a mail business. They get a surplus of stamps and I buy them at a small discount. I saw an advertisement in a Chicago newspaper a week ago last Sunday, reading as follows:

"We have $115 United States 2-cent stamps which we cannot use here. Will send them by express c.o.d., privilege of examination, for $100. Canadian Novelty and Supply Co., Hamilton, Ont."

"I answered the advertisement, writing that I would take all the stamps they had at that figure. In reply I received a letter saying they could not let me have more than $300 worth a month. They added that they were making the first shipment Friday via Buffalo so as to save the expense of sending the stamps across the line. An express messenger brought in the package yesterday. On examining the stamps I found the color light and I suspected from the general appearance that they were not genuine and I told the messenger of my belief. The messenger replied that I need not be afraid, as he had delivered four similar packages within an hour and had received pay without hesitation. As the Hamilton concern had said only $300 worth could be supplied each month, I knew then the stamps were counterfeit and notified the postal officials, who obtained possession of the packages."

Captain Porter of the Secret Service has 28,750 of the bogus stamps in his possession, the packages delivered to the other four Chicagoans having been secured. Captain Porter refused to disclose the names of the other consignees, as all are innocent of wrong-doing. Although the Secret Service agents at Buffalo and in Canada were notified last night, he believed the premature publication of the facts would result in the escape of the gang.

The "Novelty Co." a Mystery.

Hamilton, Ont., April 10.—The premises of the Canadian Novelty Supply Company, referred to in to-day's United Press despatches, as being suspected of counterfeiting United States postage stamps, was located this evening in a store occupied by F. Dunham, painter and glazier, at No. 22 King William-street.

The place is less than a block distant from Police Headquarters, but the names of the parties who compose the Novelty Supply Company cannot be learned tonight, Nor can any one be found who is aware of the nature of the business carried on by the alleged company. The local postoffice authorities have taken the matter in hand, and it is understood the police have secured an important clue, on which they are now working.

The Story Disbelieved in Buffalo.

Buffalo, April 10.—The postal authorities here have no knowledge of the alleged fraud perpetrated by using bogus stamps and put no faith in the story of importations into this city from Hamilton, Ont. They have never had their attention called to such a fraud by anyone and have received no caution from the Postoffice Department.

WITH POISON AND PISTOL.

Buffalo, April 9.—There is more than the usual display of spring suicides in Western New York. To-day's budget of suicides and other fatalities is as follows:

Rich, who tried the laudanum route at the Falls yesterday, died this morning. John Call went into an unoccupied house which he owned in Batavia, and was found last night suspended from a hook in the ceiling. He had been dead several hours.

Judson Spring of Lockport, who shot himself just below the heart Saturday, March 30, and who despite his protests the doctors had brought around to a fair recovery, started out for a jag Saturday night, and to-day inflammation set in and he is dying.

A Polack named Yanski shot a fellow-countryman named Babitzi last night because a pretty barmaid with whom he was in love trusted Babitzi for a round of drinks. Yanski is locked up on a charge of attempted murder.

Carpenter Wisewell of Nunda fell from a scaffold to the ground, a distance of 14 feet, and received injuries from which he died in a few hours.

Nine-year-old Willie Knight was with his parents in a woods near Attica making maple sugar, when he fell into a kettle of boiling syrup and was so badly scalded that he died in a few hours.

A work train, on which were a number of Italians, descending a small mountain near Hornellsville yesterday, jumped the track. One man was killed outright, two more badly injured and nearly every one of the rest of the crew was injured.

Shot Himself in the Stomach.

Montreal, April 9.—Arthur Gelinas, a traveler for Mougenais, Boivin & Co., and a son-in-law of Mr. Boivin, shot himself in the stomach in the Richelieu Hotel about 3 o'clock to-day, and is lying in a dangerous condition at the Notre Dame Hospital. The only reason that can be assigned is that he has been used to living expensively, and his income has been reduced recently. He has two young children.

Killed on the Track Near Guelph.

Guelph, April 10.—An unknown old man who was walking along the W.G. and B. track, about three miles north of here, was struck and instantly killed by the down passenger train, due here at 10.10 a.m. The train was stopped and the body brought on to Guelph.

RELIGION IN THE SCHOOL.

The school question as a problem of national import is not confined to Canada, the United States are wrestling with it at the present time. There, as here, the source of perplexity is religion Dr. Lyman Abbott has an interesting article in the current number of Century on "Religious teaching in public schools." He starts out with his conviction that it is the duty of a free state to provide public education that will produce good citizens.

This duty he contends the state may not relegate to the church for two reasons. In the first place the church of whatever denomination does not give "the kind of education necessary to make intelligent citizens in a free commonwealth." In support of this statement he shows that citizenship is not intelligent in Catholic Italy and Spain; that there is dense ignorance among the masses in Protestant England and that the American parochial school rarely does as good work as the public school.

In the second place. churches "are quite incompetent to deal with the problem of free popular education." "If the State were to abandon the work of education. and leave it to the parents, to private enterprise or to the churches, we should be swamped in a bog of ignorance in one generation."

Dr. Abbott however insists upon moral training, a developing of the will and emotions as well as of intellect, as a necessary element in the education that will promote good citizenship. But he goes a step further and adds that the highest altruistic moral training, must, for the child be based on religion, must be embodied in a personality and be vitalized with the spirit of Christianity.

"Settlement will not be reached by drawing an imaginary line between the religious and the secular, and relegating moral and religious education to the churches and leaving secular education to the state. No such line exists in fact. Religion is the spirit in which all secular life is to be carried on * * * Settlement will not be reached by diminishing so-called religious exercises to a minimum * * * the chief effect of which is throwing contempt on religion by teaching the children to think that they can do with very little of it. These so-called religious exercises are not teaching—they are worship; and it is not the function of the State to conduct worship, not even a very little worship, if objection is made by those who support or those who attend the school. Settlement will not be reached by contriving some simple theology which can be taught in the public school. on the theory that a theology can be found so broad and simple that agnostics, Jews, Protestants and Roman Catholics will agree upon it. Theology is the philosophy of religion, and the philosophy of religion, is not necessary to good citizenship."

The article concludes with the suggestion of "local experiments to find a method by which out of school hours, either in the school rooms or in other adjoining rooms, distinctly catechetical, theoretical and denominational instruction may be given, not by or under the public school authorities, but by such adjustment with them that it shall not interfere with their work. nor lay a double burden on the pupils too hard for them to bear."

A NATION ON STILTS.

Through Dreary Wastes of Sand—Their Stilt Races Are Novel and Exciting and Show Wonderful Skill and Speed.

Probably the most curious community in Europe to-day is that of the Landais, the famous stilt-walkers, who make their home in a little corner of Gascony, bordering on the Bay of Biscay, and have been tucked away there ever since that region was known as the English Province of Aquitaine.

Time and the encroachment of scientific ideas are gradually blotting out their individuality. but even now Landes is little traversed, and although its inns are bad, and its railroads nil, it is one of the most fascinating sections of France.

Landes has a curious and unprecedented history. For years its fate hung on a thread, and it came very near being a French desert of Sahara. Not from choice or peculiarity did its inhabitants become stilt-walkers. They were forced into the habit of travelling by the aid of poles for the simple reason that their land was becoming a waste of sand. Landes borders on the seashore, and the strong, crisp choppy winds from the Bay of Biscay sweep across its coast, driving the fine white sand inland in enormous quantities and piling up dunes or sandhills far back from the shore.

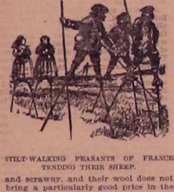
Steadily the land grew more desolate and sand-blown. Walking by aid of the feet alone became impossible. Even now, with the country half-reclaimed as it is, it takes a strong and vigorous man to make ten miles a day of straight progress, travelling directly on the soles of his feet. Half a century ago even this was out of the question.

From time immemorial stilts have been in use among the inhabitants. The hardy peasants of the region, men and women alike—but men especially, for the reason that the women of the Landes are mostly stay-at-home bodies—go through the country with great strides, stepping from tuft to tuft of heather so unerringly that the sand does not impede their progress.

Dressed in sheepskin coats, with rough, baggy trousers, footless knee stockings of heavy wool, with their feet bare, their head surmounted by the dark blue beret of the Gascons, they present a picturesque sight. The stilts they use come up to the knee only and are strapped there, the stilt-walker being about four feet from the ground. The crotch on which the foot rests is covered with sheepskin, with the woolly side turned out.

The peasant also carries a long staff. When he wishes to get on his feet he swings himself up with it, and by its aid it is possible to drop himself down without any appreciable jolt. Among the shepherds the chief occupation throughout the day is the knitting of stockings, and while at work on this usually feminine industry the peasant steadies himself with his balancing pole stuck in the sand, the other end resting against the small of his back.

The occupations of the Landais are much as they were in the old days: the tending of sheep, resin gathering and charcoal burning. The sheep are poor and scrawny, and their wool does not bring a particularly good price in the French market. but the herdsmen are paid living wages.



STILT-WALKING PEASANTS OF FRANCE TENDING THEIR SHEEP.

The resin-gathering industry is a more profitable one. The skilled resineur is an important man throughout the country, though he has to live away from his family, and in ill-conditioned huts in the midst of the forest at least six days of the week, and endure many privations. When actually engaged in gathering resin the peasant of the Landes dispenses with stilts. He leans up against the tree a ladder that is truly primeval, as it consists merely of a stick in which crotches have been cut. Up this he climbs, and, pole in hand, first stripping off the bark, knocks off the resinous lumps that are exposed to view. At the foot of the tree he has a little earthen pot to catch the fluid resin that is constantly dripping, and which is the most valuable in the provincial markets.

In some ways the Landais are more Spanish than French. Living so near the boundary line, and just on the southermost slope of the Pyrenees, they have imbibed may the Spanish likings, and chief among them the love for bull-fighting. So pronounced did this taste become that the French Government has recently found it necessary to put its foot down forcibly against bull fights in the Grandes Landes.

They were always mild affairs, however, and at the very worst, but feeble imitations of the Spanish national amusement. Cows were generally used instead of bulls, for the stated reason that they turn quicker and were generally more active. The toreadors were Spanish, but the ecarteurs, or teasers of the "bull," were men of the Landes, and were invariably dressed in the costume of acrobats, and were small in stature.

The methods of these "bull fights" was unique. When let loose in the amphitheatre the cow was displayed with a long cord tied to her horns. To the other end would be attached the ecarteur, and by a series of jerks, combined with quick and supple movements on his part, he would worry the angry animal, now being thrown beneath her horns and recovering himself by a quick movement; now by a well-directed pull causing her to chase to the other end of the ring. In the early days of the amusement horses were used, as they are in Spain.

Humanity has prevailed in the Landes of recent years, however, and only men venture forth into the arena to meet the "bull." The "bull" is not slaughtered, but when it is tired out and considered to have afforded sufficient sport, is led back to the pen.

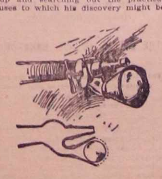
Throughout France these "bull fights" go by the names of "Courses Provencales" and "Courses Landaises," and are enormously popular, and have been frequently depicted in the French press, though comparatively few Frenchmen have ever seen them.

Yet another amusement at the annual fetes of the various towns are the stilt races, these having great interest on account of the expertness of the contestants. It is a practically unheard of thing for a Landias to fall when he is correctly mounted. His speed over the plains of the Grandes Landes is almost beyond belief, his pace being as fast as a good horse can trot. In a match at a country town he generally exceeds this, and there being many famous stilt pedestrians in the district, the contests are hugely exciting. From a pictorial point of view they remind one of a pack of ostriches speeding over an African desert.

IT CONQUERS THE FLAME.

How a Secret of Nature Was Discovered.

It was in August that Charles V. Pollock, a resident of Des Moines, Ia., while experimenting with an ordinary lawn sprinkler, discovered a secret of nature which promises far-reaching results in our domestic economy. Mr. Pollock found that a ball placed loosely in a bell-shaped nozzle, without anything to hold it in position, would resist all pressure of water and create a spray, and that no possible pressure would dislodge the ball. Following it up and searching out the practical uses to which his discovery might be applied, Mr. Pollock has found that it will serve many purposes of human necessity, most important of which is that of adding to the present fire equipments a spray of such powerful effect that it is doubtless not claiming too much for it to say that in every case where fire departments are prompt in reaching fires there will be no longer necessity for loss of life either from suffocation or fire.



THE NEW NOZZLE.

It was found that by using a large bell and ball and applying such a nozzle to fire hose it would create a solid sheet of water and give out the same quantity of water as given out through the straight nozzles without creating any back pressure on the hose. Careful study was given to developing the ball nozzle for this purpose, and after experiments extending over a period of several months the best form of bell was found and a new appliance was given to fire departments which is certain to increase to a very large extent their efficiency. The ball nozzle was immediately adopted by the fire department in Des Moines, the home of the inventor, and since its adoption the record of the Des Moines Fire Department has been a marvellous one; not a single serious loss has occurred, and the chief of the fire department testifies that he has by the use of the ball nozzle saved many lives and thousands of dollars' worth of property. In one particular instance, when one of the largest lumber yards in that city took fire, and for a few minutes threatened a valuable portion of the city, the timely arrival of the department and the use of the ball nozzles averted a most disastrous conflagration. As is generally known, the most difficult thing to contend with in the early stage of fires is the smoke, which quickly fills the entire structure, making it impossible for firemen to enter, and for this reason it may be said that thousands of lives have perished and millions of dollars' worth of property have been destroyed. Efforts have constantly been made to produce an effective spray with sufficient power to drive smoke and quench flames, but up to the time of the discovery of the ball nozzle this important result had not been accomplished. The difficulty has been to secure a spraying device that would permit the flow of a sufficient amount of water to give it driving power and at the same time to overcome the back pressure of the hose, but the ball nozzle accomplishes these important results and is withal more easily handled than the ordinary straight stream. Indeed, while it takes two or more men to handle a straight stream, one man can easily handle the ball nozzle, which creates a solid wall of water between the firemen and the smoke and flame, enabling them to pursue the fire to its source, no matter where it is in a structure, cover a large area quickly and rescue people, if there were any, who might otherwise perish. Where a powerful straight stream is used it is often the case that as much damage results from water as from fire. The ball nozzle obviates this to a very large extent, as the force, while great enough to quench flame, is not sufficient to cause unnecessary destruction of fragile interior property.

Dora—Why don't you ask that old man next you to change places with me? That we could sit together.

Wilfrid—Old man, dear? That's not an old man; it's a new woman!

The Only Question

"Do you ever think, George, dear," she said, and her voice was soft and low as befitted the perfect beauty of the night, "how closely true happiness is allied with tears."

"I don't believe I ever do," replied George.

"Yes," she went on, looking up into his face, "when one is truly and wholly happy there is but little to divide a smile and a tear."

"That's a fact," said George, "but I never thought of it before. There's nothing but the nose."

They are used as a general family medicine with the best results.

McCARTHY'S POOR PROSPECTS.

Caledonia Station, Ont., April 10.—What your readers are perhaps most anxious to learn in regard to the Haldimand contest is as to the strength and prospects of the McCarthy party. McCarthy's headquarters are located here, with Organizer Fee in charge of affairs. The party are, of course, without organization of any kind, except what they have been able to call into existence within the past few days. It is quite evident that D'Alton McCarthy is running this campaign as a purely personal affair. The same personal animus that brought him out against Sir John Thompson has induced him to cross swords with Dr. Montague. McCarthy has no better following now than he has had all along. As a matter of fact he seems to be weaker, for as yet there is no sign of even Col. O'Brien coming on the scene to help him. Beyond Mr. Armour and the candidate Mr. McCarthy has pitchforked into the constituency, no public man who is known outside of his own township is associated with him in the campaign.

Yet Mr. McCarthy is exceedingly anxious to score a victory, and with that end in view he has set in motion the machinery at his command.

This machinery consists of a score or more of law students and law clerks from Toronto, who are here occupying almost every available room in the hotels. What they have done up to date is not very evident, but Organizer Fee is getting considerable literature printed at the local printing offices and it is likely Mr. McCarthy's young men will in a day or two be despatched through the country, each with a bundle of cards and posters on his arm.

The young men will also speak in the various township school houses. Five meetings, for instance, have been advertised for Friday night, and the same kind of thing will be kept up till polling day.

Mr. McCarthy is apparently making this the effort of his life. It is the crisis of his political existence, but the fact that he can summon no publicmen of influence to assist him, that he cannot secure a local candidate to oppose Dr. Montague; that he has no local organization; shows how weak he really is, and how slim are his prospects of success.

No one here seriously believes that McCarthy's candidate will poll more than a respectable vote. There is certainly no expectation that he will be elected.

The friends of Dr. Montague on the other hand, are confident of victory, and the expected majority reaches way up in the hundreds. The meeting that was held at Hagersville to-night is said to have been a splendid success. Long before the advertised hour the opera house was filled with supporters of Dr. Montague, and many were unable to get into the building.

NO LOAN TO CANADIAN SEALERS.

The Imperial Government Asked The Nicaragua Canal. Vote of thanks to Speaker Peel.

London, April 9.—In the House of Commons to-day, Mr. Sydney Buxton, Under Colonial Secretary, announced that one-half of the troops in British Honduras would be withdrawn on April 30, and the remainder at the end only.

Sir Edward Grey, replying to a question by Sir Thomas Esmonde said that the Republic of Hawaii had been recognized by Great Britain

Sir William Harcourt moved a vote of thanks to the retiring Speaker, Right Hon. Arthur Wellesley Peel The motion was seconded by Mr. A. J. Balfour, the Conservative leader, and supported in eulogistic speeches by Mr. Joseph Chamberlain and Mr. Justin McCarthy, and the House passed it by acclamation.

Sir Edward Grey, in reply to a question by Sir Edward Harland said the Government had not sent a commission to co-operate with the United States commissioners in regard to the Nicaragua Canal, nor would they do so unless they were invited by the Washington Government. The Government, he said, was fully sensible of the importance of the canal to British shipping and would take measures in the event of the completion of the waterway to secure as favorable treatment for Great Britain as was accorded to other nations.

Sir Edward Grey, replying to an interrogation by Sir Geo Baden-Powell, said the Government had received no proposal that to advance money to pay damages awarded to sealers under the award of the Paris Tribunal. pending the settlement of these claims by the United States.

Russian Oil Output Increasing

London, April 10.—A despatch to The Daily News from Odessa says that the Ministerial Department of Trade and Manufactures recently sent an envoy to Paris to confer with delegates of the Standard Oil Company, which had made overtures to Russia looking to an arrangement to obviate ruinous competition. Nothing definite was decided upon, and now it is stated that Russia's hesitancy arises from reports that the American oil wells show signs of exhaustion, while the Caucasus wells increase both in number and output.

Derailed by a Washout.

Bradford, Pa., April 10. A bad wreck occurred on the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg Railroad early this morning between Punxsutawney and Big Run. The official account of the accident received from the company is that the train struck a washout and left the rails, piling up the locomotive and 18 empty gondolas promiscuously. Engineer Ed. C. Taylor and Fireman Morris Shea were buried under the wreck and killed. The conductor escaped uninjured.

Beatty of Parry Sound Renounces Toryism

FOUR DIVISIONS IN THE HOUSE

Toronto, April 10.—The sole topic of conversation at the Legislature yesterday was the active support Mr. Beatty, member for Parry Sound, had decided to give the Government. Mr. Beatty has been a life-long Conservative and was elected as such. He has seen the error of his ways before the end of his first session in Parliament. He voted four times with the Government yesterday upon important issues, much to the surprise and chagrin of the Opposition. When asked why he had left his party he said although he had been elected as a Conservative he had received a large Reform vote and felt it his duty to regard the interests of his constituency in the House before those of party. His constituents wished him to support all Government measures that were right and just and in the best interests of the people. They wished him to vote with the Opposition and against the Government when he could not agree with the action of the Government upon any particular point. He had come to Toronto believing that he would be able to give a conscientious support to the Opposition, but as the session progressed he found that it would be in the best interests of his constituents to give more support to the Government, since he could not in conscience find objection to many of their measures.

The Opposition leaders feel Mr. Beatty's departure from their ranks very keenly, and are wondering who next. Speaking of Mr. Beatty's turn-over, one prominent Conservative said: "We are drifting without a leader. Marter is no leader at all. He has lost the confidence of the people and the members. Meredith's place can't be filled in a hurry. I should not be surprised to find others of our men going over. We have lost heart. What we want is a good clean able leader, and until we get one we shall not get any more influence than we have at present. I don't blame Beatty so much when you consider that he comes from an outlying district that needs Government aid. He wants to do the best he can for his people in the way of getting money for their roads, etc. He can't get anything as a Conservative, and I suppose that is one of his reasons for going out of our camp. What I fear is that more will follow."

CARNEGIE SET BACK.

Mr. Carnegie took it into his head late last evening to block the progress of business. The House was in concurrence on an item of $1750, the salary of the Provincial Inspector of Licenses. Mr. Carnegie moved in amendment that the item be struck out. The amendment was lost, the vote being 52 against and 35 for. The Patrons divided.

The next item was then proceeded with, when Mr. Preston moved an amendment word for word as appeared upon the order paper in the form of a resolution over Mr. McNaughton's name. The Speaker ruled the amendment out of order.

OBJECTIONABLE CLAUSES IN THE FRUIT BILL WITHDRAWN.

An agreeable surprise awaited the House yesterday afternoon. Hon. Mr. Dryden took occasion to remove the objectionable clauses in his fruit bill when the committee of the whole was considering it. Last week when the bill came up for its second reading strenuous objection was taken to the clause which provided that all fruit should be graded and every package marked. Since the second reading a number of deputations have waited upon the Government and urged that this clause should be struck out. Hon. Mr. Dryden finally decided to consent in deference to the wishes of representatives of all classes, both farmers, fruit growers and dealers. On behalf of the fruit growers, Major Hiscott rose in his seat and thanked the Government for having made the concession. The other clauses of the bill remain. Small apples or other fruit may not be placed at the bottom of the barrel, but must be uniform throughout and the city dealer must give full particulars to his customers within a week after shipment.

CENTRAL PRISON BROOMS.

Hon. Mr. Gibson (Hamilton) moved, That this House doth ratify an agreement laid before this House on March 27, instant, bearing date on August 18, A.D. 1894, expressed to be made between the inspector of prisons and public charities and H. A. Nelson & Sons, for the manufacture of brooms and whisks at the Central Prison for the said H. A. Nelson & Sons by the prisoners confined in the Central Prison.

Mr. Whitney objected to the passage of the resolution, and moved in amendment that the Government should make no agreement with any one particular firm for prison labor without having afforded competing firms the opportunity to tender. Two evils had arisen. The Government had not secured as much as it might for the prison labor, and honest traders and workmen had been made to suffer because of unfair competition.

Hon. Mr. Gibson said that the Government had experienced great difficulty in the past in dealing with irresponsible firms. Messrs. Nelson & Sons were financially sound, and dealt more outside the province than other firms. The competition was thus not so keen as if the contract had been made with a local firm. Messrs. Nelson & Sons own certain of the patents in connection with the machinery used. If they were not allowed to operate they might make it extremely difficult for others to do so profitably. He had never known any Government to advertise for tenders for prison labor. If it were contended that there was fraud or collusion between the Government and the Nelson firm, then there might be good grounds for complaint. This had not been contended, nor would any man dare to say that there was any political motive in the contract. The matter was purely a business affair and in the best interests of the people. He asked therefore that the amendment should be voted down, since if it were passed it would be a reflection upon the motives of the Government.

Dr. Ryerson said that the public printing of the province should be done at the prison. The Government was paying large sums for printing. Why did they not have the prisoners do it, and let them stop manufacturing articles that lower the open market and the wages of honest workmen.

Dr. Meacham thought that public school books should be printed by the prisoners at the Central Prison.

Hon. Mr. Hardy said that all the discussion about prison and outside labor was outside the question. The resolution simply asked that the Government agreement with a certain firm be affirmed, while the amendment was a condemnation of the Government's policy, and a request that the members should insist upon tenders in all cases being called for. It was not in any sense a question of prison and outside labor, this question was not touched upon by either the resolution or the amendment. He trusted that the members would stick to the subject properly under discussion. The reason why the Government dealt with the Nelson firm was the same as would govern any sound business firm. They wished to deal with a reputable and responsible firm. They wished to know their man.

Mr. Haycock said that if the principle was admitted that prisoners should do no work, then honest laborers would soon attempt to get all the men they could in prison to get rid of their competition. He was in favor of prison labor and was opposed to the Government policy with reference to this question. He thought that public tenders should be asked for this prison labor. He intended supporting the amendment.

The amendment was lost—37 to 51. All the Patrons, with the exception of Mr. Pardo, voted with the Opposition.

MATHESON CALLED DOWN.

In the Public Accounts Committee yesterday, Col. Matheson made some serious charges against the management of the Central Prison. He said that if he could secure the evidence of two witnesses he would prove that bad lumber was unloaded upon the prison and used in the wood-working shops. Inspector James Noxon gave a flat denial to the charges made and demanded that Col. Matheson make good his charges. He had no right to make such serious charges, which would go to the country through the press, unless he was prepared to go on and at least make an attempt to prove them. Col. Matheson made no reply.

The evening was taken up by the Opposition, the members of which moved a number of unimportant amendments while the House was in concurrence.

Director Blue, in his fourth annual report of the Bureau of Mines, states that the gold fields of the province are attracting greater notice, and says that during the past year the Rainy Lake region especially drew many explorers and capitalists towards it. Numerous discoveries of gold-bearing ore are reported there. Four or five locations are being actively developed, and one gold mill is nearly ready for operation. In the Lake of the Woods district the mine and mill on Sultana Island have been worked continuously. Three other promising properties are in course of development, with British, American and Canadian capital, and it is proposed to put a mill on each of them this year. At the present time a mill is in course of erection near the upper waters of the Seine River, a few miles from the south of the Atik-okan River. The Creighton Mine in the Township of that name, was idle the whole year, but towards the close of it fresh exploratory work was commenced with a diamond drill, and it is reported that a strike of considerable promise has been made; operations to more satisfactorily prove the extent and quality of the ore body are now in progress. In the Lake Wahnapitae district, one location has attracted much attention by the exceedingly rich samples of ore taken from it. A company has been organized to work the property, and a shaft is in course of being sunk upon the vein.

The nickel and copper mines in the Sudbury region were actively worked during the year, and the production of matte was much larger than in either of the preceding two years. Mr. Blue has sanguine hopes that the iron industry will assume active form in the province this year.

Cuban Insurgents Defeated

Havana, April 9.—The Governor of Puerto Principe reports that a band of Insurgents numbering 48 men, moving westward, was attacked by the Government troops in the vicinity of San Miguel and Baga. The leader of the band was killed, and a number of his followers were wounded. One of the band was taken prisoner and the rest fled toward the River Cauto. Gen La Chambre reports that a Government reconnoitering party to-day met a band of insurgents who had landed at Duaba. The troops attacked the insurgents, taking three prisoners. The rest of the band fled, and are being closely pursued.

Eloped With His Sister-in-Law.

London, Ont., April 10.—The meanest kind of elopement is reported from Brisco-street, South London. The wronged husband is an estimable, hard-working carpenter about 50 years of age. His wife is much younger. The husband's brother came as a guest last fall, and on the plea of being ill imposed all winter upon his brother's hospitality. Two or three days ago he eloped with the latter's wife, who leaves behind four of five small children. Prior to going she induced her husband to buy her a new outfit and borrowed $10 from a prominent citizen on the plea that a bailiff was in the house.

Bismarck's Health Not Good

London, April 9.—The Morning Post prints a despatch from Friedrichsruhe saying that Prince Bismarck's health is less satisfactory than is to be desired. This is the result of the recent fetes and receptions, which overtaxed the old Chancellor's strength.

Japs Seize a British Steamer.

London, April 9.—A despatch from Shanghai to the Central News says that Japan has seized the British steamer Yiksang, with a quarter of a million cartridges, near Taku.

Countess Russell Penitent.

London, April 9.—The Countess Russell, in her cross-examination to-day, said her sole object now was to return to her husband. She believed him to be a virtuous man, and wished him to forgive her if there was anything to forgive. The case was adjourned for the day.

TRAIN DERAILED BY A BOULDER.

Engineer and Fireman Killed in an Accident Near Sherbrooke

Sherbrooke, Q., April 10.—Last night's Boston, Maine, south-going train, from Sherbrooke, when within half a mile of Smith Mills' Station, at a spot known as "The Cut," the engine struck a large boulder, which immediately threw it off the rails and down an embankment, twisting itself free of the baggage car, but leaving the latter on the track. The engineer and fireman, Roney and Emerson, went down with their engine, and were removed from it, both dead.

The boulder had been dislodged by the rain. The train was an unusually heavy one, having a large number of passengers and extra cars from the lines of the Grand Trunk and Quebec Central Railways.

Six Killed by Collapse of a Store

Wheeling, W. Va., April 10.—The T. C. Hutchisson brick four-story wholesale hardware store in Maine-street collapsed this morning, carrying with it the building on either side. Six persons in the Hutchisson building were killed, including Rev. Father F. H. Park, a Catholic clergyman, passing the building at the time, who was buried in the ruins. The building adjoining caught fire, but the flames were soon under control. The money loss will reach $200,000. The cause of the accident was the defective construction of the Hutchisson building, which was weakened a year or so ago by the addition of two stories.

23 Killed in a Mine Explosion.

Whatcom, Wash., April 10.—An explosion from fire-damp took place in the Blue Cannon Coal Mine on Lake Whatcom yesterday. Twenty-three bodies of miners who lost their lives have been already discovered, and, so far as can be learned, only two who were in the mine when the explosion occurred escaped. The disaster was undoubtedly caused by an accumulation of fire-damp, which was exploded by a blast in the breast of the gangway.

Chinese Virtuosos.

You must know that the Chinese are far more commonly virtuosos than we; and a Chinese collector is a real connoisseur. He had no idea of beauty, except to eye it suspiciously, as probably of Japanese or other foreign origin; all he worships is age; and—mark this most curious trait—antiques of his own country only. What a conversatism to boast of this! The Chinese scholar and virtuoso has the profoundest admiration for his own country's ancient literature and art. He will not deign to have anything foreign or new on his shelves. I think this is something of a rebuke to us, hunting for relics of every country but our own. It puts us on the stand of nouveaux riches.

Don't think that a Chinaman spends nothing on his collection. He will outbid the vulgarest millionaire in the world for a genuine old bronze or porcelain. His collection is not built up in a day by wholesale commissions given to dealers. His is bought piece by piece as opportunity and finances allow. The collection made by a single man's lifetime is nothing. You will see pieces in his catalogue bought by father and grandfather and remote ancestors. They are heirlooms. They are passed down from father to son. They are the mark of education and noble birth, because the only nobility there is education and noble rank, and noble birth is being the descendants of ancestors who have held office and taken degrees. An heirloom of a choice bit of porcelain proves education and wealth in the purchaser. Does this not make you feel rather new with your twopenny fans and plates on the wall?—Temple Bar.

How to be Pretty, Though Cold.

"How to be pretty, though cold" is a difficult problem for the unfortunate woman who cannot afford furs of some description in this season when fur garments are made so fascinatingly becoming, with their wide, soft collars and so expensive in their exaggerated fullness. Sealskin is the one fur which is continually in fashion, and it is so distinctly becoming to every face and complexion that it will never lose its popularity. It is not quite so aristocratic as the gray haired Russian sable, but that is a matter of rarity and price rather than a question of beauty. Chinchilla is one of the season's favorites, and for the woman with a clear pink and white complexion there can be nothing prettier.

A beautiful evening cloak is made of dark green bengaline, with a lining and full cape of chinchilla. For those who cannot afford the larger garments there are Eton coats of seal and Persian lamb, with moire velvet sleeves. These are made with wide revers and high collar, either single or double breasted, and are very chic little garments for young ladies especially, and still cheaper are the collarettes, miniature capes and fur boas, which were never so pretty as they are now, and they answer every purpose for becoming effect.—Philadelphia Press.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

A O U W AT HOME

A Large Gathering and a Pleasant Time

An "at home" that was a splendid success was given by the Ancient Order of United Workmen in their lodge rooms last night. There was a large company present, a good programme was carried out and a supper was partaken of which would please the most fastidious. The At Home was chiefly for the wives of the members of the Order as a recompense for the evenings spent by their husbands in the lodge room. H. Y. Canniff, Master Workman, occupied the chair. Dr. W. W. Boyce, Past Master of the Order, opened the programme with an address in which he defined the chief aims and objects of the Order and outlined the benefits it conferred upon the widow and the orphans. It also furnished its members with the cheapest insurance in the world. Mr. W. McLean, followed with a vocal solo and responded to a well merited encore. Dr. Walker was called upon and gave a neat address Miss Jesse Robertson favored the audience with one of her popular Scotch dialect recitations. Rev. R. Marshall delivered a brief and interesting address. Prof. Canfield gave a vocal solo and responded to an encore. He also was called upon again during the evening. W. C. Mikel was present and furnished endless amusement with one of his humorous recitations. He recited Farewell Brother Watkins as no one but he can. He responded to an encore which but added to his laurels. He informed the audience that he was about to give away a few secrets of the Order but he would have to have a few of the gentlemen members on the platform. He called Bros. Halliwell, Palen, Huffman and Canfield to the platform and then repeated the words of "Vohonkus and Vohonkus" over and made them sing it. The quartette was much appreciated and will in future take part in all concerts when they are present and the audience is looking for fun.

J. Earl Halliwell closed the program with an instructive and interesting address upon the merits of the Order. Rev. J. Faull proposed a vote of thanks to all those who took part in the program. It was seconded by Mr. Palen and carried unanimously The ladies then repaired to the banquet hall where the supper was laid and they all did it ample justice while the gentlemen served. Mr. Thomas Benson was caterer and deserves great praise for his able management. Altogether it was a most creditable affair and will long be pleasantly remembered by those who attended.

A COMET COMING

Barnard's Periodic Visitor Due This Month

An interesting object, for which astronomers are preparing to search toward the end of this month, is Bernard's periodic comet, 1884, II This comet, which has a five year period, reappeared in 1890, but was very faint even in good telescopes, its brightness being only about one-fifth or one-seventh of that at the time of its discovery. According to the searchephemerides, which have been calculated by eminent astronomers, this comet should come within the range of visibility on the 24 h of April at a point not far from the eastern boundary of Capricornus, from which constellation its path will extend across Aquarius and portions of Cetus and Pisces. Perihelion will be reached about the 3rd of June, a date, however, according to some calculators, eight days too early, and according to others eight days too late. The comet will probably be faint, and at no time become visible to the naked eye; still, it will be an interesting object, and will receive attention at all the observatories. Prior to perihelion, it will have to be looked for after sunset; after that event, before sunrise.

AN EXTENDED TRIP

Mr R J Graham Returns After Visiting the Coast

Mr. R. J. Graham has returned from a trip to the coast. During his absence he has visited Vancouver, Victoria, Nanimo, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, Oregon, Salt Lake City, Denver, Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago and Detroit. Mr. Graham reports business at the Coast very dull and money seems to be very scarce. Outside of Chicago, Denver was the only place he visited which seemed to have any life. Mr. Graham visited Kingsville, Leamington and Bridgetown, Ont., where he is building factories, The three factories will be in operation this week. The machinery is being shipped from here. Mr. Graham will have 12 cheese factories in operation this season in Ontario and one in Michigan.

The Disease Disappears in Three Weeks by the use of B. B. B.—Letter From Manitoba Fully Describing it.

DEAR SIRS—During the winter of 1892 93, I was covered with pimples on the inside of my right leg between the knee and the ankle. As I never had anything of the kind before I was anxious about it, and sought medical advice, but getting no relief from the doctor I tried a bottle of B. B. B., applying some of it to my leg as well as using it internally, and to my surprise the nasty disease, whatever it was, disappeared within three weeks, and I am thankful to say it has never re-appeared.

JACK THE CUTTER

Captain Creeden, of the Morrisania police station, New York, has received a large number of complaints from women whose dresses have been cut or otherwise damaged while they were attending services in the chapel of St. Peter and St. Paul, 158 street and St. Ann's avenue, during the last two weeks. Policemen in plain clothes have been in constant attendance at the services for the last fortnight, looking for the man they call "Jack the Cutter." The women of the congregation say they are much afraid of the "cutter". They declare that if he is not caught by next Sunday, they will not wear their new Easter dresses.

THEY WILL HOLD AN INQUEST

Coroner Peck Will Conduct an Investigation Into the Death of Mrs Gerow

Coroner W. H. Peck of Prince Edward this morning received from County Crown Attorney Brown of Picton, permission to hold an inquest to enquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of the late Mrs. David Gerow. The inquest will be held in Rosamore to-morrow afternoon. The remains were interred in Frederick's cemetery yesterday afternoon Anticipating an inquest, the body was buried just as it was found, with the bed-clothes and apparel. The body will be exhumed and Drs. Clinton and Farncomb will hold a post mortem examination. There are undoubtedly some rather strange circumstances connected with the affair that the inquest will probably throw light upon.

THIRD LINE OF THURLOW REPORT.

One day last week we heard a peculiar sound. Upon looking up the road we saw something approaching which looked like a ship in distress with its canvas at half mast and pretty well torn with the gale and storm. When it passed by, lo and behold, it was Levi again with another organ bound for some port. We hailed him, "Whither bound?" He replied, to John Scrivers, where he had sold it—a beautiful six octave piano, which makes 14 that he has sold on this line. He is a bustler. Mr. Reuben Ketchepaw has been visiting for several days in Prince Edward Co.

Mr. Jarin's of Madoc, made his sister Mrs. Bronson and family a short visit last week.

SCRIBBLER

TORONTO, March 1.—Among the thousands of orders which weekly pour into the offices of the Dodd's Medicine Co. Ltd., in this city, are many from Austria, Great Britain, Germany, and other countries. The curative properties of Dodd's Kidney Pills in cases of Bright's disease and concomitant ailments have been brought to the attention of friends abroad by patients who were cured here, they in turn have called the attention of their acquaintances to the marvellous effects resultant from the use of the pills until now there is a steady and growing demand for the specific and each foreign mail exhibits an increase in he orders.

A Good Thing is Always Desirable

So it is with the visits of Prof. Dorenwend to Belleville. On his last visit he was so busy that many ladies and gentlemen were unable to be attended to—he is therefore returning to give all who desire it another opportunity of procuring his art goods for the head. Prof. Dorenwend is undoubtedly one of the leaders of his profession on this continent—his skill in arranging the coverings for the head of either lady or gentleman is well known. His goods are acknowledged to be perfect and in every way true to nature, They are the best protection to the head besides giving a refined and youthful expression to the face. Call and examine these marvels of his art and have them fitted in order to judge of the effect. Consult him about your hair, he will (free of charge) give you advice as to the preservation of it. He will be at Hotel Quinte on Thursday 11 April 1895.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an ag of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of t b y to which it is applied.

French of Grafton, a fine baritone soloist will add a new feature to the concert and Mr. Dingle and Mr. Lalonde will also contribute to the pleasure of the evening, while the Decorating committee will dress the City Hall in gala attire for the occasion.

A plan that was broached about four years ago to establish an international intercollegiate cricket match will become a reality this summer, when the Canadians will play the Americans on the grounds of Harford college. It is proposed to make this event the forerunner of an annual meeting. The majority of the Canadian team will come from Trinity college, the remainder from the University of Toronto.

J. T. Andrews, of Montgomery, Ala., has invented a new and unique starting machine. The apparatus consists of a series of movable stalls, arranged in a line across the track. Mr. Andrews thinks his scheme will have the effect to send all the horses off on an even break. The apparatus will it is expected have a trial at the Nashville meeting.

WORST KIND OF DYSPEPSIA

GENTLEMEN,—I write to inform you that for years I had been troubled with Dyspepsia, and having tried other medicines which entirely failed, I at last found relief and cure in Burdock Blood Bitters, of which I took two bottles, the result being a perfect cure. Although only a young lad I had been troubled with Dyspepsia for four or five years, but I can say now that B.B.B. does its work faithfully in the worst kind of Dyspepsia, and has proved itself the only cure for me.

An English Opinion of the Late Premier

"The Brief" the acknowledged organ of the English Bar speaking in its March number of of Sir John Thompson as a lawer says:

Of the late Sir John Thompson it is said that during his legal career his head was as cool and steady as a surgeon's hand. In this spirit he did most of his legal work, and became well nigh invincible. He carried the Court with him far too often, and when a lawyer was making the best presentation possible of his case there was a curious suspense about the Court, which seemed to say: "We would admit those common sense propositions at once if it were not that Mr. Thompson is coming after you," as though Mr. Thompson might disturb the very foundations of this pillared universe. His appointment to the bench came not a day too soon, and on the Bench he gave a fine exhibition of his character. No untried junior or stumbling lawyer ever went from his presence mortified, if he could help it, but at the same time, he held the reins with an iron hand, and often pierced with his sword the swollen issues of insolence and conceit.

You've no Idea

How nicely Hood's Sarsaparilla hits the needs of the people who feel all tired out or run down from any cause. THURLOW Y. M. L. C.

Strong Organization of the Young Reformers of Thurlow

A large and representative gathering of the Reformers of the Township of Thurlow met in the Townhall, Canifton, yesterday afternoon for the purpose of organizing a Young Mens Liberal Club. It augers well for the club to have so many young men from all parts of the Township present, and anxious to undertake any work necessary to further the principles of Reform.

The tact displayed by them in the different discussions, shows that the older heads of the Township have something in the rear to fall back on and if necessary to place in the front.

ACTIVITY IN THE HARBOR

The steamer Merritt has been brough to her dock and is being thoroughly overhauled. She is at present being painted.

The schooner D. Freeman is also undergoing repairs and will be ready for the season's work as soon as navigation opens. She is being supplied with a new rudder stock. Capt. W. Farrington will have charge of her.

Ladies of West Belleville Methodist church will give a Sugar Social on the evening of Good Friday April 12th inst.

Naturally fair complexions would be the rule rather than the exception as unfortunately it is at present, if the ladies would wholly abandon cosmetics, and more generally keep the blood pure and vigorous by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only reliable blood-purifier.

Dandruff is due to an enfeebled state of the skin. Hall's Hair Renewer quickens the nutritive functions of the skin, healing and preventing dandruff.

As baldness makes one look prematurely old, so a full head of hair gives to mature life the appearance of youth. To secure this and prevent the former, Ayers's Hair Vigor is confidently recommended. Both ladies and gentlemen perfer it to any other dressing.

Much of life's misery is due to indigestion; for who can be happy with a pain in his stomach? As a corrective and strengthener of the ailementary organs, Ayer's Pills are invaluable, their use being attended always with marked benefit.

Goldsmith supplied the British Columbia salmon for the Mackenzie Bowell banquet, since then the demand has been great. Try it.

Are you all tired out, do you have that tired feeling or sick headache? You can be relieved of all these by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich it, every bodily function flags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, its contamination by bile, or other causes, serious maladies surely follow. HALDIMAND BATTLE ROYAL

McCarthy and Montague at the Nominations.

RIDING FULL OF TORY STUMPERS

Mr McCarthy States That the Remedial Order Was Passed to Knock Out Mr Laurier in Quebec—Decidedly Lively Nomination Proceedings

Cayuga, April 11.—Yesterday was an eventful one in the County of Haldimand. Everyone who pretended to be of any account took an early train for Cayuga, where the nomination to fill the vacancy in the House of Commons caused by the accession of Hon. Dr. Montague to the ministry was to be held. The two parties that will contest the seat did their level best to create the strongest possible impression in the eyes of the public.

The review of forces took place in the court room. The weather was splendid, the turnout of people large, the meeting was full of dash, variety and life. Everyone declared the nomination one of the best political meetings ever held in the county.

Dr. Montague's party came to Cayuga from Hagersville by the first train. Among the party were Hon. J. C. Patterson, Col. Tisdale, M.P., A. B. Ingram, M.P., Ed Cochrane, M.P., A. F. Campbell, ex-M.L.A., Dr. Roome, M.P., S. R. Hesson, ex-M.P., and a few others.

At 12 o'clock Mr. Robert E Walker of Caledonia took his seat in the court room and read the election writ. He then produced the nomination papers of the two candidates. That of Jeff McCarthy was signed by 25 names of Caledonia men. Dr. Montague's was signed by 61 from various parts of the county. Every available space in the chamber seemed to have its occupant. Towards 2 o'clock the candidates put in an appearance, amid loud cheering.

When Col. Tisdale took the chair he proceeded to outline the order of proceedings. It took fifteen or twenty minutes to settle on the order the speakers should take in addressing the audience. Dr. Montague suggested that D'Alton McCarthy should speak first for one hour; that he himself should follow for the same length of time, and that Mr. "Jeff" McCarthy should finish up in an hour.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy objected to this, and said he would decline to speak under those conditions.

Various compromises were suggested, and this program was finally adopted: D'Alton McCarthy one hour, Dr. Montague one hour and thirty minutes, "Jeff" McCarthy thirty minutes, D'Alton McCarthy fifteen minutes. This program was carried out except in regard to Dr. Montague, who limited his remarks to one hour.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy then took the floor. He said he had been called the leader of the new party. He didn't disclaim the position, and admitted that Mr. Jeffrey McCarthy had accepted the nomination under pressure from himself. Mr. McCarthy then proceeded to outline the events that led up to the passing of the Remedial Order by the Dominion Government. These facts are already so well known to the public that it would be superfluous to repeat them. Mr. McCarthy dwelt on the fact that the Conservatives and Reformers of Manitoba alike approved of the Greenway School bill of 1890. More than one-half of the Roman Catholic children in Ontario, where they can have Separate schools if they like, do not attend them. He quoted Mgr. Satolli, the Pope's representative in America, to show that that dignitary approves of Catholic children attending the Public schools where the Separate schools do not exist, or where they are inferior to the Public schools. The Roman Catholics of Manitoba numbered only 20,000 out of a population of 152,000 in 1891. Bearing such facts as these in mind, it was not unjust to insist upon one school system in Manitoba. When the Act of 1890 took effect nearly one-half of the then existing Separate schools of Manitoba embraced the public school system.

Coming down to the question as it now exists in Dominion politics, Mr. McCarthy said that all the law had determined was that the Dominion Government has authority to interfere in regard to the Act of 1890, just in the same way as it has authority to veto every act that comes up.

Hon. Mr. Montague: Oh, no!

Mr. McCarthy: It is just exactly the same as the Dominion Government has power to annul every provincial act, or to pardon criminals. This pretence that they are bound by their high sense of duty to interfere with the province of Manitoba is not going to go down. This matter must be dealt with as a purely political measure. Concluding his speech Mr. McCarthy said the Dominion Government had passed the Remedial Order merely to knock out Laurier in Quebec by diverting the trade policy, in which he was gaining headway, and by substituting for it this question, which would arouse the passions of the French habitants.

Hon. Dr. Montague was then called. It is usual, said the speaker, for a new minister to be elected by acclamation. When Hon. Mr. Harcourt, Provincial Treasurer, was made a minister I personally intervened and asked that the hon. gentleman should be elected by acclamation. I am glad to think that the Liberals of Haldimand now promise to return the same courtesy. But just at that moment my friend, Mr. McCarthy, personally intervenes and, very friendly as he is to me, he hunts in Hamilton for a candidate to oppose me. He hunts for a candidate in Toronto. I can give him the names if he wants them. He hunts through Haldimand for a candidate, but he finally found himself obliged to select a member of his own firm. I don't know whether he comes under compulsion or not. (Laughter.) I am pleased to see Mr. McCarthy come here at no expense to us, because that is a privilege we never enjoyed before. (Laughter.) We have had six or seven contests here and during them all we have never, Liberals or Conservatives, said one word to stir up religious rancor in this county. Mr. McCarthy has broken our record, and by his course this campaign is to be a religious campaign, as far as he is concerned. For my part, I refuse to make it a religious campaign. I am not appealing to religious prejudice, but I am here upon the justice of my cause, and I am prepared to submit that cause with the absolute evidence of its justice. I am here simply as having carried out the law as God has given the highest court in this realm judgment to see the law. (Cheers.)

The speaker then outlined the basis under which Confederation was brought about, and showed that a spirit of compromise was essential to secure a union of the many different elements that were united into one one country. We must, said he, stand by the tenets of Confederation. One of the obstacles that stood in the way of Confederation was the question of education. The Protestants of Quebec said, "We will not go into Confederation unless you establish our separate schools sufficiently firm, so that or the union they cannot possibly be disturbed by a Catholic Legislature." In order to protect the Protestant minority of Quebec, a clause was introduced into the B.N.A. Act, section 93, sub-section 3. Now the Catholic minority of Manitoba are appealing to us under the same clause that affords protection to the Protestant minority of Quebec, and yet Mr. McCarthy is here declaring we have sold ourselves to Rome. Mr. McCarthy never for one moment to-day dealt with the question as to whether there was an intention that the Roman Catholic minority under the constitution should have their rights as to Separate Schools formally fixed. I challenge him to tell us if that was not the intention when the agreement and compact was made. Was it not intended that that agreement should be carried out in good faith?

When the highest court in the realm declared that the minority of Manitoba hhad a grievance, that their rights ad hhad a grievance, that their rights had been interfered with, how were we to act? Were we to be governed by justice, or were we to be governed by political expediency? Is there a single man here who will say we should be governed by political expediency?

A voice—No.

Dr. Montagur—The Government has not decided this question according to the way Mr. McCarthy would have adopted. We were guided by the law, by the constitution, by justice as laid down by the constitution and the highest court of this Empire.

I disagree with Mr. McCarthy, when he says the Dominion Government has as much right to interfere. This is not a question of provincial rights. It is a case whether Manitoba shall be governed by her law and constitution or whether justice and right shall be thrown aside and political expediency put in its place. To make the matter clearer let us suppose that Manitoba had developed into a Catholic instead of a Protestant province. Suppose a Roman Catholic legislature abolished Protestant schools and compelled Protestant pupils to attend Catholic schools. Suppose this Protestant minority had appealed under the law and get their judgment from the highest court in the realm. What would you Protestants say then? What would you Orangemen say to us? What would D'Alton McCarthy say to us? (Applause.) It would be the opportunity of his life. He would be here roaring through this constituency, that we had sold ourselves to the Church of Rome and refused to listen to the grievances of the down-trodden Protestants of Manitoba. (Applause.) All I am contending for is that we give right and justice to our neighbors, as we would give it to ourselves. We should remember that the fight of the Roman Catholic minority in Manitoba may become the fight of the Protestant minority in Quebec. Suppose that to-morrow the Catholic Legislature of Quebec did away with the privileges that were given to the Protestants; suppose the Protestants of that province appealed to the Government at Ottawa under the 93rd section of the act, and suppose we refused to listen to their appeal, what would you Orangemen say? You would say once more that we were sold to the Church of Rome, just as D'Alton McCarthy has said here to-day. We are not sold to Rome. It is a question whether the constitution shall stand or not. It has been said by some that this will either defeat me or kill me in this campaign. I am prepared to drop in my tracks while defending the constitution of this country, the constitution that was given to us for Catholics and Protestants alike. (Applause.) And if I should fall by the way, I would ask that no other inscription be written on my slab than that I stood up for the right as God has given me light to see the right and justice of the constitution of this country. The only way to secure harmony among the people is to avoid tyranny. This school question could have been settled in Manitoba if the Government had gone about it in the right way. They could have arranged a common basis of agreement that would have been acceptable to all. But no people will have their rights stolen from them without resisting to the utmost. The way to perpetuate Separate schools and schisms is for men to preach dissension as Mr. McCarthy is doing. (Applause.)

The speaker said the Government didn't want to interfere. The Manitoba Legislature had adjourned for the purpose of considering the question of remedial legislation, and I am here as a member of the Government, said the doctor, to say that any possible settlement that they may make, that will be satisfactory to the Protestants and Catholics of the province, will be entirely satisfactory to the Government, of which I am a member, and we won't interfere one hair's bredth.

Mr. Jeffrey McCarthy spoke for 30 minutes, and laid particular stress on the argument that the question was not to be dealt with judicially. As Mr. Blake had admitted, it was a matter of political expediency, and that meant dealing with it in the best interests of the country as a whole. It was in the best interests of the country to have but one system of schools.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy had 15 minutes in which to reply to Dr. Montague.

The meeting came to an end at 5.30.

In Vercheres

Vercheres, P.Q., April 11.—The nomination proceedings did not develop anything very new. Mr. A. U. Archambault was the returning officer. Mr. F. X. Bisaillon, Q.C., was placed in nomination as the Conservative candidate, and Mr. C. A. Geoffrion, Q.C., as the Liberal standard-bearer. A very large number attended from Montreal, and among them were: Hon. J. A. Ouimet, Hon. P. E. Leblanc, Hon. Thomas Chase, Casgrain, A. Jeannotte, M.P., and Ald. Hurteau. The feature of the after meeting was the address of the Minister of Public Works, in which he reviewed the fiscal policy of the Government and their action on the Manitoba school question. He talked much on the same lines as in his former speeches. He made no statement as to whether legislation would be introduced this session.

An interesting incident took place. Mr. Ouimet urged the electors to vote in the presence of God and their conscience. Some laughed at this, and Mr. Ouimet, removing his hat, proceeded to rebuke them.

Mr. Geoffrion referred to Hon. Thomas McGreevy as "un gueux," a very offensive epithet. He promised that he would vote for remedial legislation which did justice to the Manitoba minority even if introduced by the Conservatives. However, he had not confidence in the Government, and blamed Mr. Ouimet for not resigning when Orangeman Bowell refused to disallow the Act of 1890.

Mr. Bisaillon's speech was well received.

McIsaac and Chisholm in Antigonish.

Antigonish, N.S., April 10.—Hon. Colin F. McIsaac, Liberal, and Joseph A. Chisholm, Conservative, were nominated to-day.

Quiet Campaign in Quebec West

Quebec, Que., April 10.—The nomination of the Quebec West candidates today was a very quiet affair, there being but the returning officer and his deputy present. Mr. R. R. Dobell, one of the candidates, is absent in England. Hon. Thomas McGreevy being interviewed expressed himself confident of success in spite of his experience in Parliament three years ago. Mr. McGreevy says he understands his late constituents very well and is working his election very quietly, hardly showing himself out of his residence.

To Oppose J. F. Lister, M.P.

Sarnia, Ont., April 10.—The Liberal-Conservative party of West Lambton held a convention here and nominated W. J. Hanna, barrister, to contest the riding in opposition to the present Reform member, J. F. Lister.

GULLY THE NEW SPEAKER

London, April 11.—The House of Commons met yesterday and proceeded at once to the election of a Speaker to succeed Right Hon. Arthur Wellesley Peel, resigned. Samuel Whitebread proposed the name of William Court Gully, Liberal, whose nomination was seconded by Augustine Birrell. Sir John Mowbray nominated, and John Lloyd Wharton seconded, the nomination of Sir Matthew White Ridley, Conservative.

Discussing the nominations for the Speakership, A. J. Balfour, leader of the Opposition, said that the Government's support of Mr. Gully was without precedent, and he believed dangerous to the future efficiency of the House. Mr. Gully, he said, was unknown as regards the work of the House, having neither taken part in its debates nor served on any of its committees.

Sir William Harcourt severely criticized Mr. Balfour's bad example in making the question of the election of a Speaker a matter of party discussion.

Mr. Gully was elected by a vote of 285 to 274 for Sir Matthew Ridley.

The Parnellites voted for Ridley.

Mr. Gully expressed his thanks to the House for his election and his appreciation of the high and great responsibility which they had conferred upon him.

The House adjourned until April 22, the interim being the Easter recess.

BALFOUR HELD BY FORCE OF ARMS.

Argentina Made an Effort to Take Him Off the Boat.

Buenos Ayres, April 10.—The steamer Tartar Prince, with the fugitive defrauder of the English building societies, Jabez Spencer Balfour, on board, is still detained here by low tide.

Yesterday the criminal judge of Salta sent officers on board the steamer to demand the surrender of Balfour. The captain of the ship communicated with the British Minister on the subject, and the latter officially laid the matter before the Foreign Minister.

The result was that the Foreign Minister sent a detachment of soldiers to prevent Balfour from re-landing.

Discrimination on British Railways.

London, April 11.—The Railway Commission, which on March 8 heard an appeal on the Traders' Association, with a view of preventing the London and Southwestern Railway Company from carrying American and Canadian products between Southampton and London, at cheaper rates than those charged for the transportation of home products, rendered its decision to-day. The commission decided in favor of the railway, except in the matter of its carrying hops, hay and fresh meats, in regard to which products the appeal of the Traders' Association was sustained.

Our Horses in Scotland.

London, April 10.—The Scotch newspapers comment very favorably on the report made by A. R. Angers, Canadian Minister of Agriculture, regarding the restriction upon the importation of Canadian cattle. Herbert Gardner, President of the Board of Agriculture, is understood to be studying rthe report. As yet he has given no sign of the effect it may have upon his policy.

In the last week several newspapers have directed attention to the growing favor in which Canadian horses are held here. The omnibus and van companies, however, report that they have found several cases of septic pneumonia among the horses recently brought over. They suggest that the vessels in which the horses are imported be more carefully disinfected.

Swore Himself In.

In his reminiscences of the Crimea in 1854, Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood tells a story of a fighting general who during a conflict was seen wherever bullets fell most thickly. When not visible his voice was heard encouraging his men with "a vocabulary borrowed from the army in Flanders," which Sir Evelyn says will not bear repetition. "Years after he was appointed to the Aldershot command and Her Majesty happened to ask, 'Has the new general yet taken up his command?' 'Yes, Your Majesty,' was the reply, 'he swore himself in yesterday.'"

A Slight Difference.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles ! Piles ! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelee's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal."

For Over Fifty Years

AN OLD AND WELL-TRIED REMEDY.—Mrs. Winslow's Sothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by Druggists in every part of the World. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

She (bitterly)—Before you married me I was an angel. I'll never be that again I suppose. He (sarcastically)—Well, I live in hopes.

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

The Pekin (China) Gazette, a journal that was 200 years old when the Normans conquered England, has the further distinction of having had 1,600 of its editors beheaded.

Beyond Dispute.

There is no better, safer or more pleasant cough remedy made than Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cures Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles.

After la Grippe obstinate coughs, lung trouble, etc., frequently follow. There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time effectual and pleasant, as Milburns Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry Hypophosphites, which is the largest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. THE RICHES OF THE N. P.

(The Montreal Witness.)

The National Policy has certainly not made the shareholders of the Canadian Pacific Railway rich, though with the promoters it is different. Sir William Van Horne had the assurance to declare years ago that free trade, by enabling the British Americans to dump goods wholesale into Canada, would injure the Canadian Pacific Company, which would be called upon to do a large part of the the dumping at it own rates. Protection saved the company. Within two years the company has, if we believe its bookkeeping, lost about five millions out of seven millions of its surplus. In view of the statement which the Canadian Pacific Railway Company had to make public of its affairs, it is little wonder that the government, already face to face with a deficit of probably five or six millions, should draw back from an appeal to the country on the National Policy.

THE TAY CANAL CHRONICLE

The Chronicle of the Tay Canal is not new but in these piping times of political peace, the thick veil of a great silence having fallen over the lately contorted face of the Dominion Cabinet, an occasional dash into the annals of the adjacent past is we think quite the proper thing. This chronicle then of the Tay, this story of the Lanark County bubble—financially a bubble but otherwise a very sure rock of expense—we will give to freshen the memories of such as care where there tax money goes, not forgetting the while that the Tay Canal is but a type of many undertakings similarly managed.

In 1882, when a vote for $50,000 was taken for the construction of this canal, which is a ditch 5½ feet deep running from the Rideau Canal six miles to the town of Perth, the home of the Hon John Haggart, the Minister of Railways and Canals said that the total cost of the work, exclusive of the cost of the land required, would be $132 660. In 1883 another vote was taken in Parliament, when Sir Charles Tupper stated that the canal would cost $240,000. In that year to justify the vote, and to reply to the protest of the Liberals, Mr. Haggart promised that smelting works would be erected at Perth, which would require this canal. In 1884 another $100,000 was asked, and very little more was heard of the work until the session of 1887, when an additional vote of $55,000 was asked. The Government then stated that expenditure to date had been $256,000, and that $65,000 would complete the work. In the session of 1888 there was voted an additional sum of $78,000, and in reply to some Opposition criticism the Government said that the work had been finished. The demand for money for "Haggart's Ditch" nevertheless continued, and in 1889 Parliament was asked for a further sum of $25,000 "to complete the work." At that time the total cost was $364 951, or 124-951 more than Sir Charles Tupper told the House in 1883 the total cost would be. In 1890 a further sum was asked of $11,000 for the Tay Canal, and then the Minister of Railways and Canals was again questioned by Sir Richard Cartwright, who made the following sarcastic remark:

to which Sir John Macdonald made the following reply:

"If it does not drain the county of Perth it drains the public treasury pretty well."

It was officially stated that this last vote of $11 000 was "to settle with the contractors and finish the Canal." Notwithstanding this, and during the same session, another sum of $20,000 was asked and voted, making the cost so far 440,613, or $200,000 more than the Government assured Parliament at the beginning the work would cost. In the estimates for 1891 92 there appeared a further vote of $30 000 to "complete" the Tay Canal.

This was found to be all the public money that could possibly be spent on this work without actually pouring it into the ditch from a dipper, so an extension of the Canal was undertaken and placed under contract, namely, an extension from the basin in the centre of the town of Perth to a place called Haggart's Mill, an extension not constructed in the public interest, and undertaken without the sanction of Parliament at a cost of $18,466.

Up to date the total sum expended on this work has been about $500,000 ($579,128), or four times the amount of the original estate.

The cost for maintainance for 1893 was $2386, the interest at 4 per cent. on the amount invested was $19045, making the cost of it to the country for the year $21,521. The revenue derived from it was $136 76. But Mr. Haggart stated in the House last session by reason of the ditch Perth was saved $1.50 on 20,000 ton of freight, which he reckons at $30,000. To substantiate his evidence he offered not the slightest jot of evidence. The tolls collected do not however bespeak a traffic of proportions that would induce the railway companies to reduce their rates.

Such however are the methods of the present administration.

POLITENESS OF THE MEXICANS.

"For manifesting a grave and imperturbable courtesy in every circumstance in life give me the Mexican people," said a civil engineer who lived long in the southwest. "Here is a case in point. A dozen years ago I was visiting Hermosillo, the capital of Sonora, and falling in with an old engineer comrade one afternoon we drank not a little tequilla. Tequilla or mescal, perhaps you know, is a clear white liquor distilled from the century plant, and possessing much of the taste and potency of Irish whiskey. There was a circus in town, and in the evening Johnson and I went up the street to see it. The performance did not greatly interest us and we left the show before it was half through and we started on our way down the stret to the hotel. The tequilla we had drunk was stil animating us and inspiring a spirit of adventure. As we came opposite the great house of Dr. Monteverde, one of the grandees of Sonora, we saw perched on a stone post at the entrance of the courtyard a white turkey; and here we stopped and fell to guessing the weight of the bird.

"At last to settle our differences of opinion we started into to catch the turkey. It ran into the courtyard and we followed. Upon the veranda at one side of the courtyard the household were sitting enjoying the evening coolness. At our unceremonious advent they raised not a word of protest, but only laughed as the turkey ran wildly around with Johnson and me in pursuit. After a long chase we caught the bird and approaching the group on the veranda tried to inform them that we should like a pair of scales to weigh it with. Neither Johnson or I had any idea what the Spanish word for scales was, and so we indicated the best we could by signs what we wanted. They showed much in the endeavor to catch our meaning and at last we made ourselves understood.

"'Si senor,' said the head of the house with perfect bonhomie, and calling a servant, gave him directions in Spanish. The servant departed and presently came back with a pair of scales, which were placed at our disposal. We weighed the turkey, set the bird at libetry, returned the scales with thanks, and declined the courteous invitation of the hospitable hidalgo that we should sit down and have a glass of wine, we lifted our hats and went on our way.

"Fancy, twd strangers invading private premises and going through such a madcap performance anywhere else you have ever heard of, and then tell me the Mexicans are not the politest people in the world."—Chicago Tribune.

The Iguana.

The iguana is a very little fellow, who belongs, like his cousins, the gecko and the chameleon, to a very big family. This family includes such large animals as alligators, crocodiles, lizards and many other strange creatures. The iguana has a long, slender body, tapering in a curious way into a point. He has a queer crest running from his head to the end of his tail, and his body is covered with small scales. A soft pouch or bag hangs from below his chin, but for what purpose it is used naturalists seem to be divided in opinion. Some iguanas live in trees, others dig themselves holes in the ground, and some varieties live upon the seashore and are quite fond of swimming about in the water. The eggs of the iguana are usually laid in the sand and are not hard like a hen's egg, but soft, like leather, and yellow in color. The iguana's tail, like that of most of his cousins, is very useful to him. He uses it for a weapon, slapping and inflicting severe wounds upon his enemies by means of its sharp notches. In the water he uses his tail like a snake, drawing his legs closely to his side and projecting himself along by means of the tails alone. The iguana is a fierce-looking little reptile when attacked. He raises himself upon his forelegs, looking very savage, but he is not really brave, and if you should come across an iguana nodding his head at you and trying to frighten you to death by wagging his tail just stamp your foot at him and he will quickly lower his crest and scurry off into his hole.—New York World.

A Napoleon Story.

In these days when everybody is reading and talking about Napoleon Bonaparte, it is interesting to hear the story current in England that at one time a vessel was undertaken to be built at Battersea by the renowned Johnson, the smuggler, for the purpose of liberating Bonaparte from the Island of St. Helena.

The vessel was about 90 feet long, and of the burden of 100 tons. It was built of half-inch plank. The grain of two such planks was placed in a vertical, and the other two in a horizontal position. These planks were so well caulked and cemented together that the thickness of the sides of the vessel did not exceed that of an ordinary washing-tub.

The masts were so contrived that they could be lowered to a level with the deck, and the whole vessel might be sunk in shoal water with the crew on board without danger. Ample means were provided for supplying the vessel with fresh air.

The plan was to sail up at night within a short distance of St. Helena, and sink the vessel until the next or some subsequent night, when Bonaparte would be enabled to make his escape to the beach, at which time the vessel was to be raised, Bonaparte to get on board and sail away in the dark.

It happened, however, that Bonaparte died before the vessel was quite finished, and it is a curious coincidence that she was to be coppered the very day the news of his death arrived.

Johnson was to have received £40,000 as soon as the vessel got into blue water, exclusive of the reward to be given in case the enterprise succeeded.—Philadelphia Times.

The White Ants of India.

"It is a remarkable fact, but one never sees wooden telegraph poles in India," said a well-known railroad man yesterday. "The white ants are so numerous in India that they would eat a telegraph pole in one night. On that account stone is used. The stone piles are from six to eight feet high. For ties inverted iron boxes are used, and, strange to say, they are so tempered that they do not warp in hot weather."

History of the Barometer.

In the Meteorologische Zeitschrift for December last, Prof. G. Hellmann gives a very interesting account of the invention of the barometer, which has now been in use 250 years. Torricelli, who died at the early age of 39 years, was too busily engaged in mathematical studies to publish an account of his discovery, but on June 11, 1644, he wrote a description of it to his friend Ricci. This letter, and Ricci's objections to the experiment, were published in 1663 by C. Dati, a friend of Torricelli's, and, as this work is now excedingly scarce, Prof. Hellmann has reprinted the correspondence, in the original Italian, in the above mentioned journal. Some of the paragraphs, says Nature, are noteworthy, especially those in which Torricelli states that it was not merely a question of producing a vacuum, but of making an instrument, which would indicate the changes of the atmosphere. The first continuous barometrical observations appear to have been made in France. In England they were first taken by Robert Boyle, about the year 1659, to whom we owe the invention of the word "barometer."—Scientific American.

The Chiropodist on Pointed Shoes.

"I am sorry to see a tendency on the part of men to forsake the sharp-pointed shoe that has held the fashion for so long and to return to the broader style of extremity," said a leading chiropodist. "The change, if it come about as I expect it will, will have a pretty substantial effect for the worse upon my business. Two-thirds of the patients who come to me suffering from painful callous growths on their feet are the victims of sharpened shoes. There is only one foot in a thousand that can wear such an article with anything like comfort, but the 999 who can't, stand the misery in order to make a pretty good pedal appearance. The contracted space allowed for the toes in such shoes crowds them together as in a vise, and circulation in them stops and corns and bunions are the result. No one should wear a shoe which does not allow the joints of the toes to work naturally, but it should always fit the foot closely and snugly. A loose shoe is as provocative of corns and other foot ailments as a tight and narrow one."—Washington Post.

SOFT TYPEWRITER KEYS.

Covers Which Spare the Fingers and Improve the Impression.

A boon to typewriters consists in an attachment for the keys of the machine which gives them a soft and yielding surface for the fingers to strike against. The idea is not entirely new, but it is only lately that a cushion for the keys meeting with very much favor among good operators has been introduced. The present device is of hollow rubber, three-sixteenths of an inch deep, with a flat surface, corresponding in size with that of the key itself, and having a metal base which attaches firmly to the key. The characters on each cushion are the same as those on the key to which it is fastened.

The advantage of resilient key tips compared with those of glass or celluloid used on most machines is plain; by their use the operator's fingers is not battered and chafed from continued manipulation of the keys, and the machine is not so liable to be racked, or the type thrown out of align. Moreover, characters which are small in size and often pierce the paper and injure the cylinder of the machine, are caused to strike with less force, and leave a more even impression on the written page.

For the use of those operators able to write without closely observing the keys, cushions are made on which the characters are omitted altogether. These serve the double purpose of relieving the eyes of the strain imposed upon them by frequently glancing at the keyboard, and of insuring the machine against being tampered with by persons not thoroughly familiar with its use. For the further benefit of the eyes rubber of any desired color is used in making these tips, and the metal base may be coated either with nickel or black enamel. The space-bar of the typewriter is also provided with a cushion of the same height and elasticity as that of the keys.—New York Sun.

The beautiful billionairess was sad. Of course this sounds like a paradox, for no one can exactly understand how billionairess can be otherwise than supremely, divinely, everlastingly happy. But the fact remains nevertheless she was miserable.

She sat by the lace curtained window her rosy, dimpled feet upon a perfumed ottoman embroidered with thousand dollar hens' egg diamonds, impatiently awaiting her maid, who was bringing up from the cuisine an omelet of nightingales' eggs and a mint julep made of the whole Philadelphia mint. This was only her breakfast. You can judge from that what her dinner cost!

"You are disconsolate this morning, mam'zelle?" ventured the maid removing the society sheet of the morning paper, especially printed for her on watered silk in otar of roses ink, and replacing it with the delicate repast served in pearl-studded gold dishes.

The beautiful billionairess raised her languid eyelids and heaved a deep patchouli scented sigh that fairly peeled the million dollar frescoes off the wall. "Yes, I am sad," she moaned, "very sad," and she took a $40,000 sip of the julep as a bracer.

"Why so?" persisted the maid, who always spoke to her mistress in one of 31 earthly or 200 heavenly dialects of Cupid. "Has not the duke been as persistent in his proposal as ever?"

"More so. I have to loan him $3,000,000 a day to get rid of him."

"Aren't your new Worth gowns masterpieces of extravagance?"

"Marvels! That extra 1½ bushels of rubies on my ball gown train retards my waltzing a little, but——"

"Do you long for Paris and fear the rough voyage?"

"Oh, dear, no! I've arranged with the Standard Oil Company to pour 10,000,000 gallons of oil per hour into the ocean during the time I am crossing to grease the track, you know——"

"What, then, can be the matter which so oppresses you?"

"Only to think," replied the beautiful billionairess, taking up the watered silk newspaper once more, "for five years I have been reported engaged to 33 men, on an average weekly, including every eligible bachelor or widower of both hemispheres, from a Zulu chief to the czar of Russia. This morning—ah, this morning, I am miserable! I have toiled through 69 columns of solid nonpareil and nary a single engagement. It is awful!"

"Ah, mam'zelle, you cannot think that your popularity is on the wane. That is impossible!"

"Alas, I fear it—either that or else the society editors have died at their posts in faithful efforts to marry me off."

"No; I have it. Eureka!"

The fair one flushed a royal flush worthy to break the bank at Monte Carlo. "Quick, tell me," she cried, "why am I slighted thus?"

"They have exhausted the whole international directory!"

"Bravo!" exlaimed the other, springing to her feet. "Then I must consider their silence as the greatest compliment of my life. Marie, you are a petticoated Daniel. Your salary is raised $2,000 a minute. Swear that you will never leave me. I shall marry his dukelets, get you to doctor up a divorce and we will be the most popular women in the world. Go below and order us two golden buck made of limberger cheese and a jailbird's egg, and four fingers each of B.C. 450 Cyprian from the wine cellars of Pericles, worth $7,000 a drop and we'll toast society editors in blocks of five. Ah, you are a jewel, Marie, a veritable jewel!"—New York World.

McCARTHY'S POOR PROSPECTS.

Caledonia Station, Ont., April 10.—What your readers are perhaps most anxious to learn in regard to the Haldimand contest is as to the strength and prospects of the McCarthy party. McCarthy's headquarters are located here, with Organizer Fee in charge of affairs. The party are, of course, without organization of any kind, except what they have been able to call into existence within the past few days. It is quite evident that D'Alton McCarthy is running this campaign as a purely personal affair. The same personal animus that brought him out against Sir John Thompson has induced him to cross swords with Dr. Montague. McCarthy has no better following now than he has had all along. As a matter of fact he seems to be weaker, for as yet there is no sign of even Col. O'Brien coming on the scene to help him. Beyond Mr. Armour and the candidate Mr. McCarthy has pitchforked into the constituency, no public man who is known outside of his own township is associated with him in the campaign.

Yet Mr. McCarthy is exceedingly anxious to score a victory, and with that end in view he has set in motion the machinery at his command.

This machinery consists of a score or more of law students and law clerks from Toronto, who are here occupying almost every available room in the hotels. What they have done up to date is not very evident, but Organizer Fee is getting considerable literature printed at the local printing offices, and it is likely Mr. McCarthy's young men will in a day or two be despatched through the country, each with a bundle of cards and posters on his arm.

The young men will also speak in the various township school houses. Five meetings, for instance, have been advertised for Friday night, and the same kind of thing will be kept up till polling day.

Mr. McCarthy is apparently making this the effort of his life. It is the crisis of his political existence, but the fact that he can summon no public men of influence to assist him; that he cannot secure a local candidate to oppose Dr. Montague; that he has no local organization; shows how weak he really is, and how slim are his prospects of success.

No one here seriously believes that McCarthy's candidate will poll more than a respectable vote. There is certainly no expectation that he will be elected.

The friends of Dr. Montague, on the other hand, are confident of victory, and the expected majority reaches away up in the hundreds. The meeting that was held at Hagersville to-night is said to have been a splendid success. Long before the advertised hour the opera house was filled with supporters of Dr. Montague, and many were unable to get into the building.

The Imperial Government Not Asked—The Nicaraguan Canal—Vote of Thanks to Speaker Peel.

London, April 9.—In the House of Commons to-day, Mr. Sydney Buxton, Under Colonial Secretary, announced that one-half of the troops in British Honduras would be withdrawn on April 30, and the remainder at the end of July.

Sir Edward Grey, replying to a question by Sir Thomas Esmonde, said that the Republic of Hawaii had been recognized by Great Britain.

Sir William Harcourt moved a vote of thanks to the retiring Speaker, Right Hon. Arthur Wellesley Peel. The motion was seconded by Mr. A. J. Balfour, the Conservative leader, and supported in eulogistic speeches by Mr. Joseph Chamberlain and Mr. Justin McCarthy, and the House passed it by acclamation.

Sir Edward Grey, in replying to a question by Sir Edward Harlan, said the Government had not sent a commission to co-operate with the United States commissioners in regard to the Nicaragua Canal, nor would they do so unless they were invited by the Washington Government. The Government, he said, was fully sensible of the importance of the canal to British shipping and would take measures in the event of the completion of the waterway to secure as favorable treatment for Great Britain as was accorded to other nations.

Sir Edward Grey, replying to an interrogation by Sir George Baden-Powell, said the Government had received no proposal that they advance money to pay damages awarded to sealers under the award of the Paris Tribunal, pending the settlement of these claims by the United States.

Russian Oil Output Increasing.

London, April 10.—A despatch to The Daily News from Odessa says that the Ministerial Department of Trade and Manufactures recently sent an envoy to Paris to confer with delegates of the Standard Oil Company, which had made overtures to Russia looking to an arrangement to obviate ruinous competition. Nothing definite was decided upon, and now it is stated that Russia's hesitancy arises from reports that the American oil wells show signs of exhaustion, while the Caucasian wells increase both in number and output.

Derailed by a Washout.

Bradford, Pa., April 9.—A bad wreck occurred on the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg Railroad early this morning between Punxsutawney and Big Run. The official account of the accident received from the company is that the train struck a washout and left the rails, piling up the locomotive and 18 empty gondolas promiscuously. Engineer Ed. C. Taylor and Fireman Morris Shea were buried under the wreck and killed. The conductor escaped uninjured.

ANOTHER SEALERY DISPUTE

Ottawa Opposes a Behring Sea Convention.

WILL STICK TO THE PARIS AWARD

Order in Council Passed Objecting to the International Convention as Prohibition of Pelagic Sealing Would Ruin the Industry for Canada.

Ottawa, April 10.—As Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Hon. John Costigan has succeeded to the perplexities of the Behring Sea question at, perhaps, the most critical juncture in the negotiations, which Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper carried on with varied success from the decision of the Paris Arbitration to the recent protest against a renewal of the regulations for the present season. Mr. Costigan takes up the controversy upon an entirely new issue. For no sooner is the regulation protest despatched on its way to England than the Foreign Office forwards for the consideration of the Canadian Government the proposal of President Cleveland for the cessation practically of all sealing operations in the North Pacific Ocean. This is the phase of the question with which the new Minister of Marine is confronted.

Briefly put, the United States proposes joint action on the part of Great Britain, the United States, Russia and Japan to protect the seal herds from extinction. Pending enquiries by a commission to that end it is suggested that sealing in Behring Sea be prohibited, and the Paris regulations as to close season and the inhibition of firearms be extended over the entire waters north of the 35th parallel of latitude.

An Order-in-Council has just been passed embodying Canada's reply to those proposals. The document is now on its way to England, and in course of time will be sent to Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British Ambassador at Washington, for transmission to the Government of the United States.

The Minister of Marine, when asked about it, declined to recite even the leading features of this state document. From other sources, however, chiefly from a conversation with a prominent officer of the department, what may be regarded as the departmental view was ascertained.

"It is plain to me," said the gentleman in question, "that nothing short of the prohibition of pelagic sealing will satisfy the United States, and that is simply carrying out the idea of a proprietary interest in the seal herds—a contention which was wholly set aside by the finding of the Paris award, as it would confine operations to the islands which are leased by the United States.

"When a set of regulations was established by that tribunal, the United States Government was in a tremendous flurry to have them enforced. Great Britain was blamed for the slight delay that took place in bringing them into effect by Imperial enactment, although, by the way, our neighbor has exhibited far less alacrity in carrying out its own obligations to compensate us for the illegal seizure of British ships and imprisonment of their crews. However, the cry was, 'Give us the regulations,' for it was believed that these would put a stop to the Canadian sealing business.

"Well, the regulations prescribed by the award were given effect to by legislation that even increased their stringency. They were enforced during the season of 1894, and what was the result? The catch of seals by pelagic hunters that first year of the Paris regulations was about 95,000—the largest in the history of the industry. Our neighbors awoke to the fact that the enforcement of the regulations did not mean death to pelagic sealing, and now they are clamoring for their rejection altogether. You must bear in mind that two-thirds of the catch of 1894 were fished in Japanese and Russian waters, which now the United States Government proposes should be placed under restriction. As for Behring Sea, the proposal is to prohibit sealing entirely—no, not entirely, for there is no suggestion of a stoppage of the slaughter on the islands—but to forbid pelagic sealing.

"Now," continued my informant, "observe what this means. At great expense, and by summoning to the settlement of an international dispute one of the most august tribunals of modern times, a decision was reached, among others, upon the measures necessary for the preservation of seal life. I contend that that question should never have been submitted at all with the question of right in controversy. However, it was included among the subjects for adjudication and was settled favorably to the contentions of the United States, at least so it was thought, and Great Britain also accepted the verdict. But now comes from the United States the astounding proposal that we ignore that decision altogether and resort to other measures than those imposed by the tribunal. Could any proposition be conceived more subversive of the principle of modern civilization embodied in the august procedure of international arbitration? It seems to me that simple courtesy to the several nations represented on that tribunal demands a more dignified treatment of its decisions.

"Hear Mr. Phelps' opinion upon this point: 'There can be no doubt that these recommendations are judicious and that a compliance with them would be most beneficial to the industry. They are made in the light of much evidence and unwearied investigation. A proper respect for the tribunal which has at great personal inconvenience rendered us so great a service would seem to require that these suggestions should be attended to.'

"And so I still say," added the speaker, with some earnestness, "after a lapse of two years, let us pay that proper respect to the tribunal of loyalty, abiding the issue of its deliberations. Provision was made in the award for the revision or discontinuance of the regulations at the end of five years, if so desired. We are now in the second year of that period, and in consideration of the very facts set forth by Mr. Phelps, I think we should at least endure the conditions for the remainder of the term."

"The department, I gather, believes that Canada could not fail to get the worst of any international enactment regarding seal catching made by a convention respecting the four nations named in President Cleveland's proposal. Great Britain," the official said, "is the only nation whose citizens are necessarily confined to sealing in the open seas. Themselves, possessed of territorial rights which would enable their people to take seals on the breeding grounds, Russia and Japan would probably be only too glad to join the United States in putting an end to pelagic sealing."

The Department of Trade and Commerce has received advices of the arrival at Vancouver of the C.P.R. steamer Empress of Japan, bringing letters warning the quarantine officer at British Columbia quarantine station of an outbreak of genuine cholera in Southern Japan, with 10 deaths in 12 days, at the naval station of Moji. The disease was imported from China, and complaint is made that, while cholera is appearing at Hong Kong, an effort is being made to conceal the fact.

Everybody is talking to-day of the success of the banquet to the Newfoundland delegates last evening. Everybody is commending the civic committee for the excellent manner in which the details were carried out. While nothing was said as to the progress of negotiations the inference is drawn from the speeches that the entrance of the island into the Dominion is practically assured. It is simply a question of terms. This afternoon the eight gentlemen who are discussing the knotty problems involved in the proposed admission of the new province were again in conference, and were joined by His Excellency the Governor-General.

Reports received at the Fisheries Department from different hatcheries show that the work of hatching earlier-hatching varieties has been very successful. A splendid collection of eggs was obtained in the fall, and these have been carefully handled and hatched out earlier than usual, and the work of distributing the young fish is now in progress. The quantity of fry is larger than that of last year. It is worthy of remark that Americans had to come to Canada for supplies of eggs, and even where they have not asked permission to take eggs it is known that they have been procured in Canadian waters.

Inquiry at the Department of Trade and Commerce elicited the information that no intimation has been received from France as to the interpretation which that country puts upon the words "third power," in the Franco-Canadian treaty. As stated some days ago the British view has been received, and this being satisfactory to Canada the Government look to it that Canadian interests will be protected should the treaty go into effect and France raise the question as to what the words really mean.

An order in council has been passed awarding a binocular glass to Capt. J. J. Mehegan of the British sloop Glenwood and a gold watch to first mate J. E. Tripp of the same vessel for their gallant and courageous conduct in rescuing the shipwrecked crew of the schooner St. John of St. John, which was cast ashore in September last near Cape Hatteras.

Capt. Howard has reported to the Fisheries Department that undersized lobsters are being exported from Yarmouth. Hon. Mr. Costigan has given instructions to his officers to see that the law is strictly enforced.

A REPLY TO SENATOR MORGAN.

Earl Kimberley Will Analyze the Senator's Statements in the Commons.

London, April 11.—Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs Earl Kimberley will probaly lay before the House of Commons an elaborate reply to Senator Morgan's speech on the Behring Sea question. The reply is an analysis of Mr. Morgan's statements, prepared by Sir Julian Pauncefote, and shows that the statements are erroneous in many particulars, and unjust in their conclusions. It appears, it is said, that Mr. Morgan's statement that interest was added is erroneous, as no interest was included. It also shows that Mr. Morgan erred in stating that fictitious values had been put on some of the vessels and cargoes seized. The total amount is declared to be only about one-half of a just and reasonable allowance, and to have been agreed to as a compromise against the wish of the Canadian masters, although they firmly agreed to a reduction of their claims. The purpose of presenting the subject to Parliament is mainly to correct alleged misapprehensions created by Mr. Morgan's statements in the American Congress.

THE STAMP COUNTERFEITERS.

Mrs. Mack, Bookkeeper for the Novelty Co. of Hamilton, Arrested at the Instance of U. S. Officers.

Hamilton, April 10.—The Canadian Novelty and Supply Company, mentioned in connection with the stamp counterfeiting scheme, had desk room at 22 King William-street, occupied by Arthur S. Fisher, painter, and not in Mr. Dunham's, 32 King William-street, as stated yesterday. Mrs. Mack, described as a shrewd businesslike woman with a sealed mouth, acted as bookkeeper for George Morrison, who posed as the manager of the Novelty Company, and whose ostensible business was dealing in bankrupt stocks. Mrs. Mack came to Hamilton from New York. She says positively she never knew Morrison before she started working for him, and her instructions were that all she had to do was to receive mail, enclose it again in other envelopes and forward it to an address given to her by Mr. Morrison. Her wages were paid in advance, and it was none of her business what her employer did. It looks as if Hamilton has been made the distributing point for mail matter only in the scheme, and the probability is that Morrison has worked the stamp end of it in Buffalo. A large quantity of mail matter was received at the Hamilton office, principally from Chicago.

Two detectives who are connected with the Secret Service Bureau at Washington are in the city and, after learning all the facts in possession of the local authorities, they interviewed the woman, Mrs. Mack, at the office of the Canadian Novelty Supply Company. Mrs. Mack was not very communicative, and the American officers are quite sure that she had a full knowledge of Morrison's swindling scheme before coming to Hamilton. She still refuses to give the present address of the man who employed her and, as she persisted in her stubborn attitude, she was arrested.

A WINNIPEG SCHOOL BURNED.

Together With the Nucleus of the Manitoba Natural History Museum

Winnipeg, Man., April 10.—The Mulvey School, one of Winnipeg's best school buildings, was totally destroyed by fire early this morning. The Provincial Government's natural history collection, which was to have been the nucleus of a Manitoba museum, was stored in an upper flat, and was entirely destroyed. Loss is nearly $50,000, with only $17,000 insurance. Several suspicious circumstances indicate that the fire was of incendiary origin.

Yesterday at the Conservative convention George H. Bradbury of Ottawa, who has been planning for a year or more to capture the nomination, was turned down in favor of Hugh Armstrong. Now Bradbury declares he will run any way, and the Conservatives are in a quandary.

Slang of the Turf.

The stranger within the gates of a race track, if he enters the betting-ring and hears the language about him, would surely imagine that he was in a strange land. The slang of the turf is peculiar enough to the initiated.

The commonest terms, that is, the ones heard most frequently, are "dead ones" and lobster. Of course every race track frequenter knows the words are synonymous, and mean a horse in a race whose jockey does not try to win. "Dope" is a word of double meaning, signifying in one aplication an injection used to accelerate a horse's speed. Again, it means a form of book, or chart, showing the running of the horses. "Phony" tickets are bogus tickets of no value, usually written by at out for the purpose of making some "sucker" believe the tout is betting his own money on a horse. The "sucker," of course, is the green hand at the track, and the display of a ticket reading $500 or $500 usually convinces him that the man who would bet so heavily must "know something."

To "know something" is to have inside information that a certain horse is to be "shooe'd in," which means that that horse is the only one in the race which is trying to win. The "sucker," who nearly always is a very respectable gentleman, who wouldn't do a dishonest thing for the world, almost invariably gives the tout the money to bet on the "good thing," and thereby "skin" the unsuspecting bookmaker out of a little sure money. To "do business," or "stop" a horse, is to prevail upon a jockey to pull him, and thereby prevent him from winning.

Thus it goes on, ad infinitum. There is not a single feature of a race track, of bookmaking, or of management which is not described in some slang phrase, which to the race track devotee means everything, and to the ordinary citizen nothing.—St. Louis Republic.

Chinese Virtuosos.

You must know that the Chinese are far more commonly virtuosos than we; and a Chinese collector is a real connoisseur. He had no idea of beauty, except to eye it suspiciously, as probably of Japanese or other foreign origin; all he worships is age; and—mark this most curious trait—antiques of his own country only. What a conversatism to boast of this! The Chinese scholar and virtuoso has the profoundest admiration for his own country's ancient literature and art. He will not deign to have anything foreign or new on his shelves. I think this is something of a rebuke to us, hunting for relics of every country but our own. It puts us on the stand of nouveaux riches.

Don't think that a Chinaman spends nothing on his collection. He will outbid the vulgarest millionaire in the world for a genuine old bronze or porcelain. His collection is not built up in a day by wholesale commissions given to dealers. His is bought piece by piece as opportunity and finances allow. The collection made by a single man's lifetime is nothing. You will see pieces in his catalogue bought by father and grandfather and remote ancestors. They are heirlooms. They are passed down from father to son. They are the mark of education and noble birth, because the only nobility there is education and noble rank, and noble birth is being the descendants of ancestors who have held office and taken degrees. An heirloom of a choice bit of porcelain proves education and wealth in the purchaser. Does this not make you feel rather new with your twopenny fans and plates on the wall?—Temple Bar.

How to be Pretty, Though Cold.

"How to be pretty, though cold" is a difficult problem for the unfortunate woman who cannot afford furs of some description in this season when fur garments are made so fascinatingly becoming, with their wide, soft collars and so expensive in their exaggerated fullness. Sealskin is the one fur which is continually in fashion, and it is so distinctly becoming to every face and complexion that it will never lose its popularity. It it not quite so aristocratic as the gray haired Russian sable, but that is a matter of rarity and price rather than a question of beauty. Chinchilla is one of the season's favorites, and for the woman with a clear pink and white complexion there can be nothing prettier.

A beautiful evening cloak is made of dark green bengaline, with a lining and full cape of chinchilla. For those who cannot afford the larger garments there are Eton coats of seal and Persian lamb, with moire velvet sleeves. These are made with wide revers and high collar, either single or double breasted, and are very chic little garments for young ladies especially, and still cheaper are the collarettes, miniature capes and fur boas, which were never so pretty as they are now, and they answer every purpose for becoming effect.—Philadelphia Press.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. LADIES AUXILIARY OF THE Y M C A

The Annual Meeting was Largely Attended and the Reports Were Encouraging

The annual meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. was held in the Association parlor Tuesday afternoon and was attended by thirty five or forty ladies. A spirit of encouraging enthusiasm prevailed and the reports and proceedings were such as to foster it.

The Secretary in her report said:

"One more year in the life of the Woman's Auxiliary has gone with all its joys, its sorrows, its privileges and its responsibilities. In looking over the past we have much for which to thank God and take courage. We have tried to help in the work of the Association by assuming financial responsibilities and by assisting upon different social occasions. We have been greatly encouraged by the sympathy and co-operation of those to whom we have appealed, and thanks are herein rendered to each and all who have so generously aided us during the year. In comparing our meetings now, with those at the beginning of the year, one bright feature we notice, is that the monthly meetings of the auxiliary are more largely attended, thus showing a growing interest in the grand work of the Y. M. C. A.

We cannot close our report without referring to the great need there is of having a piano in the Y. M. C. A. parlor. "Music hath charms," and we believe by this means, many more young men might be won for Christ. We are grateful for the liberal response we have already had and suggest that all who are interested in young men and are anxious for their best welfare will give as liberal a donation as possible to any of the officers of the auxiliary."

These officers were elected: President, Mrs. Geo. Flowers; Vice President, Mrs. Furnival; Secy., Miss A. Ketchon; Treas., Miss Gibson. The receipts of the year just ended were $194. During the past two weeks they have collected for the current year $90 and the Y's. of the W. C. T. U. donated them $10. A vote of thanks to the Y's. was passed.

THE MAN AND THE MOOSE

A Startling Adventure in Muskoka

(Witness)

A correspondent writing from Mecunoma, Muskoka, gives an interesting account of an adventure which he had with a moose a few weeks ago, while employed in making a toboggan trail through one of the pine forests in that section of the country. While engaged at work he came across a moose-yard, and on looking round saw one of the 'giants of the forest' about fifty yards distant. The story of his encounter is, perhaps, best told in the correspondent's own words.

'After a moment,' he writes, 'the moose turned and walked behind a hill, which though not high, was steep. I ran to the top with all speed, hoping to get a view of the lordly creature as he made his way through the bush. I could not see him at first, but on looking down the steep incline there he was, not ten yards away. He turned to make off, but striking his ribs against the projecting limb of a small hemlock he was thrown down and round the tree, and as he rose he faced me. It was now my turn to run, for the moose charged at me with erected mane, expressing his rage by a fierce bellow. In turning I stumbled, the ground being very uneven, and his feet nearly came down on me as I dodged among some trees. I tried to strike with my hatchet, the only weapon I had, but did not succeed in injuring my pursuer. With some difficulty I at last got out into the deep snow, where my snow shoes were of more use to me. The moose still pursued me, roaring at intervals; and one who has not heard a moose roar can form but little idea of the terrible bellowing noise. After several attempts to strike me with his front feet, he balked, and stood about twenty yards away pawing and roaring. I eagerly seized this opportunity to climb a tree, and soon after the animal turned and made off. Of all the adventures I have had in the bush—and they number a few—the one I have just related came the nearest to being my death.'

He has not yet seen Belleville who has not viewed it from the top of the city hall tower. To get there is something of a feat especially on the occasion of the first ascent. The first part of the climb is by a series of orthodox stairways but the latter is accomplished with about the same trepidation that you scale a barbed wire fence on a dark night.

If your appearance will warrant the conclusion that you do not purpose meddling with the city time, a polite request from Pat Meagher will always secure you his lean bunch of keys, the biggest of which will open for you the tower door. If you have ladies with you, you may expect to scale the first two or three flights of stairs as if some urchin below had given the alarm of fire. In the third story tower room you stop to catch your breath and survey the iron pendulum of our "Big Ben" as it dangles monotonously from the ceiling.

Somewhat sobered by the wind-wasting first rush and the approach to the heart of time, the next flight is climbed sedately and you find the next flat for the most part occupied by a glassed-off compartment from which comes the sonorous tick, tick of the city's time measuring machine. Up another short stair and you stand at the top of the brick work of the tower and you are in the presence of "Big Ben."

From here you can get a very pleasant view through the slatted apertures, but the ambitious tarry here only a moment, to inscribe their names on the bell, then commence the ascent through rafter-crowded darkness to the foot of the flag staff. The first resting place is on a level with the faces of the clock and after that you feel your way up improvised ladders, made by nailing crosspieces to rafters, until you reach a plank about four feet from the roof, crawl across it and with your head lift the dark sky-light; lift yourself from darkness into light, sit down on the flag-staff support and persuade yourself that you are not dizzy.

All about you a hundred feet below is the city with its trees, the tops of which are now just tinged with red, showing the first dawn of spring. Away to the north and west the landscape is bounded by a dark blue line of rolling mountains, to the south rise the up lands of Prince Edward County. The spirit of freedom finds relief in the east where the bright sheen of the bay with its jutting points and deep indentions stretches away to meet the horizon line on the level.

The whole scene is one that none should miss; the moving crowd on Front street, the rolling brown flood of the Moira loosing itself in the harbor, the harbor, the bay, the bridge, the home-dotted farmlands of Prince Edward, and Belleville's thousand homes as the centre of all the great land basin is a sight worth a day's journey.

The Inquest

The coroner's inquest regarding the alleged suicide of Mrs. David Gerow is being held in Rossmore school house this afternoon. A full report later.

A Miniature Landslide

A resident of Picton who is spending a few days in the city reports that a land slide on a small scale occurred a few days ago on the bank of the Bay of Quinte a few miles from Deseronto. The slide was caused by the thawing and consequent loosening of the ground, and and an area probably 50 yards square slipped into the bay. Trees having a diameter of 18 inches were torn up by the roots and carried into the water with other debris.

First Trip on Saturday

The frost of last night hardened the surface of the harbor ice somewhat and the opening of navigation at this port is retarded by a couple of days. There was a small crowd of curious citizens at Folger's dock this morning in consequence of a rumor that the Perrepont would endeavor to break her way across to the Island. B. W. Folger says that the attempt will not be made until Saturday afternoon.—News.

An Architect's Suit

The following item is taking the "Canadian Engineer: "H. Gillen, architect of Kingston, Ont. undertook to do the architectural work on a $23,000 building the Hotel Quinte. Belleville, for $1,000. McClure's Magazine for April contains the first of a series of illustrated papers relating the most dramatic chapters in the history of the Tammany Society, from its foundation in 1789 down through the startling investigations of the Lexow committee. The author of the papers is E. J. Edwards, who, as "Holland" of the Philadelphia Press, has shown himself to be almost without a rival in his intimate acquaintance with political affairs. An account of the remarkable frauds that have been practiced on the Bank of England and of the grave crises through which it has passed, along with a description of the bank and of its methods of business appear, with numerous pictures, in McClure's Magazine for April,

Trenton Notes

Things in town are about the same. They were quieting down some until the Intelligencer arrived here last Friday when tax payer's letter appeared. Then the ripple of excitement commenced again, everyone asking what does this all mean, who is the writer and will the council act and have the matter of the accounts investigated, or will the citizens ask for an investigation themselves? I think the latter is the only way the truth will come out, which we all want to see in the face of the waddie letter—and the sooner the better for the matter must not be allowed to drop in this way.

The times are hard here just now after the long winter and a good deal of poverty in town the tax collector is grumbling, he says it is very hard to gather in the taxes people are too poor to pay just now. We notice he has changed his location to town hall in our old chief's office. His shingle was hanging out there to-day. He moves about very often and it is hard to find him but we all hope Henry wont move out of town. If he does we may have no taxes to pay. One Miller was appointed street foreman the other night by the council at a $1.00 per day. Getting things down fine. I suppose he will have to furnish his own tools.

The Sim Fax Concert Company played her last night under the auspices of the A. O. U. W. They gave a good entertainment but the Lodge I hear did not get much profit out of the arrangement.

The river is opening out very steady this year but I dont think the ice will block the river we are glad to hear Mrs. Dr. McKimyee is a good deal better to-day

I hear our late chief constable leaves here for Toronto some day this week. Success attend you chief we are sorry to lose you.

We hear there is going to be a petition before the council shortly to repeal the dog by-law.

Law surely the Council cannot repeal the dog by-law and lose $250 of the town revenue in face of there late proceedings. Who is the father of the petition? Echo answers a man living on the Belleville Road who keeps a number of dogs. Watch them chief, and make them all pay, all eyes are on you.

They are clearing the ice from the skating rink. No more hockey this year. The usual sanitary notices are up and we hope the sanitary inspector will enforce the sanitary law this year after the long winter.

The usual number of cows are roaming our streets again. Now is the time to attend to them. If a number get fined it would have a good effect just now for when the lawns and ground is soft in the spring they do the most damage. People living in the East Trenton want a little petition in this line. The night constable lives over with us now and he, no doubt, will assist in this matter to carry out this by-law.

Foxboro Items

Mr. Gardiner, our watchmaker, is going to leave for Montreal next week where he has secured a situation as cheese-maker, he says if all is well he will return here in the fall again.

A sugar social was held in the North Church on Friday evening last which was a success financially about $30.00 taken at the door.

A surprise party met at the residence of Mr. B. Fosters on Tuesday evening of this week to celebrate the birthday of Miss Lillie Foster. About twenty of the Foxboro people were present and enjoyed a good time. Several speeches were made, suitable for the occasion.

The Foxboro Epworth League is increasing in members, about twenty having joined in two weeks. The revival services has closed with about one hundred added to the churches.

We expect one of the best concerts of the season to be held here in South Church on Monday evening next under the direction of Miss Lillie Foster. Programme—part first by a class of children who have been under Miss Foster's training for some time. Part Second by Belleville's best talent.

Dr. Faulkiner is preparing to build a shop to go into the selling of farm implements.

If the Belleville Sun told the truth we expect soon to see a stuffed tiger.

TORONTO MPP'S IN BAD ODOR

"They Need Never Show Their Noses in Toronto Again."

THE SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES

Mr. Whitney Wants the Ontario School System "Broadened," But Does Not Explain What He Means—Assessment of Five Acre Plots as Farm Lands.

Toronto, April 11.—The four Conservative members for the city of Toronto are in a sweet mess. The mayor of the city vows vengeance. He says that neither Crawford, Ryerson nor Howland need ever ask the people to elect them again. "They need never show their noses in Toronto again," were His Worship's exact words. The whole row is over Mr. Awrey's bill with reference to the assessment of vacant lands in cities, towns and villages, The bill was considered by the Municipal Committee yesterday, and was violently opposed by the Mayor, the City Solicitor and other interested parties. The bill provides that in assessing vacant ground or ground used as a farm, garden or nursery, and not in immediate demand for building purposes, in cities, towns or villages, whether incorporated or not, the value of such vacant or other ground shall be that at which sales of it can be freely made for cash, and where no such sales can be freely made the assessor shall value such land at a value not exceeding that at which it should be valued if held only for farming or gardening purposes, with such percentage (in no case exceeding 25 per cent.) added thereto as the situation of the land reasonably calls for; and such vacant land, though surveyed into building lots, if unsold as such, may be entered on the assessment roll as so many acres, or portions of acres of the original block or lot, describing the same by the description of the block or by the number of the lot and concession of the township in which the same is situated, as the case may be.

Under the old Assessment Act the council had the option of assessing such vacant lands as farm lands, or not. Under this bill they are compelled to do so. There was another clause in the bill which practically made the same provision. The fight was made on this clause, which was struck out and the Toronto members swallowed the bill by voting for it, which left the city in a position, as Mayor Kennedy says, to lose $70,000 annually in taxes upon these lands. The Toronto members are angry with Mayor Kennedy. They say that if it was a matter of so much importance that he should have been present at the committee yesterday afternoon to aid them with his counsel.

Late in the evening the bill came up again in the House, and the Toronto members attempted to have the objectionable clause eliminated. It was decided, after a great deal of discussion, to leave the clause as it stood, much to the disgust of the city members. The bill will come up for its third reading to-day.

OUR SCHOOLS ARE PERFECT.

Mr. Whitney, on motion to go into supply, moved in amendment that in view of the fact that 95 per cent. of the pupils of Ontario attend Public schools, that the system of education in these schools should be broadened and improved. He admitted that the present system was good, and that it had shown good results, but he would like to see it broadened. He would like to see more money spent upon the Public schools, since they were so important to the people.

Hon. G. W. Ross said that Mr. Whitney would like to see the Public school system broadened, but he had not made a single suggestion as to how he would do this. The Public school system of Ontario sent twice as many pupils relatively to higher schools than did the Public schools of the United States, and three times as many as the English Public schools. The complaint had been made that too much money went to the High schools and too little to the Public schools. Twenty years ago, under the Conservative Government, the High schools received $9.43 for every pupil, and the Public schools but 45 cents. To-day the High schools received but $4.38, about half what they got under Conservative rule, while to-day the Public schools received 56 cents for every pupil, or 25 per cent. more than they got from John Sandfield Macdonald. Mr. Whitney had begun by praising the system, then by saying they were bad.

Mr. Whitney: I did not say the system

Hon. Mr. Ross: Do you say that it is a good system?

Mr. Whitney: I have said that the schools were good, but they might be broadened.

Hon. Mr. Ross, continuing, said that it was no argument to admit that the schools were quite good enough, but that they ought to be "broadened." What did Mr Whitney mean by broadened? Why had he not said what he meant? Why would he not say what he meant by the expression? When Reformers advocated reforms, it was their practice to indicate the methods they would employ. The fact of the matter was that Mr. Whitney was dumb for the reason that he had nothing of a practical nature to suggest. The High School system was popular and was fast becoming self-sustaining. In 1867 the pupils paid in fees towards their support but $15,000, while last year they paid $105,000. The course pursued by the Government was gradually to decrease the grant to the High Schools and in the same manner to increase the grant to public schools. This was seen from the fact that in 20 years they had already reduced the grant per capita to High Schools by 50 per cent., while the per capita grant to public schools had increased 25 per cent. The vote was then taken and the amendment lost 35 to 48. The Patrons, with two exceptions, voted with the Opposition.

THEY NEED NOT PAY.

When the bill respecting charitable institutions came up for a third reading yesterday it was referred back to Committee of the Whole House with instructions to strike out the fifth clause. This clause provided that in case of any charity patient who had not been a resident of the municipality for at least three months, a weekly sum should be paid by the municipality from which he came.

The supplementary estimates were presented by the Provincial Treasurer yesterday. The Ontario Bee Keepers' Association gets $150; the Agricultural College gets $10,000 to erect an experimental building; Architect Waite gets $4000 in settlement of his $25,000 claim. The Government has set aside $2000 for the erection of a registry office at Minden and $1500 for a lock-up at Little Current. Port Arthur gets $1100 for hot water heating in the court room. Kingston gets $2300 to complete the erection of her dairy school.

WORST KIND OF DYSPEPSIA

GENTLEMEN,—I write to inform you that for years I had been troubled with Dyspepsia, and having tried other medicines which entirely failed, I at last found relief and cure in Burdock Blood Bitters, of which I took two bottles, the result being a perfect cure. Although only a young lad I had been troubled with Dyspepsia for four or five years, but I can say now that B.B.B. does its work faithfully in the worst kind of Dyspepsia, and has proved itself the only cure for me.

Ladies of West Belleville Methodist church will give a Sugar Social on the evening of Good Friday April 12th inst.

Naturally fair complexions would be the rule rather than the exception as unfortunately it is at present, if the ladies would wholly abandon cosmetics, and more generally keep the blood pure and vigorous by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only reliable blood-purifier.

Dandruff is due to an enfeebled state of the skin. Hall's Hair Renewer quickens the nutritive functions of the skin, healing and preventing dandruff.

As baldness makes one look prematurely old, so a full head of hair gives to mature life the appearance of youth. To secure this and prevent the former, Ayers's Hair Vigor is confidently recommended. Both ladies and gentlemen perfer it to any other dressing.

Much of life's misery is due to indigestion; for who can be happy with a pain in his stomach? As a corrective and strengthener of the ailementary organs, Ayer's Pills are invaluable, their use being attended always with marked benefit.

Are you all tired out, do you have that tired feeling or sick headache? You can be relieved of all these by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich it, every bodily function fags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, its contamination by bile, or other causes, serious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.

Lady Stanley of Alderley.

The Dowager Lady Stanley of Alderley, whose death took place last month, was in many respects a most remarkable woman. Her great age of 87 was no hindrance to her extraordinary intellectual and physical activity. Within the last few weeks she attended the weekly meeting of the Girls' Public Day School Company (of which she was one of the earliest promoters), had attended a lecture at the Royal Institution on her old friend Carlyle, and had gone, in spite of the severity of the weather, to see a window given by her son, the present Lord Stanley, to a church. As a matter of history it may be recorded that she was born before the Jubilee of George III., was presented at court to George IV., was familiar with the widow of the young Pretender, and was present both at the Coronation and the Jubilee of her Majesty Queen Victoria. More than half a century ago Lady Stanley was one of the original promoters of the Queen's College, and she became one of the members of its first council. She asisted to a great extent, and to the best of her ability, Miss Emily Davies, to whom the foundation of Girton College was primarily and mainly owing. During the whole of her life she has been doing the best that she could do for the recent development of the education of women, never thrusting herself to the front or endeavoring to monopolize the credit that was due to others, and all this good work was accomplished without her neglecting her duties as a woman or taking a due interest in her children, even to the second and third generation. Lady Stanley had twelve children, seven of whom are now living. Even recently she regretted she was not ten years younger to go and explore some of the newly-investigated regions of Central Asia, and as an example of her brightness, it is related that at one of the last visits paid to her by the late Premier, Mr. Gladstone, when he endeavored to turn the subject of conversation from that of politics, in which they differed, by alluding to a recent novel, she is reported to have said, "Do not let us talk of novels; leave them for your old age, as I do." a singular jest for a lady who was 87 when addressed to a statesman of 85.—Philadelphia Ledger.

IT WAS SUICIDE

THE CORONER'S INQUEST OVER THE DEATH OF MRS GEROW

The Jury Agree That she cut her own Throat—A Post-Mortem Examination by Drs Clinton and Farncombe. The Residence—Old man Gerow Weeps Bitterly

The coroner's inquest to enquire into the cause of death of the alleged suicide, Mrs. David Gerow, was held Thursday afternoon in the vacant school house in Rossmore as announced. The result of it was to substantiate beyond any reasonable doubt that it was a case of suicide. The body had been exhumed and was brought to the school house. Then Drs. Clinton and Farncombe performed a post-mortem examination. The remains had begun to decompose. After a careful examination the medical men were surprised at the evidence of the surity and completeness with which the victim accomplished her purpose, and at the great strength she must have summoned to make the hugh gash which had let out her life. The razor was a heavy one and very keen, a slight nick in it showed where it had struck the spinal bone after cutting through the veins and cords of her neck and almost severing the wind pipe. The cut was 3¾ inches long beginning at the base of the left ear. The medical men are of the opinion that death was instantaneous as the vagus nerve was completely severed and in such cases death immediately followed. This accounts for the blood not spurting as the heart action stops immediately the nerve is severed.

Shortly after one o'clock the coroner opened the inquest and the following jurymen were impanelled. Messrs Geo. Weese, Asa Brickman, Byron Frederick, Manley Snider, W. G. Anderson, John Cassidy, George Defield. Wyman Hart, H. M. Snider, F. Wallbridge, W. Maybee E. Babbitt, L. Loveless and Alf. Anderson. Mr. E. Babbitt was elected foreman. The following witnesses were then called:

William Jose was the first witness called, He said Mr. Gerow came to his house at 7 o'clock Monday morning and asked him (the witness) to come down with him as his wife had killed herself; he went down and found the body; he did not notice whether the blood was still flowing or not; he did not notice the razor; one of the ors asked if there was any blood on the dy or on her hands; the witness ra- ed that he did not see any; he viewed the body from the foot of the bed; he asked Dave Gerow how it happened; he told him he went to bring in his fish shanty and when he returned he found her with her throat cut; she was still breathing; she was dead when he went for Mr. Jose; she had asked him the day before to let her have the razor as she wanted to shave herself. He hid it behind some bottles on the sideboard. One of the jurors asked if she had been in the habit of shaving; witness replied that he did not know; there was no evidence of a struggle; Gerow had told him that he had not touched the bedclothes or anything; witness remained until Mr. Albert Anderson arrived. he had not seen Mrs. Gerow since last November

Albert J. Anderson was the next witness. He said he heard of Mrs. Gerow's death from the driver of Mr. Joses' milk waggon; he went down about 11 o'clock, and remained there about an hour; Dave Gerow asked if he wanted to see her: witness said yes; Gerow then took down the blankets and he viewed the corpse; he noticed that the cut was on the left side. There was no blood flowing from the wound. There was no blood on the floor, the only blood he noticed was on her left shoulder; he couldn't say as to whether the blood was red or black. He did not see the razor He thought from the appearance of the bed that she had died without a struggle; Gerow told him that she had tried to go out of the house the day before but he had detained her. He said Gerow had shed tears when he went in; he would think the wound was made by the right hand; he did not notice any marks of violence about the body: Gerow appeared to be sóber; he had heard there was trouble between Gerow and his wife last fall; he thought it would take a strong nerve to inflict a cut like the one in the woman's throat.

David Walker sworn said E. Gerow came to his house about 10 o'clock on Monday morning and he went to the scene of the tragedy. Mr. J. Anderson and Mr. Jose met them on the ice and turned back with them. He viewed the remains. The wound looked like a fresh cut, the blood had not dried yet. Deceased lay on her back with her head turned to the right.

He last saw her alive on the 2nd of April, she appeared like a woman who was losing her mind. She was in bed. She got up and walked around the front of the bed. She did not know who he was. He was told by Dave Gerow that Dr. Quackeubush had said she might take her life and his if she was not watched. She was alone at the time. She appeared to be weak as she had to take hold of the bed for support He thought it was a case of suicide;

Edgar Gerow sworn, said that Monday morning about eight o'clock Mrs. Jose' son came and told him that Mrs. David Gerow had cut her throat. He replied that it was nothing more than he had expected. His reasons for saying this was that he had seen her about too weeks ago and he saw she was out of her mind. He sent a message to inform Reeve Anderson and he went for Mr. Walker and they went to Cedar Island. They went in and viewed the remains, His further evidence was a corroboration of the other witnesses.

Dr. Quackenbush was called; he said Mr. Gerow came to him about the the last of December and asked him for some medicine for his wife who had the grip; he perscribed for her; he came again and said she was worse; he went down and saw her; she said she had been troubled with her heart about two years; he went down again and he noticed that she was acting queer; he advised Mr. Gerow to put her in some place where she would be taken care of as she would not get better if be didn't; he went down again and found it difficult to ascertain anything about her condition as she would persist in talking of something else; she asked the witness if he had any morphine saying she would take her own life; Gerow had told him that she had asked for the razor when he had shaved himself on Saturday; Gerow appeared to be quite anxious about her as he came to town when the weather was not fit to be out in.

W.E. Anderson was called and testified to receiving word of the suicide. He notified County Crown Attorney Brown at Picton and was told to take a doctor and make an examination. He took Dr. Farncombe of Rednerville down to the shanty. When they went in witness first noticed a shirt lying on the bed. When he picked it up he noticed that it was saturated with blood about the centre and asked Gerow how it came there, but ne did not know. Gerow had touched nothing after he found his wife with her throat cut. If the shirt had been in front of her the blood would likely have flown from her on the shirt. He and Dr. Farncombe had made an examination of the cut. The cut was 3½ inches long and cut clean to the back bone. The bone was nicked where the razor had struck it. The wind pipe was almost cut through;

David Gerow was next called. He was told to be careful as the evidence might be used against him. He said that his wife for the past two weeks had been out of her mind. She had asked him about twenty times how far the hole in the ice was from the shore where he cut the ice. She also asked him for the razor as she said she wanted to cut her moustache. He said he saw she was worse and he went to see the doctor. When he came home she said she felt like taking a run. she then talked about her children; On Sunday she wanted to go out but he held her and carried her back to bed; between four and five on Sunday afternoon he was carrying in wood and she again attempted to go out; he detained her by force; she asked why he would not go out; she was restless until eleven o'clock: She wanted him to come to bed and he slept behind; she tried to get out but he detained her; he went to sleep and he got up about 5:30 and went out to bring in his fishing shanty; when he came back he went in and saw the blood. Witness completely broke down and wept bitterly at this point. He said, "For God's sake woman what have you done." She raised her left arm and let it fall on her breast, she also drew up her right leg a little; she then stopped breathing; as to the bloody shirt the witness said he put the shirt under her shoulders about eleven o'clock as she said her back was cold; he had hid the razor behind some dishes; he was away for his shanty about half an hour; she had slept until eight or nine o'clock for the past few weeks.

Dr. Farncombe, sworn, said Mr. Anderson came for him on Tuesday afternoon and asked to go down with him and examine Mrs. Gerow. His evidence as to finding the body was a corroboration of the other witnesses. He defined the cut describing the different organs which had been cut through. All the blood vessels in the left side of the neck had been cut through; he thought death would be instantaneous, the vagus nerve was cut and death would result from this; this vagus nerve being cut immediately stopped the action of the heart, this would keep the blood from gushing as it would when pumped from the heart; the skirt was folded up and placed by the left elbow: it would have been impossible for the woman to do this after her throat was cut; there was no blood further than six inches of the wound except on the skirt; all the blood had not gone out of the body; it was a tremendously deep cut for self infliction.

Dr. Clinton was the next witness called: He said this afternoon was the first time he had seen the body. He could corroborate Dr. Farncombe's evidence as to the nature of the wound. The wound was sufficient to cause instantaneous death. There were black and blue spots on the body but he could not say whether it was due to decomposition or not. He was of the opinion the wound was made from the back of the neck and brought forward.

After an absence of over an hour the jury returned the following verdict: "That to the best of their knowledge and belief and from the evidence rendered, Mrs. David Gerow came to her death by a cut across her throat from a razor in her own hands while of unsound mind."

FARMER'S LEVEL

A New Instrument for Drainage Purposes.

A simple device for taking levels and running grades has been on exhibition for some days at the Massey, Harris implement establishment, Front street, Belleville, which has attracted considerable attention.

This "Farmers' Level" is the invention of A. R. Davis & Co., of Napanee and consists of two uprights of wood 12 feet long and hinged together at their upper end and held apart at their lower end by a cross arm to the centre of which is attached a brass scale with grade graduations. A plumb line is suspended from the centre of the hinge and when the feet of the uprights are level the plumb line covers the zero mark on the scale.

Fine needle sights project from the uprights at a height convenient for the eye, and these are level also when the plumb line covers the centre or zero mark of the scale. Any person can use these sights and determine the fall across a field and then without moving the instrument insert a wedge under one leg until the needle sights are on the grade of the drain then the drain is constructed parallel to the line of sight by means of a rod to which a target is attached. The instrument has a stay brace which holds it firmly in position until the drain is completed.

We notice in a recent issue of the "Farmers' Sun" an article giving the discussion of a paper on the "Farmers' Level" by the surveyors of Ontario at their annual meeting in Toronto in which this instrument is highly recommended for its great utility, its simplicity and its cheapness. The necessity for tile draining is becoming more and more recognized by our farmers and this inexpensive instrument will, we believe, fill a long felt want for this purpose especially. The old plan of laying tile by means of a spirit level 'by guess' has had its day and farmers would do well to examine into the merits of this cheap instrument, which any school boy can use, before laying any more tile.

We believe it merits a large sale and cordially recommend its general use.

Concert at Bayside

The Bayside Workers Mission Band of Wesley church held its first concert on Wednesday evening last. The programme opened with a chorus "We're a happy Mission Band," followed by prayer by the Rev. Jas. Faull, who also gave an address during the evening. Then the Pres., Mrs. Gilbert, gave an address telling in a few words how long the Band had been organized, the work done by it, and showed that in order to have a successful church, it is necessary to have the cooperation of the children. Then followed recitations, songs, etc., in which the children distinguished themselves to an unusual degree, doing great credit to all concerned.

At the close of the programme Mr. O. S. Hicks spoke in his usual impressive way to the boys and girls congratulating them on their success and dwelling on the fact that the seeds sown now by such a society are eternal and that the influence for good is scarcely less great on those not directly concerned in the Society.

DR CARMAN TALKS OF DAYS

A Good Friday Sermon in Bridge St. Church

Service was held yesterday morning in Bridge St. church when Rev. Dr. Carman preached a characteristic sermon on "Days." His text was Galations iv 10, 11. "Ye observe days and months and years, I am afraid of you lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain."

He believed in observing Good Friday. Methodists had too few fast days and holy days. But he did not believe in making them a question of conscience but rather of expediency, because they were instituted by men and not by God. There was no mention of them in the Bible. Some people held that others did not love the Saviour as well as they because their manner of observing church-holy days was different. This they had no right to do. God had but one holy day and that was the Sobbath and it was the only day the observance, of which should be made a matter of conscience. He referred in scathing terms of the practice in Quebec of keeping holy only the Sabbath forenoon.

The National Club Concert

The concert held under the auspices of the National Club in the Opera House on Thursday evening was a splendid success and the members of the club who worked so hard to bring it to its successful issued naturally feel elated over it. There was a good sized audience who enjoyed the program immensely, the different performers being very clever. Mr. Sim Fax although well known and always welcome to a Belleville audience was never seen to better advantage, he was in excellent voice and was called back again and again, His recitation, "Christmas at the Poor House" proves him to be an elocutionist of rare ability Miss Stevenson as a vocalist is a success, she has a voice of great compass and sweet and clear as a bell. Mr. Ward, the trick violinist is decidedly clever with his instrument. His rendition of the "Mocking Bird" was wonderful. Miss Ward as a pianist is also an artist of no mean ability. The National Club are to be complimented in bringing such a clever contingent of artists to the city.

JONES—FORD

A very pretty but quiet wedding took place at West Flamboro on Wednesday, April 10th, 1895, the Rev. Mr. Morrow officiating. The cotracting parties being Mr. Alfred Jones, the genial and popular Township Treasurer and carriage manufacturer, and Emma Marion, widow of the late George H. Ford and second daughter of Mr. Henry Froste, Belleville.

The bride was dressed in her going-away gown of brown silk, and was given away by Mr. James Stutt, Sr., of the firm of James Stutt & Sons, Wentworth Paper Mills.

The presents were both numerous and costly showing the high esteem in which both are held. The groom's gift to the bride being a handsome gold watch and chain. The happy couple left on the evening train for the west.

Hamilton, bunch of Easter lilies; Mr. and Mrs. G. Hulme, pillow of roses and carnations. The following gentlemen were pall bearers: Messrs Col. Hendricks, Col. Lazier, J. W. Walker, W. H. Gordon, W. T. Hamilton and J. Williams.

Great Praise

[From Chicago Times.]

For our opinion of Miss Coombs' Juliet we refer the hundreds who, amid a stillness which the slightest rustle of silk, even or a suppressed whisper, would have made manifest by contrast, drank in every silvery note of the balcony scene. Constant Mayer's brush has well put that scene upon canvas, so far as it appealed to the eye. Its music to the ear, was beyond his high art.

THE CHITRAL CAMPAIGN.

Extraordinary Difficulties Surmounted—Officers Captured By Treachery.

Calcutta, April 13.—A despatch from Simla dated noon to-day says that Col. Kelly, the commander of the British forces which have been attempting to reach Chitral from Gilgit since March 25, have succeeded in crossing the Shandar Pass and were about 60 miles from Chitral on April 7.

The march of the troops was a most arduous and brilliant military exploit. The pass is 12,000 feet high and is impassable to beasts of burden. Consequently the pioneers had to carry the field and mountain guns during the last seven miles of the route through deep snow and with the weather intensely cold. The troops suffered in many cases from frost bites.

When these advices were forwarded to Simla the enemy was in position 20 miles distant from the force commanded by Col. Kelly and an engagement was expected.

It is learned that Lieuts. Fowler and Edwards, the two officers belonging to the British garrison at Chitral, who have been reported missing for some time past, were invited to a polo match at Roshun, where they were treacherously seized and their escort, consisting of 20 Bengal sappers, was overcome by superior numbers and slain.

Another report says that Lieut. Fowler was killed by a foster-brother of Amir-Ul-Mulk, the present ruler of Chitral, who assumed the rank of Mehtar after having murdered his elder brother, Nizam-Ul-Mulk, the late Mehtar of Chitral.

Another despatch from Simla says that the latest news from the front points strongly to the collapse of the power of Umra Khan. It is added that the fanatical gatherings upon whose help be counted and who have hitherto offered the most serious resistance to the British forces are now dispersing.

A Bengal Sapper who was taken prisoner at the same time with Lieut. Fowler, but escaped, reports that Mr. Robertson, the British agent who is shut up in the Chitral fort, made a sortie recently, but was defeated after a sharp engagement, in which Lieut. Gordon and several Sepoys were killed.

RUNS A LOTTERY WIDE OPEN.

A Policy Game at Fort Erie Which is Said To Be Legal in Canada.

Buffalo, April 13.—This week the programs of Buffalo theatres have borne an advertisement reading: "Red and green, or rubies and emeralds, daily at Fort Erie, morning 11.30, evening 5.30. In public. G. Washington Kohl."

A reporter for a local paper crossed to the Canadian side yesterday and found a full fledged lottery game in operation. Kohl is manager for Joseph Whitman Long, identified with the Kentucky and Louisiana games in this city. In an interview Whitman said: "My lottery is the only one in the world on the square. It is running under the laws of Canada. They tried to break me when I started, but I got a decision from the highest court. My policy drawing is open. The Kentucky lottery was always a fake after they quit legalizing it in Kentucky. I'm beating these fellows out every day. I don't try to do much business in Buffalo. I'm out for New York, Boston and Philadelphia business. That's where the money is. I can contract for gigs in Canada and deliver them any place in the world."

It may be news to the Attorney-General's Department that the highest court in Ontario has decided that the operation of a policy lottery game in Canada is legal. But if there is a legal flaw which permits its existence, there is no good reason for suppression of poolrooms, which, besides the policy-lottery, game, compares as June roses to September thistles.

RECIPROCITY IN CONVICTS.

Albany, N.Y., April 13.—In 1873 John Fitzgibbons, a British subject, was sentenced to Sing-Sing Prison for life for manslaughter. Percy Sanderson, British Consul-General at New York, has petitioned Governor Morton for the pardon of Fitzgibbons.

Influential citizens of New York city have requested Senator O'Sullivan to present a resolution to the Governor, asking the latter to request the British authorities, before they ask Executive clemency in Fitzgibbons' case, to look into the case of James Curtin Kent, a citizen of New York, who is now serving a life sentence in England for complicity in the Gallagher conspiracy 12 years ago.

A CURE FOR CONSUMPTION.

Important Medical Discovery Reported From Germany.

Washington, April 13.—From Germany comes the first official news of a great discovery, said to cure consumption and cancer. Consul-General Dekay at Berlin, in a report to the State Department, says the discovery, which was announced late in March in the most serious and trustworthy medical school in Germany, is likely to receive considerable attention at the coming Medical Congress in Munich. The discovery was made by Dr. Louis Waldstein. The new treatment consists of injecting minute doses of pilocarpine until the lymphatic system is stimulated and the white corpuscles of the blood overcome the poisonous particles which produce disease.

Oscar Wilde on Trial.

London, April 11.—Oscar Wilde and Alfred Taylor were arraigned for examination in the Bow-street Police Court this morning. Wilde was defended by Commoner Clarke, who announced that he would not cross-examine any of the witnesses until they testified at the trial of the charges against Wilde. Counsel for Alfred Taylor examined the young man, Parker, who admitte dhe was 21 years of age, and had been guilty of heinous offences with many persons besides Wilde. Parker also admitted that he received £20 from persons whose pursuit it was to extort money from gentlemen. The hearing was adjourned for a week, and Wilde and Taylor were remanded without bail.

An Uncomorftable Ride.

Georgetown, Ont., April 11—Last evening, when the mail train from the west arrived here, a man was found on the truck, under the last car, tangled up in the break gearing, and unable to release himself. He was nearly insensible, and presented a pitiful sight, being covered with gravel and cinders. He had got under the coach to steal a ride, and the working of the brakes caught one of his feet and held him fast. A pry had to be used to release him.

Formal Prorogation To Take Place On Tuesday.

A TWO-ACRE PLOT IS FARM LAND.

Discussion On Mr. Awrey's Bill, and After Some Cross-Voting the Above Amendment Carried—Women As Barristers—A Busy Closing Day.

Toronto, April 13.—The business of the Local Legislature was concluded Thursday amid a shower of compliments and expressions of goodwill. Sir Oliver Mowat, who seems to have obtained a new lease of life, as well as power, was in his best form. He was all smiles and good health. It was remarked that the Premier had exhibited more vim and activity this session than in many years previous. He congratulated the Speaker at the close of proceedings, upon the able manner in which he had presided over the debates, and thanked the Opposition and other members of the House for the business-like manner in which they had transacted the affairs of the Province. He wished everybody health and prosperity during the recess, and concluded by expressing the hope that all would return to their duties next session with renewed health and vigor.

Mr. Whitney, who has acted as leader of the Opposition since Mr. Marter became ill last week, responded on behalf of the Conservatives. He concurred in all that Sir Oliver had said with reference to the fairness and impartiality which had characterized Speaker Ballour's rulings, and said that he congratulated that hon. gentleman upon the fact that his health had greatly improved during the session. He thanked Sir Oliver for the many coutesies that had been shown the members of the Opposition. He expressed the hope that the Premier would long be spared to the province. (Loud cheers.)

Mr. Haycock was not behind in paying gracious compliments. He paid a glowing tribute to Speaker Ballour, and addressed himself in appropriate terms with reference to the Premier and leader of the Conservatives.

Speaker Ballour acknowledged the kind things that had been said of him in a characteristically brilliant speach. He said that it was a sore trial to him to be compelled to sit silent during the progress of the debate, but the task would be lighter in future, in view of the fact that his efforts to be fair had been so heartily appreciated.

The feature of the day was the hot fight over Mr. Awrey's bill to amend the Assessment Act. The Toronto members, who had been thoroughly frightened by the storm of disapproval that had been visited on them by Toronto citizens, because of their stupidity in allowing the bill to pass through the Municipal Committee without protest, were determined to have the bill altered. When Hon. Mr. Hardy moved the third reading of the bill Mr. Crawford moved in amendment that the objectionable clause compelling councils to assess vacant lands as farm lands be struck out. A hot debate followed, and members on both sides of the House divided. Many of the country Conservative members voted with Mr. Hardy, while Messrs. Bronson, Harty, Gibson, Harcourt, Middleton and other city and town members supported the amend-

Mr. Middleton then moved an amendment which was lost by 16 votes. towns and villages should be assessed as farm lands, unless they were 10 acres in extent. Hon. Mr. Gibson strongly supported this, which was violently opposed by Mr. German, Awrey and others. A hot debate followed, and finally the amendment was carried by one vote. Then Mr. Awrey gathered his forces and prepared for another attack upon the city members, who became frightened and wanted to compromise.

Mr. Awrey would have none of it, and proposed in amendment that all vacant lands of two or more acres in extent should be taxed as farm lands. The city members grew wildly excited at this proposition, and did their utmost to retain their majority of one, but the farmers got up in arms and cried them down. On vote Mr. Awrey's position was sustained by a majority of 19, and the bill became law, providing that all vacant lands in cities, towns and villages of two acres and more shall only be taxed as farm lands.

Mr. Wood moved the third reading of his bill to permit women to practice law in all courts the same as men.

Mr. Howland moved in amendment "That the Law Society shall not be bound to make regulations for the admission of women as barristers or solicitors, but may make special regulations in certain cases."

The amendment was not even debated. It was simply voted down.

The members then began pelting each other with papers and acting generally like a lot of school boys. Sir Oliver put a stop to their fun by rising in his seat and singing "God Save the Queen," all the members joining in the chorus.

Then followed the regular routine business. Bills were rushed through the various stages, at least those bills to which there was no objection, and the balance were dropped.

THE ROMANCE OF REDBUD.

It was a bright sunny afternoon, but the inhabitants of Little Dutch did not waste a thought on the weather. Sunny afternoons are too common a spring feature in Southern Kansas to excite even passing comment. Besides, the residents were assembled at the Rose of Kansas for a special and important purpose. The introduction of a meteorological topic would have been so foreign as to be an impertinence, and in consequence loaded with danger.

"As I was a sayin' when interrupted by the gentleman a representin' of the double-O-bar' brand, Little Dutch has got to pull itself together if it expects to retain its standin' among the moonicipalities of the once bleedin' Kansas," said the speaker. "It's goin' to be a funny thing in current history if these spike bucks from Winfield or Arkansas City, or any other town, is a-goin' to come down yere with a whoop an' a yell an' run off our hosses an' we do nothin' but stick our noses in the mud an' let on we liked it. If we want to, gentlemen, we can raise stock for the whole southern tier of counties. Jest let the notion go abroad once that all us folks settled at Little Dutch for was to raise hosses for other folks to steal an' you can string all your money on the proposition that they will be dead willin' to let us do it."

"W'at for is all this war medicine bein' made?" inquired Bill Siddons, foreman of the "double-O-bar" outfit, who had entered the gathering while Burt Francis, a prominent and public-spirited citizen of Little Dutch, was giving his views.

"It's like this, Bill," explained Colonel Tom North, who from years of sitting behind the deal box had acquired the repose of manner and gravity necessary to a presiding officer; "it's like this: Some unmitigated an' felonious cuss has run off two bronchos, the same then an' there bein' the property of John Stanhope Wells, more familiar known as 'English Jack—'"

"An' the mauraudin' hoss thief didn't even have the decency to pull the stakes," interjected Mr. Wells, who, notwithstanding his name, "English Jack," was a native of Oregon County, Missouri. "He cut the lariats, the hasty-minded villian, an sp'iled two as good ropes as ever you saw."

"An' the boys got together to discuss ways an' means," pursued Colonel Tom North, having suspended his explanation to give Mr. Wells an opportunity to air his complaint, "the majority as law abidin' citizens, strivin' to promote the material interests of Little Dutch an' as a sort of a much-needed rebuke to hoss thiefs appears to be in favor of hangin' the critter. Bill Hunt, the under Sheriff of Cowley County, has the inhuman monster close herded at his house over at Red Bud, an' the general sense of this meetin' seems to be that we rides over this arternoon an' hangs the cuss for the benefit of his morals."

"I'm agin hangin' him as bein' too drastic," said Mr. Wells. "As the owner of them two cayuses which was stoled, I'm willin' to say that the crime carried its own punishment. Though," he added as an after thought, "he shouldn't ort to have cut them lariats. This feller that run off the critters is not what you might call a red-handed desperado, neither. I see him projectin' around yere the day before he run off the bronchos, an' he's a slim, spindlin' critter, with a complexion like a drug store clerk. I 'lowed mebbe he's been readin' books an' started out to be a bad man jist for the fun they is in it. He didn't p'int out like no hoss thief, neither. Bill Hunt finds him as late as 6 o'clock this mornin' a sleepin'. He goes into camp an' builds a fire all as comfortable an' the same as if he was in a fust-class hotel, instead of ridin' for the Nation, the way professional hoss thiefs does."

"That ain't the pint, none whatever," said Burt Francis. "I'm nachally a humane man myself. I argued agin' the stranglin' of the nigger over at Wellington, an' I don't take stock much in hangin' a white man. It's a poor use to make of even a hoss thief. But it's the principle of the thing, an' the howlin' necessity of elevatin' Little Dutch to the position among border towns she is entitled to hold. This corporation received a distinct setback an' has carried a bad black eye ev'ry sence Jim Marshall gits away with the jack pot on a two'ace flush. It was not so much the hand—that would surprise anyone, but it was the lettin' of him go around alive a tellin' folks what marks we all is. Little Dutch has got to win back her reputation if we hangs ev'ry hoss thief 'twixt here an' the Canadian."

This seemed to accord with the general notion. Civic pride is often a vast moving power. Mr. Thurston, who presided over the bar, sat out the bottle, and the sixteen men who comprehended the greater part of Little Dutch's able male population accepted Mr. Siddon's invitation to irrigate before starting out on their eight-mile ride to Red Bud.

As Tom Thurston locked up the Rose of Kansas and prepared to mount his horse he inquired:

"Suppose Billy don't give up the hoss thief. He's jist been made Under Sheriff an' he may not think it's law."

"He'll give him up all right," replied the optimistic Francis. "I never yit hear of a law agin' hangin' a hoss thief."

"But you don't know Bill Hunt," said Thurston, swinging into his saddle.

"I'd be more than glad to help you out, gents," said Under Sheriff Hunt, "but you see the boy surrenders to me, an' I'm some sort responsible to the State of Kansas for his well bein'. Wait until I lands him in Winfield. No doubt Scott, which is my superior in office, will turn the boy over to you all. He's just the man to let a band of Little Dutch folks come an' tend to his business for him. He's got a reputation for that, and you'll find him dead easy."

"The hoss thief isn't at Winfield, Billy," said Francis; "he's yere, an' they ain't no need of you all gittin' gay an' sarcastic neither. We is a band of plain, law-abidin' citizens a-doin' of our duty to our corporation. So be decent, Billy, and turn out the boy. We don't want to proceed to any extreme measures, Bill, or take any steps which you might subsequently regret, but we've come for the hoss thief sure." A restive horse pitched against another and two Winchesters rattled. It was a nerve-straining minute or two.

"If you-all git him it'll be through smoke," replied Under Sheriff Hunt, "an' I'm figurin' there won't be many folks left to attend the fun'rals which is likely to prevail as a fashion around yere for the next few days."

"Let 'em come in, Bill, why don't you?" broke in a silvery voice on the war talk. Let 'em come in. I didn't 'low to hold a reception, gentlemen," continued the bright-faced, vivacious young woman looking out from the doorway over Hunt's shoulder. "I didn't 'low when I came over from Joplin way to visit Cousin Billy that I'd hold a reception the very fust day."

If Hunt was surprised he never betrayed his astonishment, nor did he wink an eye when his joyous young relative proceeded. "I turned that pore little boy loose half hour ago, Cousin Bill, when I fust see these visitors a-comin'. The boy said some of 'em might feel constrained in his presence, as they was a matter of a couple of hosses outstandin' between him an' them, an' they might feel as if they orter settle with him."

the young woman first appeared. Said Colonel Tom North, as he resettled his sombrero:

"I don't aim to be critical, Bill, but it looks like you-all had better give your young wimmen relatives a hint or two on your duties as to the safe keepin' of hoss thiefs. Us Little Dutch people would never have let him git away, Billy," and the delegation rode home.

It was between deals a few months later that Burt Francis remarked to Tom North, who was putting the cards back in the box: "Ihear Bill Hunt has married that cousin of his'n we met up with that time we rides over to lynch the boy that stole 'English Jack's' hosses."

"Yes," said North, setting the deal box before him, "I hears of it. I've seen the girl two or three times. Do you know, Burt, she favors that hoss thief mightily. I saw the kid loafin' around yere the day before he runs off the bronchos, and he looks enough like that girl to be her twin. An', Burt, I rides 'round Billy Hunt's house that day, an' they wa'nt nary moccasin nor hoof track leadin' from it. An' that dress the young woman had on was Bill's sister's, which she was up in Winfield visitin' when we was thar. I recognized it at once. An' I'm keepin' up quite a lot of thinkin', Burt. Eight lose, queen win; place yer bets, gents."

THE FIRST GRAY HAIR.

You know what it is to find the first gray hair in your head? It quite startles you; in fact, it amuses you so much that you hand it around the family circle that each member may laugh at the circumstance that a gray hair was not so much as suspected, said Joseph Parker. Young people look at you with a new feeling, hardly knowing indeed, whether to address you as a strippling or a patriarch. You have but one foot into that sombre and unbeautiful borderland which lies between summer and autumn, and there is no going back again! All the gates are locked and God has taken the keys away. A gray hair? It is the signature of time! It is the beginning of the end It is a hint that you have lost something; it is a flake which tells of the hastening snow. Such changes remind us in the gentlest possible manner that this is not our rest. The night does close in suddenly. The common end is not violence and terribleness. We go gradually down the steep, and as a general rule time is given in your life. This gray hair is a notice to quit. It is not a keen weapon which cruelly cuts us down; 'tis but a gray hair, and it says mournfully, Think! The gray hair tells us that the hours are getting on, and presently the night cometh. There was your first day's sickness; there was your first consciousness that your power of endurance was failing. What, indeed, is all life, from the mellow solemnity of old age, but a succession of blunders.

THE STAMPS WERE SPURIOUS.

hey Were Neither Rejected Nor Stolen From the Department,

Washington, April 13.—Third Assistant Postmaster-General Kerr Craige to-day said that statements made that the supposed counterfeit stamps were really those rejected by the Postoffice Department were untrue; that the rejected stamps were destroyed by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Neither were they a portion of those stolen several months ago by an employe of the bureau. He said that they were counterfeit stamps; that he had received a number of them, and there was no doubt that they were spurious.

The fact that the counterfeit stamps are done up in perforated sheets of 100 each knocks out the idea that they are old stamps cleaned up. It has been discovered, too, that the "2" in each lower corner of the counterfeit is a shade larger than the genuine stamp.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is without an equal as a blood-purifier and Spring medicine, and cannot have praise enough. Crows in a Battle.

A daily spectacle at Ridgewood, N.J., is the passing of hundreds of crows over town. They come from the south in the early morning on the way to their feeding grounds and return just at sunset to their regular roosting place. The other evening the crows were flying lazily along until suddenly it appeared that some enemy must have come among them for what looked like a fierce battle began.

Instantly scores of birds that were well away from the center of disturbance turned about and were soon lost in the whirl of the supposed combatants. Some of the crows would drop nearly to the earth as if disabled and then soar and apparently rest high in the air preparatory to a renewal of the excitement.

After a time it appeared as if many concluded discretion to be more praiseworthy than valor, or that the game was not worth the candle, and they left the scene in groups of ten or more and continued on their homeward way.

The battle, if such it was, was a terrible one. Nearly every crow that passed the tussling ones returned for a few moments to watch the fray, but in hundreds of instances did not engage in it, but made a detour and soared away.—Washington Star.

THE WINDOW GARDEN.

How to Provide for It in Summer and the Warm Months.

In a summer window garden where the sun will shine brightly during the greater part of the day, it is especially important to provide large, deep boxes. If they are shallow, with insufficient soil, this will quickly dry out; and becoming baked and hard about the plants they will soon be injured. In planning for this window garden in the early spring, it will be necessary to take into consideration the number and kind of plants to be cultivated before ordering the window box made. If there are a quantity of potted plants from the winter window garden, that are to supply slips and cuttings, these should be started in March, and they will have time to form thrifty plants before settled weather, when it is safe to plant them outside.

If there are no potted plants on which to depend, and it is necessary to raise plants from seed, it will be well to arrange seed pans of light mellow soil, now in some sunny window ledge, and start into growth the sweet alyssum seedlings, with phlox drummondi, petunias, etc., and they will give a profusion of bloom throughout the summer. There are numerous annuals quite as good as these, of course, and each flower-grower doubtless has a choice in their selection, yet these three have been mentioned because the writer has found them satisfactory under every circumstance, no matter what the difficulties under which the floriculture must be carried on, for want of space, for want of sun, for want of shade, for want of proper soil, or any of the numerous wants which often confront the city flower-grower. These three bright annuals will bloom bravely on in spite of all.

If started into growth now, and transplanted (as soon as the second leaves forms) from the seed pan to small pots or boxes of fresh soil, the sweet alyssum seedlings will be ready to bloom very soon after they are set in the window box, and with a little urging in the way of spraying, fertilizing, etc., they will soon become large plants, drooping over the side of the window boxes, and forming perfect banks and masses of white fragrant bloom. They should be planted near the edge of the box so they can droop over at will.

The petunia plants will also trail and droop over the box if allowed to grow at will, but it will be best to keep them pinched back at first, to encourage compact growth and abundant blooming; and if a packet of mixed seed are sown, the variety and tintings of the various blooms will be a source of constant surprise and pleasure.

The phlox drummondi will send up straight stately little plants that will bloom when only two or three inches in height if allowed. It will be best to behead them, however harsh it may seem just as soon as they seem inclined to bloom; then instead of the one cluster of blossoms at the top of the little plant they will quickly send out side branches which will bear several clusters and if the blossoms are picked before they fade and the seed pods begin to form, other blooming branches may thus be encouraged to grow up and keep up the fragrant supply.

A few geranium plants are always desirable in a sunny window garden no matter what other plants are used, as these good old stand-bys are so sure to succeed under all circumstances. These may be planted near the back of the box, forming a stately little blooming hedge, with the low, drooping annual bloomers in front. The bright faces of the velvety pansies and many other favorites will seem indispensable, but if the window garden is in a very sunny situation it will not be well to attempt a great variety of plants unless one has experimented, and is able to shun those that will flourish only in partial shade.

After it is decided what sort of plants are to be grown and the seeds or slips and cuttings are started into growth, we can turn our attention to the window boxes. If only potted plants are to be used, it will be wise to allow them to remain in their pots of soil, first repotting those that have outgrown their pots so that there is little room for fresh summer development. After getting an idea of the number and kind of pots to be set in the box, the order can be given to have the box made just the right size to accommodate these pots, making it wide enough to allow small pots to be set in the spaces left around and in front of the large ones. The boxes should be made the length of the window sill, but they can be as deep and as wide as desired. After measuring the largest pots which are to be set in the box have it then made a little deeper than these to allow for a layer of pebbles, etc., in the bottom of the box for drainage. It will be well to have at least an inch or two of this drainage material, and if there is good drainage in the pots also, there will be no danger of using too much water and souring the soil, and the plants may then be allowed copious supplies of water at their roots, and thorough syringing and spraying all through the hot dry weather, and they will appreciate this treatment, and flourish and bloom surprisingly.

In every window box it is desirable to have at least one or two climbers to break the monotony and give grace and beauty to the window. To accommodate these climbing vines, wires or willow strands or rattans may be arched from one end of the box to the other, or wires or strings may be fastened to the ends of the box and from there to the top of the window: and rapid-growing climbers will soon make these objects of beauty and grace even if there are no blossoms. The various ivies will very soon cover these supports with a mass of bright glossy foliage, and for bloomers the maderia vines, or even the common morning glories, will supply an abundance of blossoms

Hanging baskets are always desirable for a handsome summer window garden and it is of special importance to have them deep enough to hold plenty of soil, so that the roots will not lay against the sides of the porous pot and become scorched in the hot suns. The summer blooming oxalis is always satisfactory for this purpose, as the rich mass of foliage will soon droop down and cover the sides of the baskets, and the graceful spikes and clusters of bloom will continue to develop all summer long. The various tradescantias, with their handsome variegations, should also find a place in these hanging baskets. It is easily rooted from slips, and a small plant purchased now will produce many thrifty plants before warm weather, if the branches are broken at the joints and rooted in dishes of sand.

Scientists are Puzzling Themselves Over This Interesting but Rather Remote Question.

It is more than 30 years since Lord Kelvin pointed out that there must be an ascertainable limit to the antiquity of the earth, and that from the data at that time available the limit could not be fixed at les than 20,000,000 or more that 400,000,000 years. He based this calculation on the thermal conductivity of the globe. Afterward returning to the subject, he placed the limit within 100,000,000 years; and still more recently, reviewing the question in the light of the arguments from tidal retardation and the age of the sun's heat, he has brought down the period of the earth's antiquity to about 20,000,000 years.

Geologists have not been slow to admit that they were in error in assuming that they had an eternity of past time for the evolution of the earth's history. They have frankly acknowledged the validity of the physical arguments which go to place more or less definite limits to the antiquity of the earth. In vain have they protested that there must somewhere be a flaw in a line of argument which tends to result so entirely at variance with the strong evidence for a higher antiquity, furnished not only by the geological record, but by the existing races of plants and animals. Scientists have insisted that this evidence is not mere theory or imagination, but is drawn from a multitude of facts which become hopelessly unintelligible unless sufficient time is admitted for the evolution of geological history. They have not been able to disprove the arguments of the physicists, but they have contended that the geological arguments as of no account physicists have simply ignored the in the discussion.

So here the matter has rested for some years, neither side giving way, and with no prospect of agreement. Prof. Perry, feeling that, after all, the united testimony of geologists and biologists was so decidedly against the latest reduction of time that it was desirable to reconsider the physical argument, has gone over to them once more. He now finds that on the assumption that the earth is not homogeneous, as postulated by Lord Kelvin, but possesses a much higher conductivity and thermal capacity in its interior than in its crust, its age may be enormously greater than previous calculations have allowed. The question being sub judice, we must wait until it is settled. But there seems at present every prospect that the physicists will concede not merely the 100,000,000 of years with which the geologists would be quite content, but a very much greater extent of time.

Dick's Condition Powders Fattens Horses and Cattle

The successful tempering of aluminium so as to give it the consistency of iron is the latest triumph of F. Allard, the Levis blacksmith, whose rediscovery of the lost Egyptian art of hardening copper startled the mechanical world some three or four years ago, and only failed to make the fortune of its author because of the expensiveness of the process. A recent trial of Allard's tempered aluminium has proved a success of his new method in Quebec and the practical purposes to which it can be applied. He had made and hardened a cannon, which has just been tested in presence of Col. Spence, the American Consul, with the greatest success. This cannon is 26 inches long and five inches in diameter, the metal of the gun outside the bore being only a quarter of an inch thick. A charge, consisting of a pound of powder, has been successfully fired out of the little piece of ordnance without having any appreciable effect upon it. A new and more scientific trial of the cannon has been ordered by the Canadian military authorities to be held immediately at the Quebec Citadel by the artillery experts there and the United States Consul, in view of this move, is understood to have encouraged Mr. Allard to manufacture as speedily as possible, a cannon 12 feet in length for shipment to Washington, but whether this is to be at Allard's risk or by instructions from the United States Government is not known and cannot be learned.

The great advantage of cannons made of aluminium, everything else being equal, lies, of course, in the lightness of the metal. The cannon just tested weighs 14 pounds. If it were of iron and the same dimensions it would weigh 180 pounds. Allard's friends, and military enthusiasts over the project, assert that if the tempered aluminium supersedes iron for the making of big guns, field artillerymen, instead of being dependent upon horses and gun carriages for dragging their weapons over rough country, will be able to shoulder them like muskets. In appearance the finished specimen looks as though it was made of burnished silver.

FISH PRIZE FIGHTING.

It is One of the Popular Amusements of the People of Siam.

The two fighting fish are placed in a huge bottle together, and they proceed to take each other's measure, shoulder up to each other in schoolboy fashion, and back and push around the "ring," the small fins vibrating rapidly all the time, and each little being quivering with excitement and wrath. This goes on for some minutes, until, as the spetators are growing impatient, one fish suddenly makes a dart and a bite at his adversary's tail. Henceforth there is no hesitation until one or other gives in.

The Siamese back their fish just as money is placed on horses here, and then the battle is continued until one fish is chased around the bottle by the other. But this is usually an affair of an hour, and frequently three or four. The fish are reared specially for fighting, and display wonderful pluck and determination.

The tail is the part which shows most damage, although it is very easily torn; but a good grip on the side fin is very effective. They display considerable agility in evading their opponent's mouth, and also in suddenly twisting round and taking a piece out of its tail. In twenty minutes or so these appendages, which looked so brave and bright as they started to the fray, are torn to ribbons.

Paris Boulevards.

In no other streets in the wide world can one see such varied types as on the grand boulevards of Paris. Why, a trip through them, on top of an omnibus, from the Bastile to the Madeliene—and it takes perhaps an hour—will give you a kaleidoscope view of life to be found nowhere else. At the Bastile, the Boulevard des filles du Calvaire and du Temple, you meet the laboring classes. On Sundays in their "bestest best," and on week days in white blouses and cotton jackets. Beyond the Place de la Republique the picture changes. Here are the little merchants and shopkeepers, and some large ones, too. Farther on, up near Rue Vivienne, new blood enters this great artery of Paris—it is tinged with a golden sheen, for we are in the heart of the exchanges, among brokers and coulissiers; aye, among just such types as Zola drew from for his book entitled "Money." Now the shops are becoming more gay and beautiful, the cafes more elegant; and the siren voices of Paris make its joys even more alluring and more tempting. To appreciate it, you must do more than view it from an outsider's standpoint. You must take part in it, live in it, and for the time being forget that you ever were anything but a confirmed and hardened boulevardier.

There! follow my advice, and I will guarantee that you will see Paris as Paris is, and not as tourists see or describe it. Sit down with me at the terrasse of yonder cafe and watch the stream of humanity as it flows by. What a cosmopolitan throng! Rich and poor, merchants and clerks, unmistakable Britishers, blase journalists, fetching-looking actresses, chic little Parisiennes of the petite bourgeoisie, newsboys and beggars; aye and Americans, too—all "touching elbows," as the French say. Is it not dizzy to look upon in its whirling activity, its abandoned merry-making?

See that young exquisite with pointed patent leather boots? Poor fellow! He has mislaid his brain and might find it there. He is one of the society men of the boulevard.—Home and Country Mazagine.

Treed by Snakes.

A snake story, which is the first and best of the season, comes from Clarke County. A farmer was digging fence post holes last week, and while at work ran across a nest of twenty young snakes. Five were rattlers, ten were moccasins, two were king snakes and three were chicken snakes. They all attacked him, and he was forced to climb a tree to save himself.—Atlanta Constitution.

WOMAN ON THE BICYCLE.

Some women deprive themselves of the pleasure of riding a bicycle on account of the awkward appearance presented by a good many feminine riders, especially those who go along with knees rising and falling laboriously. They fear that they may commit the same faults, not knowing that the ungraceful exhibition is simply the result of one thing—ignorance concerning the choice of a bicycle.

If a woman were about to mount a horse one of the first things to which she would give her attention would be to the length of the stirrup leather, which she would adjust to suit her stature, otherwise she would rise and fall in the saddle in too pronounced a manner and her appearance would be more or less unsightly. The proper adjustment of pedal and saddle in the Bicycles are made in [illegible] from the saddle to the pedal, namely, 21, 23, 25, 29 inches. If a woman with long legs has one of the low machines, it will be almost impossible for her to ride with grace. In choosing a bicycle a woman should test it by sitting on it while it is stationary and moving the pedal round with her foot. In this way she can ascertain if the seat is too high or too low for her.

When the pedal is at the lowest point the foot should reach it comfortably, not so as to exert full foot pressure, but with about the same pressure as the toe gives the stirrup when sitting at ease in the saddle or what it gives to the floor when in a comfortable rocker. It is not safe to have a pedal that the foot cannot control all the way round; while if the pedal does not give the leg a full stretch the result will be an ungainly jerking up of the skirts.

The length of the crank of the pedal is even more important. In length the crank varies from 7 to 5½ inches, making a difference of 3 inches in the rise and fall. As the pedal revolves it raises the foot and knee just so much at each revolution, and if the elevation is too great an appearance of awkwardness is produced. Apart from producing awkwardness, the long crank has other serious drawbacks.

If a woman gets a bicycle with the proper height of saddle and a moderately short crank, she may be a graceful rider if she will observe one rule—not to turn the knee outward, but inward, in pressing the foot down. That it is natural to turn the knee out is demonstrated by the small boy, whose knees waggle from side to side like governors on an engine, as he rides his bicycle. With a woman this action stretches the skirts to their utmost width, and causes a very bad showing from behind, and from the front. It will also be found that there is much less fatigue from the inward stroke than from the outward, as the pressure is more direct and with less friction.

There is no royal road to learning to ride the modern safety. It is largely a matter of confidence. Some women learn in an hour and others in a week. Where it is practicable, it is best to go to one of the schools and take a lesson or two from a competent instructor. If this cannot be done, the next plan is to mount the machine near a wall or board fence, where there is a slight incline, and holding the handle with one hand and fending along the wall with the other, move along until confidence is attained. The reason why the wall is advocated rather than a friend with a strong arm is that if the friend is a male he will insist on being at the side of the learner, so as to be ready to receive her in his arms when she is about to fall. The prettier the girl is the more he will adhere to this line of conduct. So long as the support is in full view the rider can see what assistance is given, and she gets rattled the moment she sees it withdrawn. The assistant should keep well to the rear and should support the rider by holding the machine so that the learner cannot tell when the supporting hand is drawn. In this way the correct balance is learned before the rider knows it.

This is the reason why so many girls taught by friends are three times as long in learning to ride as those taught in schools, and even when expert seldom have the style of the school-taught pupil. Miss Frances E. Willard, who is an enthusiastic rider, said recently that she had three teachers before she could master the wheel, and that it was only by the method last described she learned to ride. It took Lady Henry Somerset two months to learn to mount and ride, but by following the directions here given any woman should be able to learn in six lessons of twenty minutes each.

Here is a description of the latest costume for a woman to wear when bicycling. It includes a loose blouse waist and has a skirt made of some loosely webbed fabric which falls into folds of its own accord. The skirt is gored to fit very close around the hips, while from just above the knee to the bottom it is flared or widened. The hem is lightly weighted. This, it is claimed, does away with all display of the ankles and the ugly, cumbersome look from behind, which most of the proposed costumes have been found to possess in actual use. In walking it does not look unbecoming. Knickerbockers or full trousers may be worn under it or not as desired.

Given a properly fitting machine, reasonable skill, and a well-cut skirt, there is only one thing needed to make a woman ride a bicycle gracefully, and that is the limitation of speed. No woman should attempt to ride more than about eight miles an hour on asphalt, or more than six miles an hour on a macadamized road if she values her appearance. Her skirt must have time to fall and drape between the motions of the feet, and this cannot take place if a rapid action of the knees is kept up. A well-mounted woman, riding at a moderate speed, is seldom seen, but when she is met with, every one turns to look at her, and here is given the secret of her superior attractiveness. The woman should set the pace for her escort, not try to keep up with him.

Lady Stanley of Alderley.

The Dowager Lady Stanley of Alderley, whose death took place last month, was in many respects a most remarkable woman. Her great age of 87 was no hindrance to her extraordinary intellectual and physical activity. Within the last few weeks she attended the weekly meeting of the Girls' Public Day School Company (of which she was one of the earliest promoters), had attended a lecture at the Royal Institution on her old friend Carlyle, and had gone, in spite of the severity of the weather, to see a window given by her son, the present Lord Stanley, to a church. As a matter of history it may be recorded that she was born before the Jubilee of George III., was presented at court to George IV., was familiar with the widow of the young Pretender, and was present both at the Coronation and the Jubilee of her Majesty Queen Victoria. More than half a century ago Lady Stanley was one of the original promoters of the Queen's College, and she became one of the members of its first council. She assisted to a great extent, and to the best of her ability, Miss Emily Davies, to whom the foundation of Girton College was primarily and mainly owing. During the whole of her life she has been doing the best that she could do for the recent development of the education of women, never thrusting herself to the front or endeavoring to monopolize the credit that was due to others, and all this good work was accomplished without her neglecting her duties as a woman or taking a due interest in her children, even to the second and third generation. Lady Stanley had twelve children, seven of whom are now living. Even recently she regretted she was not ten years younger to go and explore some of the newly-investigated regions of Central Asia, and as an example of her brightness, it is related that at one of the last visits paid to her by the late Premier, Mr. Gladstone, when he endeavored to turn the subject of conversation from that of politics, in which they differed, by alluding to a recent novel, she is reported to have said, "Do not let us talk of novels; leave them for your old age, as I do," a singular jest for a lady who was 87 when addressed to a statesman of 85.—Philadelphia Ledger.

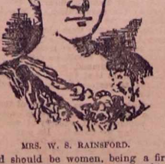
To all who heard the Rev. Dr. William S. Rainsford, of New York, when some eight or nine years ago, he conducted services in Detroit, the vigorous preaching and splendid personality of that earnest fighter in the cause of Christianity have since remained a pleasing memory; and the appended sketch of his wife, who has recently been appointed a trustee of the public schools of New York city, will be read with interest.

Mrs. Rainsford has claims to fame quite separate from those of her distinguished husband, says The New York Times. She has long been that best sort of student of eudcational matters, the loving and practical one, and has grown more and more interested in the scheme of mental training which our public school system offers. She was one of the signers of the memorial recently circulated and presented to the board of education asking that has vacancies should occur in the various wards, two out of the five trustees allowed for each ward should be women, being a firm advocate of men and women working side by side wherever possible. This, she thinks, insures the most satisfactory advance and best results.



MRS. W. S. RAINSFORD.

Mrs. Rainsford is of English birth, and married Dr. Rainsford in London sixteen years ago, sailing with him for Canada where they spent four years. Twelve years ago they came to New York.

Mrs. Rainsford was the only woman to offer to fill the vacancy in her ward on the school board of trustees, this fact, as well as her appointment, being a surprise to her. She has made a close study of kindergarten work, in which she is a firm believer. Concerning our present system of public schools, she finds much to admire; many of the schools are excellent, but she believes there exists room for improvement in others.

Her appointment places in office a woman of just the sort that is needed. Mrs. Rainsford is not radical, but progressive; she understands the subject and enters upon her duties with a desire to co-operate with her associates in in all endeavors to sustain present good conditions, or to earnestly aid any new plans that may seem advisable. In one point Mrs. Rainsford sets an admirable example to other women: she has always been in close touch with the schools attended by her three boys. She has kept herself informed of what was going on by sitting, session after session, in the schoolroom, weighing the good and bad features of what happened there, and lending her influence and assistance to carry out any suggestion she discussed or made.—Detroit Free Press.

Farmers' Daughters.

The farmer's daughter is, as a rule, a strong, whole-hearted, sensible girl. Her father and mother, as they grow older, having no change from the incessant, monotonous routine work of a farm, sometimes become entirely oblivious to the bright, seemingly unnecessary phases of life; and just what they need to rouse them, to lift them out of the rut, is a rightly educated, sweet-tempered daughter, to bring her new-found friends from other places to visit them. The brothers may be overgrown and awkward; they, too, learn much from their sister and her friends. Yes, farmers, make great sacrifices for your daughters. Send them to good schools, encourage them to bring their friends to your home, be as sociable as possible; you will find a new zest in life. If you have trained your girls to be true women they deserve more than common educational advantages, and you will feel amply repaid in later years.

Woman's Waist.

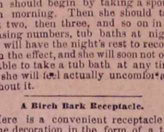
No doubt it will be a relief to some girls with athletic proclivities to know the extreme limit of the size of the waist. A recent article from the pen of an eminent authority on the subject says it is not the proper thing to lace or even to have the appearance of lacing. No waist should be smaller than 24 inches. The proper measurement for the chest of a girl whose waist is that size is 38 inches. Thus it will be seen that the modern beauty must be solid and nearly approach the proportions of the heroic age. The present age is an athletic one, and as long as the young women continue their healthy exercises—lawn tennis, croquet, rowing, riding, bicycling, fencing, and vaulting, jumping, and turning in the gymnasium—bright eyes, good complexions, and firm, well-knit, and muscular figures will be found.

May Prove Aids to Beauty.

A rubber flesh brush is the next best thing to a masseuse. A thorough rubbing of the face and neck twice a day with it is almost equal to a facial massage. It does not irritate the skin as a bristle brush does, and it does exercise every particle of flesh and stimulate the nerves so that the face loses the strained look which one set of tired muscles and and another of unexercised ones give. The women who say and think that a daily bath is debilitating should remember that all unusual exercises are weakening, and that it is only by gradually accustoming one's self to them that strength is gained and maintained. Any one who fears the effect of a daily tub bath should begin by taking a sponge each morning. Then she should take first two, then three, and so on in increasing numbers, tub baths at night. She will have the night's rest to recover from the effect, and she will soon not only be able to take a tub bath at any time, but she will feel actually uncomfortable without it.

A Birch Bark Receptacle.

Here is a convenient receptacle for home decoration in the form of a tambourine. The size can be varied to suit the pieces of bark and the purpose of the receptacle. Large ones are used for newspapers, smaller ones for letter or hair receivers, while a tiny one makes the cutest little jewelry catchalls to suspend beside the dressing table. Light blue and yellow ribbon form the most pleasing contrast with the bark. Photograph frames, bookmarks, cardcases, and in fact almost any article seen made of cardboard can be constructed from the bark where a little taste and patience are exercised.—Ella S. Welch.



Covers Which Spare the Fingers and Improve the Impression.

A boon to typewriters consists in an attachment for the keys of the machine which gives them a soft and yielding surface for the fingers to strike against. The idea is not entirely new, but it is only lately that a cushion for the keys meeting with very much favor among good operators has been introduced. The present device is of hollow rubber, three-sixteenths of an inch deep, with a flat surface, corresponding in size with that of the key itself, and having a metal base which attaches firmly to the key. The characters on each cushion are the same as those on the key to which it is fastened.

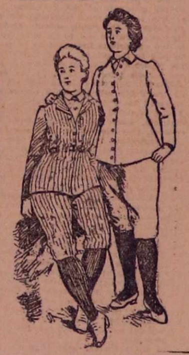
The advantage of resilient key tips compared with those of glass or celluloid used on most machines is plain; by their use the operator's fingers is not battered and chafed from continued manipulation of the keys, and the machine is not so liable to be racked, or the type thrown out of align. Moreover, characters which are small in size and often pierce the paper and injure the cylinder of the machine, are caused to strike with less force, and leave a more even impression on the written page.

For the use of those operators able to write without closely observing the keys, cushions are made on which the characters are omitted altogether. These serve the double purpose of relieving the eyes of the strain imposed upon them by frequently glancing at the keyboard, and of insuring the machine against being tampered with by persons not thoroughly familiar with its use. For the further benefit of the eyes rubber of any desired color is used in making these tips, and the metal base may be coated either with nickel or black enamel. The space-bar of the typewriter is also provided with a cushion of the same height and elasticity as that of the keys.—New York Sun.

This Will Help to Make Thing Look as Good as New.

Almost everyone has about the house some articles of brass that are discolored and ugly looking, but are for divers reasons retained and would be prized were it not for their unattractive appearance and the extremely unpleasant odors that attaches to anything brought in contact with them. It has been asserted by an eminent chemist that a durable and handsome color may be put upon brass by a very simple process. Dissolve one drachm each of sal ammoniac and verdigris in a quart of water. Let this stand over night, covered from the dust, then add three pints of water and strain through a fine cloth. Clean the brass thoroughly from any greasy substance that may attach to it. This is best done in a sal soda bath, after which the piece must be rinsed in clear hot water, then dried and heated over a charcoal fire until the moistened finger will give the hissing sound so familiarly to those who use laundry iron. Immediately coat the surface of the brass with the prepared liquid, laid on with a brush or a soft rag free from lint. As soon as the coating is dry apply another. It is sometimes necessary to put on ten or fifteen coats and twenty are more desirable. This gives a beautiful brownish color not unlike good bronze. If the coats are thoroughly dried between applications, the finish is exceedingly durable. It certainly has the merit of being inexpensive and entirely does away with the disagreeable odor. Although the application of so many coats seem tedious, yet they are put on with great rapidity when one begins and the finished article is so handsome that it well repays the trouble.

Rational Dress in New Zealand.



The accompanying sketch of two fair New Zealanders clad in their "rational" dress is from a photograph reproduced in London Queen. These Rosalinds of the Antipodes are certainly fair to look upon. No doubt they can run like kildees. Their appearance 20 years hence, in the fatness of 40, probably will be less to the esthetic eye.

Lost Woman.

Has it ever occurred to you what a commentary upon our civilization are these lost women, and the attitude of society toward them?

A little child strays from the home inclosure, and the whole community is on the alert to find the wanderer and restore it to its mother's arms. What rejoicing when it is found! What tearful sympathy! What heartiness of congratulation! There are no harsh comments upon poor, tired feet, be they ever so miry; no reprimand for the soiled and torn garments; no lack of kisses for the tear-stained face.

But let the child be grown to womanhood, let her be led from it by the scourge of want; what happens then? Do Christian men and women go in search of her? Do they provide all possible help for her return? Or, if she returns of her own motion, do they receive her with such kindness and delicacy as to secure her against wandering again? Far from it! At the first step she is denounced as lost—lost! echo friends and relatives; "We disown you; don't ever come near to disgrace us!" "Lost!" says society indifferently. "How bad these girls are!" And "Lost, irretrievably lost!" is the prompt verdict of conventional morality, while one and all unite in bolting every door between her and respectability. Ah, will not these lost ones be required at our hands hereafter?

Lace-Edged Ruffs.

Ruffs are in all kinds of fabrics, from velvet to gauze. Lace-edged, they are light and becoming. With smart wings, well spread out, they are suggestive of one of the Christy Minstrels. But it takes a lot of ridicule to kill an absurdity. Perhaps the newest thing in material is the cut-out cloth to be worn over color. Like cut embroidery, the designs are limitless. The star pattern has had a great run. Velveteen is treated in the same manner, and thick satines and moires. Capes are fashionable made of this stamped-out design, and very effective, and they are lightened with the guipure of thick Maltese. The fashion of embroidering such laces is becoming general, but the taste is doubtful.

NO COERCION SAYS SIFTON

Manitoba Will Resist Remedial Legislation.

THE ATTY. GENERAL IN HALDIMAND

Caledonia, Ont., April 13.—Attorney-General Sifton, Grand Chaplain Finn of the Orange Lodge addressed a meeting last night of some 500 people, made up of supporters of both candidates. The former made a speech which lasted over two hours, and when he had sat down, the latter, an old gentleman who hails from Portage la Prairie, stepped to the front and for a few minutes poured forth a perfect torrent of oratory, in which he appealed to the feelings of his audience. It was a perfect whirlwind while it lasted.

Rev. Mr. Finn said he came with a message from the people of Manitoba, who asked Haldimand for help in their hour of need. He said that the Manitoba Legislature had been actuated by the best motives in passing the Public School Act. He denied emphatically that the property of the minority had been confiscated by the Government when it was passed. On the contrary the Catholics had been permitted to share the benefits of $247,000 worth of school property. Not only, said he, are the Government going to provide fetters for the people of Manitoba, but, according to report, they are going to send out to us a Governor to rivet them on. He may find when he gets there, however, that the air of Manitoba is not good for his health. (Laughter.)

Some people, went on the chaplain, have been talking about bullets. If Haldimand marks its ballots right there will be no need for it to send its sons to Manitoba with bullets. There was nothing very new in Mr. Finn's remarks, he confining himself entirely to generalities.

Mr. Sifton started out with an apology for his appearance. If it were not, he said, that the people of Manitoba considered they required the assistance of the people of Haldimand he would not be present. The fact that he was was an evidence that the election in which they have been called upon to exercise their suffrages was no ordinary election, and that no ordinary principles were involved in the contest. He did not, he said, propose to make an oratorical speech, but a plain and clear explanation. Then he went on to state the circumstances under which the present educational law of Manitoba was passed and the reason why it was passed, the principles upon which it was passed and the circumstances under which it had been attacked at the present time.

He announced emphatically that the Manitoba Legislature would refuse to accept and act upon the Remedial Order, and would leave the Government at Ottawa to do its worst.

No greater harm could be done to the Roman Catholic population of Manitoba than to enforce the Remedial Order and restore the former conditions. It was for them that the Government of Manitoba had endeavored to enforce the act and remove the stigma of illiteracy that formerly hung over them. Let them not think that there was an attempt to oppress the Catholic minority. Outside of a few centres the great bulk of the Catholic people desired to be let alone, that they might secure the advantage of the Public schools. Continuing, Mr. Sifton, told how, upon assuming charge of his department, he had sent out a French graduate of McGill College to explain to the French Catholics the advantages of the Public school system. He was instructed not to go secretly, but to tell the priests first that he proposed to talk to the people. After three years the report was that out of the 91 Separate schools prior to 1890, 24 had been disbanded, and the children now attended the Public schools; while others had accepted the Public school system. Mr. Young reported that in newly-formed districts, where the Catholics had full control, they elected at least one English Protestant trustee, in one case the only English Protestant in the district being chosen. That did not look as if the Catholics believed the Government and the Protestants were riding roughshod over the Roman Catholic people.

Mr. Sifton said he had been amazed at the statement of Dr. Montague, that the order was made as a matter of law, and that the Dominion Government had only done what they were required to do. All the Privy Council had decided was that the Government were at liberty to make, or not to make, a remedial order, as they saw fit. It must be decided as any other question of policy, and there was no law either to accuse or to excuse the Government in their decision. Any sane man would say that in deciding that the Government had jurisdiction the Privy Council did not mean to decide the greater question.

The Privy Council said Manitoba Catholics had a grievance. The word was used in a technical sense. The council did not say it was a grievance to be removed. One of the lords of the council expressly said that he would not advise the Dominion Government as to what their action should be.

Dr. Montague said even now that a request only had been sent to Manitoba, while Mr. Ouimet declared that the Government had thrown a protecting arm around the Catholics of Manitoba—two very different views. Mr. Patterson expressed the hope that Manitoba would do justice to the minority. They wanted it settled by Manitoba. If they did why did they not throw out the appeal? Why did they not leave Manitoba to settle it? They had taken it out of Manitoba's hands. What was the fact? The Government wanted to buy 65 votes in Quebec with that Remedial Order. They wanted to buy the votes, and then send the question to Manitoba to be settled. After they had made their deal and got their votes everybody else was to act in a fair and statesmanlike manner.

There had been no complaint against the system in Manitoba. If there had been they would have been promptly redressed. It had been said in certain quarters that the schools were Protestant schools, Protestant religious exercises having been given. From the school law Mr. Sifton quoted to show that the religious instruction was at the option of the trustees, but it was entirely non-sectarian. The passages of scripture were read without note or comment by the teacher, and these were selected so that they would convey nothing of a controversial character.

The order, which, if carried out, would sweep away this system, required the reintroduction of a Separate school system, not as it existed in Ontario or Quebec, with all the improvements of right of inspection and certificated teachers, but as it was in Manitoba prior to 1890, without any of these things. It provided that the Catholic Church should, through its Boards of Education, control a certain proportion of the public money.

It was a principle of the Canadian Confederation that when a province had power to do a certain act the other provinces should not interfere even when they did not agree to it, so long as the act in question did not effect the general policy of the Dominion. That was the Liberal platform, and when Sir John Macdonald was alive the platform of the Conservatives also. He had refused to disallow the school laws of the Maritime Provinces and the Jesuit Estates Act of Quebec. Had he (the speaker) been in the House on that occasion he would not have voted with Mr. McCarthy for disallowance, flagrant as the outrage was, but would have voted against interference, because the act did not interfere with the general policy of the Dominion. Conditions were changed now. Would the Remedial Order have been made in Quebec and had five votes in the Dominion House and Manitoba 65? There was not a member of the Government that was not ashamed of it, not one that wanted to make it; not one, French or English, that did not know he was trading sound constitutional principles for votes. Dr. Montague had said the order did not mean that the Government would introduce remedial legislation—the order was a sort of toy gun. Mr. Ouimet in Vercheres said that if Manitoba did not act on the order the Government of the Dominion would introduce a bill restoring the rights of the Catholics of Manitoba, and Mr. Ouimet was right. The Government were bound to carry out their order-in-council or become the laughing stock of the people. So sure as Parliament would meet on April 18, and the Legislature of Manitoba resuming on May 9, refused, as it would refuse—to carry out the Remedial Order, the Dominion Goverment would introduce remedial legislation.

Talk of rebellion in Manitoba was heard in the event of an attempt being made to enforce such a law. As far as he knew, the people of Manitoba were as loyal to the Crown and as proud of the flag as any people in Canada, and, as the constitutional advisers of the Crown and loyal Canadians, the Government of Manitoba would not resist the law or do anything illegal. So far, however, as the law would enable them to resist it, so far as it could be done by law and through the constitution, it would be resisted to the end.

If Dr. Montague were elected the Government would be able to say: "We have got a mandate to pass remedial legislation," and they would be right. The people of Haldimand, by re-electing him, would declare that they approved of the attempt to restore Separate schools in Manitoba.

The Northwest was the hope of the Dominion. If it did not develop and become populous and wealthy it would be a sad thing for Canada. Its people were striving to lay a proper foundation for the future, and were met by a most unjustifiable attempt to destroy the school system and place the province in a position where it would be impossible to carry on efficient schools. The electors of Haldimand must decide between Dr. Montague and the destruction of the Manitoba school system.

D'Alton McCarthy was present, and so was A. T. Hunter of Toronto, who in reply to an attack made upon him the night before by Dr. Montague, characterized the candidate as an oratorical bruiser.

Mr. McCarthy's speech was a repetition of his recent utterances on the school question.

Tupper's Pledge of Remedial Legislation

Halifax, N.S., April 12.—The Antigonish Casket, a Catholic religious weekly, hitherto independent, comes out squarely in favor of the Government candidate, and declares Sir Hibbert Tupper has stated the Government is pledged to remedial legislation.

It says: "As for the question whether the Government by the action it has taken is bound in the event of Manitoba's refusal or neglect to introduce remedial legislation as a ministerial measure, the matter has happily been removed from the region of opinion, and conjecture by the unequivocal declaration of the Minister of Justice at the Court House last evening that the Government was pledged in the event of Manitoba refusing or neglecting to comply with the order to introduce remedial legislation and carry it through."

MANITOBA WATCHING HADIMAND

Winnipeg, Man., April 11.—Intense interest is felt throughout Manitoba in the bye-election in Haldimand, and Manitobans are watching the progress of the fight eagerly, as they feel that the result may be fraught with great importance to this province in the matter of the school difficulty.

The Tribune, which speaks for the Greenway Government, will say to-morrow: Sir Charles Tupper in Antigonish and Hon. J. A. Ouimet in Vercheres are stating clearly and positively that if Manitoba refuses to obey the Remedial Order the Dominion Parliament will be asked at the approaching session to pass the legislation requisite to restore the Separate school system as it existed prior to 1890. It is true Montague in Haldimand is not so strong in statement as his colleagues, but he does not and cannot deny that they accurately indicate the intention of the Government. There can now be but one issue before the electors of Canada. The electors of Haldimand are the first to have it placed squarely before them; upon them is imposed a high duty; it is their privilege to now settle this burning question, which is setting Canada aflame. If Dr. Montague is beaten the Government will not fulfil its pledge to Quebec. That is perfectly clear. The battle for this province is now being fought out in Haldimand. If beaten there the Government is beaten everywhere. Let us fervently hope, therefore, that the men of Haldimand will rise to the momentous question. The Liberals there who have always adhered to the doctrine of provincial rights should rush to the support of Mr. McCarthy, whose whole platform is embraced in these words: "Never since Confederation has there been a time when the electors are so urgently called upon to display patriotism and to sink partisanship.

Nor do we believe that Mr. McCarthy will find the support confined to the ranks of the Liberals, for the Orange element, which is the backbone of Ontario Conservatism, is strong in Haldimand. If the electors of that historic constituency punish one of those ministers, who, in servile obedience to the bidding of ecclesiastical Quebec, have declared themselves ready to humiliate this province before the civilized world they will merit the profound gratitude of our people. We do not fear the consequence of defeat. Ultimately we must succeed, but give us this one victory and our national school system, our right to deal with our local affairs, free from outside interference, are alike established upon a permanent foundation.

Robbed a Treasury Wagon of $15,000.

Cripple Creek, Col., April 13.—At 10.30 o'clock this morning the overland Wells-Fargo treasury wagon from Grassy Station, the terminus of the Midland road, was held up by two masked men and robbed. The robbers took all the valuables, with the treasury box, bills of lading and way bills. They then shot and beat the guard, Robert Smith, so badly that he will die.

How Chicago Police Raised Their Salaries

Chicago, April 13.—Mayor Swift is in possession of affidavits giving the names of police officials who received in an aggregate $7000 a month in bribes from gamblers. It is related in the affidavits that there came here from New York a year ago four notorious thieves, who brought with them a band of boys who had been trained to be pick-pockets. An arrangement was effected with certain officials by which these young criminals were to be allowed to operate in the streets here.

Wilde's Books Not Withdrawn in London

London, April 13.—The chief librarian of the British Museum denies the statement circulated yesterday that the books and publications written by Oscar Wilde had been withdrawn from public use in the library of that institution. An act of Parliament compels the museum to keep in its possession and accessible to the public copies of all publications copyrighted in the United Kingdom, except such as may be personally libelous. The question of withdrawing Wilde's works has not been considered at all. The rumor of their withdrawal was probably due to the difficulty experienced by enquirers for the books in getting them, owing to the great rush of curious persons who desire to look through them.

The Wife of Lascelles, Alias Beresford Seeks Her Freedom

New York, April 13.—The report that Mrs. Sidney Lascelles, whose maiden name was Maud Lillienthal, and who is heiress to $1,000,000, is about to begin an action for divorce against her husband, who represented himself to be Lord Beresford, revives popular interest in that accomplished swindler. Lascelles is serving a five years' sentence in Georgia for swindling a citizen of that state out of $1000 by a note in 1891. Lascelles met the Lilienthals, mother and daughter, in London. His appearance and accomplishments fascinated the girl, and it was in vain that her mother, suspicious of the suitor, hurried her daughter to Algiers, and then back to the family homestead on the Hudson. Lascelles followed, and in January, 1891, lured Miss Lilienthal into a secret marriage in Beaver, Pa.

Lascelles, who traveled through Canada in 1891 as Lord Beresford, swindled a St. Thomas bank manager out of $[illegible],200 and cut a wide swathe in that city and Toronto for a time.

In the district or intermediate championship the number was more than double the previous season.

To Measure Thought.

The new instrument to measure thought is something no home should be without. It is a great invention, but the beef-witted won't care whether their brains work at the rate of .300 per second or not. If the fine-looking, intelligent inventor of this wonder of the century would kindly invent something to make people think, it would be worth more than merely calculating the rapidity of an idea. But this must come. Some inventor will make a brain power machine before the next century is very old that will surely put nature

No Patron Nominee

Cayuga, April 10.—At the Patron convention to-day it was decided not to put a candidate in the field, as the issue was the Manitoba school question, which is not a Patron plank. The members are free to vote as they please. The action of the Patron members in the Provincial Legislature was endorsed.

TO MEET THE BIG DEFICIT

A Big Reduction Will Be Made in the Estimates.

SALARY OF A PRIVY COUNCIL JUDGE

The Speech From the Throne Will Deal Mainly With the Manitoba Question and the Newfoundland Conference—Cape Colony and a Trade Treaty.

Ottawa, April 13.—During the past few days communications have been passing between the Governments of Canada and Cape Colony, in reference to a commencement of negotiations for a trade treaty between the two countries. In response to an inquiry from Right Hon. Cecil Rhodes, Cape Premier, as to a convenient meeting place, Sir Mackenzie Bowell said that either Ottawa or London would be acceptable to the Dominion Government. In official circles here, however, it is not expected that anything will be done until after the session of Parliament.

As soon as the negotiations with the Newfoundland delegates are concluded, which will probably be to-morrow, the ministers will proceed to draft the Speech from the Throne. Each minister is asked to indicate what subjects relating to his department, in his opinion, are sufficiently important to justify mention in the speech. It is generally understood here that the Newfoundland negotiations and the action of the Government on the Manitoba school question will be the two principal topics referred to.

Preparation for the coming session are being pushed apace in the departments. It is expected that the main estimates will pass the council on Saturday, and that when they are brought down to the House they will show a considerable reduction on previous years.

Some of the Newfoundland delegates' public utterances on Confederation indicates proposals for a fast steam ferry service between Port Basque and the nearest point of Cape Breton Island. That would be Aspy Bay. In interview with a Cape Breton man to-day he stated that the object is chimerical. It would involve 120 miles extension of the Cape Breton Railway, partly through a very rugged country, to reach a point that would never be made a safe or convenient harbor. He says the present terminus of the Cape Breton Railway at North Sydney affords an excellent terminus. It is 120 miles from Port Basque, and Aspy Bay is 80 miles.

The announcement from England of the intention of the Imperial Government to introduce a bill to enable colonial judges to sit on the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council occasions no surprise here, as it has long been felt that colonial representation on this important body was only a question of time. Until details of the proposed measure are known it cannot be said whether the Imperial proposals will be acceptable to Canada. If they are simply carrying out an Imperial suggestion of two or three years ago, then it may be safely affirmed that they will not be received with much favor in the colonies. At the time referred to Sir John Thompson was freely mentioned as a possible representative of Canada on the Judicial Committee, and everybody admitted that he would have made a splendid law lord, his legal attainments being such as to qualify him to sit on the bench of the highest court in the land. The Imperial proposal was that Canada or Australia could have a representative on the Judicial Committee providing the colony nominating the judge paid his salary and expenses. The Dominion Government would not entertain such a proposal. If the salary had to be voted annualy it might lead to criticism in Parliament, and probably to party strife. The conduct of the judge might be unjustly criticised and his motives impugned, with the result that his influence would be weakened. It was felt that whoever went from Canada to the Judicial Committee, whether Sir John Thompson or Mr. Blake, he should be removed altogether from the domain of party politics, consequently the Imperial proposal was rejected.

A cable message was received from the High Commissioner to-day, stating that there was a possibility of Mr. Ward, Postmaster-General of New Zealand, returning home by the Canadian route. In that event he would visit Ottawa and discuss with Sir Mackenzie Bowell the possibility of a preferential trade arrangement between the two colonies.

There was consternation in the public departments Thursday over the irresponsible intimation in a Montreal newspaper that there would be no statutory increases for civil servants this year, but on the contrary there would be a reduction in salaries of from five to ten per cent. The discreet paragrapher "evened up" by lopping off $1000 from the salaries of all Cabinet Ministers. Everybody wanted to know if the report was true. To set the matter at rest your correspondent saw the guardian of the Dominion strong box. The Minister laughed heartily when he heard the report, and said it was news to him. He authorized me to say that the matter of reducing the salaries of civil servants had not been contemplated by the Government.

The annual report of the Department of Indian Affairs was issued to-day. Since he was appointed Deputy Superintendent-General, Mr. Reed has endeavored to acquaint himself with the condition of the Indians in the older provinces. In this connection he says: "I have been somewhat disappointed to observe a want of that energy and progress which are striking features of not a little of Indian life of the west. Some bands, which have reached a point towards which many in the west are still struggling, manifest a lack of desire for further improvement, and do not care to avail themselves of the macninery provided by the Advancement Act. There seems, generally speaking, to be too much inclination to take advantage of such exemptions as special legislation has necessarily provided for the protection of Indians in the earlier stages of evolution, and to shrink from assuming the responsibilities of citizenship. It will be the department's endeavor to trace to their sources the causes productive of this apathetic attitude and to provide the necessary incentive to further progress, for experience has shown that Indians are peculiarly sensitive to the operation of the law by which, when progression ceases, retrogression begins.

Hiccoughed For Ten Months.

Lynn, Mass., April 11.—Mary B. Croughan, aged 25, died to-day after hiccoughing since last July. A tumorous growth in the throat was the cause of the trouble.

The latest engineering and ship canal idea is to dispense with the twenty-four locks in the Welland Canal leading from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario, and to make the whole drop of 326 feet between these two lakes in two pneumatic balance locks, built of steel, operated by compressed air, and large enough to admit vessels of ocean draught. The greatest lock now in existence is on the Manchester Ship Canal, forty-five feet high.

A war generally makes as well as mars many private fortunes, and the Chino-Japanese campaign has brought unheard-of prosperity to Tien-Tsin hatters. Tailors and bootmakers are working night and day on clothing for the troops, dealers in cereals are at their wits' end to supply sufficient rice, millet and flour, and bankers are building extra strong vaults for the money sent to them for security from the various towns threatened by the Japanese invasion.

THE BENEFITS OF TARIFF REDUCTION

A man can scarcely be expected to see with a silver dollar clapped over each eye and for this reason we cannot but excuse the blind unreasonableness of the Tory press in its persistence in mistating Liberal speakers and Liberal principles. One of their favorite hallucinations is that the benefits to be derived from the lowering of the tariff walls between Canada and the United States is all theory without any foundation in the facts of experience.

But reciprocity is not a mere theory as regards the effect to be produced. The old reciprocity treaty extending from 1854 to 1866 affords practical illustration of the benefits to be derived from interchange of trade with the United States. During the twelve years that treaty remained in operation our exports to the United States nearly quadrupled; rising from $10,473,000 in 1854 to $39,950,000 in 1866 from all the provinces now embraced within the bounds of the Dominion. The period during which the treaty remained in force was one of marked prosperity for all the provinces. Since the abrogation of the treaty in 1866 our export trade with the United States has practically remained stationary though maintaining the average annual increase from 1854 to 1866 would have carried it up for 1893 to over $100,000,000; the actual amount having been for that year $87 296,110 of the produce of Canada, not including coin and bullion the produce of Canada, which amounted to an additional $309,459.

Yellow as guinea.—The complexion in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick headache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURES which is a most an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. The Iguana.

The iguana is a very little fellow, who belongs, like his cousins, the gecko and the chameleon, to a very big family. This family includes such large animals as alligators, crocodiles, lizards and many other strange creatures. The iguana has a long, slender body, tapering in a curious way into a point. He has a queer crest running from his head to the end of his tail, and his body is covered with small scales. A soft pouch or bag hangs from below his chin, but for what purpose it is used naturalists seem to be divided in opinion. Some iguanas live in trees, others dig themselves holes in the ground, and some varieties live upon the seashore and are quite fond of swimming about in the water. The eggs of the iguana are usually laid in the sand and are not hard like a hen's egg, but soft, like leather, and yellow in color. The iguana's tail, like that of most of his cousins, is very useful to him. He uses it for a weapon, slapping and inflicting severe wounds upon his enemies by means of its sharp notches. In the water he uses his tail like a snake, drawing his legs closely to his side and projecting himself along by means of the tails alone. The iguana is a fierce-looking little reptile when attacked. He raises himself upon his forelegs, looking very savage, but he is not really brave, and if you should come across an iguana nodding his head at you and trying to frighten you to death by wagging his tail just stamp your foot at him and he will quickly lower his crest and scurry off into his hole.—New York World.

A Napoleon Story.

In these days when everybody is reading and talking about Napoleon Bonaparte, it is interesting to hear the story current in England that at one time a vessel was undertaken to be built at Battersea by the renowned Johnson, the smuggler, for the purpose of liberating Bonaparte from the Island of St. Helena.

The vessel was about 90 feet long, and of the burden of 100 tons. It was built of half-inch plank. The grain of two such planks was placed in a vertical, and the other two in a horizontal position. These planks were so well caulked and cemented together that the thickness of the sides of the vessel did not exceed that of an ordinary washing-tub.

The masts were so contrived that they could be lowered to a level with the deck, and the whole vessel might be sunk in shoal water with the crew on board without danger. Ample means were provided for supplying the vessel with fresh air.

The plan was to sail up at night within a short distance of St. Helena, and sink the vessel until the next or some subsequent night, when Bonaparte would be enabled to make his escape to the beach, at which time the vessel was to be raised, Bonaparte to get on board and sail away in the dark.

It happened, however, that Bonaparte died before the vessel was quite finished, and it is a curious coincidence that she was to be coppered the very day the news of his death arrived.

Johnson was to have received £40,000 as soon as the vessel got into blue water, exclusive of the reward to be given in case the enterprise succeeded.—Philadelphia Times.

HAPLESSNESS OF HEZEKIAH.

I don't know anyone for who I am sorrier than I am for Hezekiah Heston.

Hezekiah is a good fellow and always was, but he never seemed to have the 'luck a real good man should have, and very often does not.

But I have been particularly sorry for him since that Kitty Clone affair. Kitty was by all odds the prettiest girl in town, and Hezekiah, like most of the other courting men in that vicinity fell in love with her. She was tawny-haired with snapping black eyes and a tongue that was as sharp as a two edged razor, but she was as bright as a dollar in a basket of chips, and she had only to smile to have a retinue of men at her beck and nod at once.

I stood closer to Hezekiah than any man in town, and practically knew his inmost thoughts. In fact, I was the only one he confided in after the Kitty Clone affair. Kitty, before that, being little nearer to him, he thought, than I was.

He confided the whole story to me, and I cannot refrain from telling it now.

For some subtile purpose, not at the time apparent, Kitty had indicated very plainly, her preference for Hezekiah, and a happier man no one ever saw in our town. But preference, merely, was not what Hezekiah sought, and he let her see that quite early.

It began to happen one moonlight night on her father's porch, where the honey-suckles clambered over the roof and the sweet wild rose vine entwined the corner. Through the trellised vines the silver shafts of the moon shot that soft night in June and fell in sifted strands over Kitty and Hezekiah sitting in the mellow shadows. If the nightingale had been indigenous to that section I am sure it would have added its liquid notes to the music in Hezekiah's heart, but there was no nightingale, and Hezekiah did not miss it. Kitty was enough for him, and Kitty sat close beside him, and every word she spoke was a bird song to him.

"Did you know, Miss Kitty," he said, tentatively, for Hezekiah was not a brash lover, and he had not mentioned the sacred subject of love to her, although he had thought up a thousand ways by which he might, and had thrown them all aside when the time came. 'Did you know that I have something to say to you."

"Well, she twinkled, "I should hope you had, Mr. Heston. I'm sure I don't want to do all the talking."

"I could listen to you if you did, I am sure," he replied with a halting, helplessness of manner that men have sometimes in the moonlight.

"That sounds so much like sweethearts' talk," she twittered, as she shook the gold of her pretty hair out into the line of the silver light with its scent of honeysuckles and roses.

"Perhaps it is," he ventured doubtfully.

"But I am sure you don't want to talk such nonsense to me," she protested.

"Why not?" he asked so promptly that he frightened himself.

But not Kitty; oh, no.

"Because," she answered, "we have known each other so long that it would sound silly for you to say such things to me."

'Must a man select a stranger if he wants to confide to a woman all that is in his heart?" he inquired with a gravity that made her laugh.

"Oh, I suppose not. Still, it doesn't seem quite natural for you to make love to me."

"If I did, what would you say?"

"I really don't know, Mr. Heston," she said, tucking her head down and blushing, perhaps, though it was not visible in the shadows of the porch.

"You know," he went on, with more courage, now that he had made the start, "that I have recently come into a little fortune of something like 10,000 and——"

"I thought it had come in to you," she interrupted with a pleasant little bird note of a chuckle.

Hezekiah was just stupid and slow enough to be delighted with such flashes of feminine wit, and Kitty's brightness in this respect was always a charm to him. He liked it now, but with a shade of reflex action, for the flash of it had dazzled him when he was on the path to telling her what was in his heart.

"Isn't it just the same?" he asked with a laugh, half of admiration and half of nervousness.

"Oh, of course, but what were you about to say? Excuse me for interrupting you."

"Do you want me to say it?" he asked, so eagerly that she laughed at him again.

"How do I know? It may be something dreadful."

"It is something about the sweetest thing in the world," he said bravely to her.

'Frank Moore said I was that," she answered, with a demureness that was distracting. "Is it about me?"

Hezekiah got up and walked to the edge of the porch. He looked fiercely up at the moon as if he thought there ought to be blood on it, but there wasn't, and the sweet odors of the night were wafted to him on the silently stirring breeze, and he was soothed.

"Whatever is the matter?" she asked, in the querulous tone of young women under similar circumstances, and he tuned to her again.

"Kitty," he said, droping the polite title of young ladyhood, "it is you, and it is me too. Both of us," he added, regardless of syntax.

"Who ever said you were the sweetest thing in the world, I'd like to know?" she laughed, and Hezekiah though he could see the keen edge of her tongue flash in the moonlight.

"You never did," he replied in the surliest manner.

"Oo," she crooned to him softly, in the language of the cradle, "has de little tootsy wootsy pinched his b'essed little fum?"

Hezekiah went to the edge of the porch again, and was about to shake his fist at the moon, when he saw someone open the gate from the street and come up the walk toward the house. It was the hated Frank Moore, and Hezekiah had only a minute to make his peace with the sarcastic goddess.

"Kitty," he exclaimed, desperately, as he came back to her, "there comes Moore. It's only 9 o'clock, and he will stay here all evening. I can't say all I want to say but I can say this much—I love you, Kitty, and I want you to be my wife. Will you?"

'Come to-morrow night," she said in the softest whisper, and the gentle pressure of her hand spoke a sweeter language to him than even the music of her lips.

"Ah, Frank," greeted Hezekiah, as his late rival came up, "I'm glad to see you, real glad"—and he was speaking the solemn truth, for there is no telling how much time he would have wasted if Moore hadn't come just as he did—"I was about going, and it looks like a pity to leave Miss Kitty all alone amidst this bower of honeysuckles, moonshine, roses and June. Come and take my place. I am sure she will welcome you with open arms, or words to that effect."

"Why, Mr. Heston," protested Miss Kitty, you are really brilliant this evening. Who taught you how? It must be an acquired habit. I am sure it isn't natural."

Moore laughed at this pleasant persinage of Kitty's. Everybody laughed at Kitty's wit, except the victim of it, but on this occasion, even the victim laughed, for he could yet feel the ecstacy of Kitty's hand clasping his, and could yet hear the music of her words, "Come to-morrow night."

Of course Mr. Moore apologized for disturbing their tete-a-tete, and said he had merely dropped in for a minute, but men are given to that kind of palliating prevarication, and he sat down in the most comfortable place he could find, before Hezekiah had left the porch.

Hezekiah did not tarry long after this, but Mr. Moore remained for two hours, chattering with Miss Kitty, and then they separated, leaving the moon, the honeysuckles and the roses out in the June night all alone. The stars twinkled in the silver blue sky, the fragrance of the flowers filled the air, and far down the quiet street, Hezekiah sat by his open window dreaming the night away, and there was a smile on his face as if an angel had come in the glory of the moonlight and touched him with the breath of June.

And the next night it rained.

But there was sunshine, and moonlight and honeysuckles and roses and June in Hezekiah's heart, and he was promptly in piquant Kitty's pretty parlor early on the night of the morrow which had promised so much to him.

Alas, how easily things go wrong and so forth.

They quarrelled, and Hezekiah went out into the night, gloomier than the night was. All the music of her voice was a discord and the dank, dark air was filled with an odor as of dead honeysuckles and roses, and a decaying June.

But the next night was perfect again, and once more Hezekiah sat with Miss Kitty on the porch and the moon was flooding the valley with the yellow light that marks it as it rests upon the distant mountain tops.

"Kitty," said Hezekiah, in the voice of a penitent, "can you forgive me?"

"I can, Mr. Heston, but will I?" she answered, not unkindly.

"Won't you?" he pleaded.

"And if I do?" she asked with a coyness that charmed him.

"You will marry me," he said so firmly that she trembled.

"Then I'll forgive you," and her saucy face was buried in his coat front, and the gold of her tresses threw a soft light into his face that gave it the look of a seraph's.

And it came to pass according to the prophecy of Hezekiah.

That's why I'm so sorry for Hezekiah Heston. I'm Hezekiah Heston, and Kitty has been my wife for twenty years, and her hair is no less tawny, nor is her tongue less sharp, than when the honeysuckles, the roses, the moonlight and June threw their gentle glamour o'er the scene.

TRAPPING A BURGLAR.

The broken hinges creaked and the shingles rattled on the roof! And the bloody stripe of sunset over the leafless tree-tops in the west grew fainter and more lurid, and the dusk came creeping up the valley like a visible form of darkness. Isabel Penrith shuddered as she stood at the window with her eyes fixed on the melancholy landscape.

"Oh, I never can stop here!" she thought.

She was a tall, finely-made girl of 18, with a face which, although not beautiful, possessed the highest charm of expression.

Isabel was the third one of the Penwith girls who had been sent "on trial," as it were, from the bustling little seaport town where Joseph Penrith struggled with fortune in behalf of his large family, as best he might, to the desolate Wilde farm house. Aunt Penelope was a childless widow, with property to leave, and when she graciously signified her will and pleasure to adopt and provide for one of her brother's tall girls, the chance was grasped at. Mary had cried for three days when she came to Aunt Pen's, from sheer home-sickness, and the old lady had wrathfully pronounced her "a poor, limp thing." Agatha, the next, had broken Aunt Pen's favorite tea pot, and was packed home with less ceremony than if she had been a firkin of butter.

And now Isabel's turn had come.

Aunt Pen was sitting by the fire, surveying with no little complacency some purchases she had made of a peddler. Aunt Pen was rich in woodland, and pine logs cost but little, so there was a great, genial blaze of resinous logs that made the room light.

"This ain't bad for 16 cents, Isabel," said the old lady, drawing the fabric critically over her nail. "And the color's jist what I like."

"Yes, it is very pretty," said Isabel, mechanically.

'I got a real bargain in it. That fellow had a better assortment than travelling merchants generally have."

Isabel said nothing. To tell the truth she had experienced rather a feeling of relief that afternoon when the door was safely bolted behind the peddler. She had not fancied his rat-like eyes, nor the furtive glances with which he had surveyed the premises. She had imagined that his eyes had followed Aunt Penelope rather too closely when she went to get the money to pay for her purchase. But she said nothing of all this to her Aunt Penelope, but let her enjoy her bargains to her heart's content.

Just as she placed a candle on the stand, however, a knock sounded at the door, and, opening it, she beheld the peddler with his pack still balanced on his shoulder.

"I've come back, miss," he said, apologetically. "I missed the right road somehow, and it was growing dark, so I thought perhaps the old lady would give me house room for a night."

Isabel turned with a doubtful, questioning face to her aunt.

"Of course, of course," said the old lady, good humoredly. "We ain't savages here to turn a homeless wanderer away from our door."

He made himself no disagreeable guest, however, during the long spring evening. Anecdote and adventure were familiar to him, and he evinced the greatest interest in Aunt Penelope's ailments.

'I think he's a very pleasant sort of a man," said Aunt Pen, in high good humor, when he had gone up to bed, and she was raking up the fire, with Isabel leaning on the mantel.

"Aunt Pen," said Isabel, hesitatingly, "I—I should like to sleep with you to-night!"

"Sleep with me? Why, yes, if you're a mind to. But what's the matter? You arn't afeard, are you?"

"N—no, but the room upstairs is so lonely, and the noise of the rats in the garret makes me nervous."

"Get your things, then. But you'll get used to all these outlandish noises after a while."

Isabel ran upstairs after her night-dress. She involuntarily quickened her steps as she passed the door of the north chamber, where the peddler was ensconced. It might have been her fancy, but she certainly imagined that the door of that apartment was ajar.

Aunt Penelope was leisurely preparing for bed as her neice came fluttering down the stairway. Isabel looked curiously round the room as she set down her candle.

"Yes; it's your Uncle Wilde's, that I ha'nt never had the heart to put away since he died. He thought a dreadful sight on't!"

"Is it loaded?"

"No, to be sure it aint."

"But, Aunt Pen, don't you think it would be safer to have it loaded, in case of—of thieves or burglars?"

"May be 'twould," said Aunt Pen; "but there ha'nt been no one here to look arter it, and I can't load it."

"I could, Aunt Pen. I have often loaded my brother Tom's revolver. Where are the balls?"

"In the cupboard; but it's a rusty old thing, and I'm afeard for you to handle it, Isabel."

"I can oil the rusty spots, aunt."

"There," said Isabel, replacing it on its hooks, "now we shall feel safer."

"May be so, but I never was troubled with burglars, and I don't expect I ever shall be."

So saying, the worthy old lady turned over on the pillow, and fell asleep.

Isabel, however, was restless. She tossed and turned; now closing her eyes and trying to woo sleep, now straining them out of the uncurtained window opposite. The house seemed full of strange, unearthly sounds—the shutters flapped against the siding and droves of rats and mice scurried overhead, between plastering and floor, like small regiments of infantry.

What was that stealthy sound? Isabel listened intently.

She was right. It was the fall of footsteps softly descending the stairs; and the next instant the gleam of a lantern betrayed the outline of the peddler's form, stealing quietly into the very room where she lay.

Oh, for the pistol now! but it hung over the mantel, and the burly figure of the marauder interposed between! He went straight to the door of the pantry closet, from which he had doubtless seen poor Aunt Pnelope take her bank bills that very afternoon, and tried it. It was locked.

He paused an instant, then turned and began to search in the various little nooks and repositiories about Aunt Pen's old-fashioned bureau top.

Now was her opportunity. His back was towards her, and with a skillful calculation of time and distance, she thought she could steal across the room and secure the pistol.

She had just balanced herself on her elbow, with one foot on the floor, when an inadvertent movement of the man's hand overturned a camphor bottle upon a china match box. Both clinked noisily, and Aunt Penelope awoke.

"Why! Who's there Isabel! Isabel!"

"Hold your tongue, you old fool!" ejaculated the peddler, "unless you want me to beat your brains out with the shovel."

But Aunt Penelope shrieked on, never considering, with all a woman's inconsistency, that there was no ear to hear within a good two miles. Isabel peremptorily silenced her, holding the bed-clothes over her wide-open mouth.

"Hush, aunt! He will not hurt us. All he wants is the money. He will not harm us if we tell you where the silver and the money are, sir?"

"That's a sensible way of looking at things," said the midnight visitor. "Where's the key to that closet?"

Aunt Pen still struggled, however. "I'd as soon he should kill me as take the money I've been savin' up these years. Shoot him, why don't you, Isabel? Where's the pistol?"

With one long stride the ruffian possessed himself of the firearm.

"Here's the pistol, old lady, and you'll get a taste of it if you don't stop that squeaking! Where's the key?"

"In the upper drawer, close to the right," directed Isabel.

"Isabel! Are you crazy? All the money! and all my bonds! and the silver plate. Help! Murder!"

"There is no use, aunt; he is stronger than we are, and he has the pistol besides!"

The man meanwhile calmly unlocked the door of the closet with the key to which Isabel had directed him.

But as he entered and stepped up on the wooden chair that stood there to reach the treasures, Isabel sprang up, noiseless as a shadow, flew across the room, and closing the door on him, locked it before he could turn.

Then she sank, pale and without strength, on a chair, covering her eyes with her hands, while Aunt Penelope sat up in bed staring blankly.

"Quick, aunt! we have no time to lose! He's safe until we can hurry over to Deacon Perriman's and obtain help."

The villain rained blows upon the stout panels with feet and hands, and shouted threats, entreaties, and execrations in vain, while Isabel and her aunt attired themselves with trembling hands. The lock, however, was strong and the hinges intact, and safely defied attack.

Half an hour or so afterwards Deacon Perriman with two or three of his farm hands made their appearance on the scene of action and released the human rat from his trap.

"Guess we'll lock him up in the cellar until mornin'," said the Deacon, as he surveyed the sullen face of the detected thief. 'So you trapped him, did you, Miss I'bel? Wal, 'twas pretty well done!"

"And I half believed she was in league with him at one time," confessed Aunt Pen, patting the girl's head. "My dear, I don't know how I'm ever going to thank you."

The cuprit was safely committed to the county pail before that day's sun went down, and Aunt Pen's apprehensions "lest he should get away," were calmed.

"I tell you what, Isabel," said the old lady, "I'll send that silver and money to the bank, and we'll get Stokes and his wife to come here and stay with us nights. I don't think it's quite safe to sleep here alone."

When Isabel Penrith next wrote home, she told her parents of her adventure, and enclosed a $50 bill to help pay the rent.

"And Aunt Pen is so kind to me," she wrote, 'and I am very happy here, although it is a little lonely."

"Upon my word," said Joseph Penrith, as he read the letter, 'our little Isabel is a heroine."—R. A., in New York News.

A NATION ON STILTS.

Through Dreary Wastes of Sand—Their Stilt Races Are Novel and Exciting and Show Wonderful Skill and Speed.

Probably the most curious community in Europe to-day is that of the Landais, the famous stilt-walkers, who make their home in a little corner of Gascony, bordering on the Bay of Biscay, and have been tucked away there ever since that region was known as the English Province of Aquitaine.

Time and the encroachment of scientific ideas are gradually bloting out their individuality, but even now Landes is little traversed, and although its inns are bad, and its railroads nil, it is one of the most fascinating sections of France.

Landes has a curious and unprecedented history. For years its fate hung on a thread, and it came very near being a French desert of Sahara. Not from choice or peculiarity did its inhabitants become stilt-walkers. They were forced into the habit of travelling by the aid of poles for the simple reason that their land was becoming a waste of sand. Landes borders on the seashore, and the strong, crisp choppy winds from the Bay of Biscay sweep across its coast, driving the fine white sand inland in enormous quantities and piling up dunes or sandhills far back from the shore.

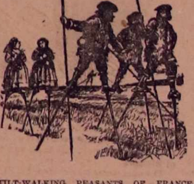
Steadily the land grew more desolate and sand-blown. Walking by aid of the feet alone became impossible. Even now, with the country half-reclaimed as it is, it takes a strong and vigorous man to make ten miles a day of straight progress, travelling directly on the soles of his feet. Half a century ago even this was out of the question.

From time immemorial stilts have been in use among the inhabitants. The hardy peasants of the region, men and women alike—but men especially, for the reason that the women of the Landes are mostly stay-at-home bodies—go through the country with great strides, stepping from tuft to tuft of heather so unerringly that the sand does not impede their progress.

Dressed in sheepskin coats, with rough, baggy trousers, footless knee stockings of heavy wool, with their feet bare, their head surmounted by the dark blue beret of the Gascons, they present a picturesque sight. The stilts they use come up to the knee only and are strapped there, the stilt-walker being about four feet from the ground. The crotch on which the fot rests is covered with sheepskin, with the woolly side turned out.

The peasant also carries a long staff. When he wishes to get on his feet he swings himself up with it, and by its aid it is possible to drop himself down without any appreciable jolt. Among the shepherds the chief occupation throughout the day is the knitting of stockings, and while at work on this usually feminine industry the peasant steadies himself with his balancing pole stuck in the sand, the other end resting against the small of his back.

The occupations of the Landais are much as they were in the old days: the tending of sheep, resin gathering and charcoal burning. The sheep are poor and scrawny, and their wool does not bring a particularly good price in the French market, but the herdsmen are paid living wages.



STILT-WALKING PEASANTS OF FRANCE TENDING THEIR SHEEP.

The resin-gathering industry is a more profitable one. The skilled resineur is an important man throughout the country, though he has to live away from his family, and in ill-conditioned huts in the midst of the forest at least six days of the week, and endure many privations. When actually engaged in gathering resin the peasant of the Landes dispenses with stilts. He leans up against the tree a ladder that is truly primeval, as it consists merely of a stick in which crotches have been cut. Up this he climbs, and, pole in hand, first stripping off the bark, knocks off the resinous lumps that are exposed to view. At the foot of the tree he has a little earthen pot to catch the fluid resin that is constantly dripping, and which is the most valuable in the provincial markets.

In some ways the Landais are more Spanish than French. Living so near the boundary line, and just on the southermost slope of the Pyrenees, they have imbibed many the Spanish likings, and chief among them the love for bull-fighting. So pronounced did this taste become that the French Government has recently found it necessary to put its foot down forcibly against bull fights in the Grandes Landes.

They were always mild affairs, however, and at the very worst, but feeble imitations of the Spanish national amusement. Cows were generally used instead of bulls, for the stated reason that they turn quicker and were generally more active. The toreadors were Spanish, but the ecarteurs, or teasers of the "bull," were men of the Landes, and were invariably dressed in the costume of acrobats, and were small in stature.

The methods of these "bull fights" was unique. When let loose in the amphitheatre the cow was displayed with a long cord tied to her horns. To the other end would be attached the ecarteur, and by a series of jerks, combined with quick and supple movements on his part, he would worry the angry animal, now being thrown beneath her horns and recovering himself by a quick movement; now by a well-directed pull causing her to chase to the other end of the ring. In the early days of the amusement horses were used, as they are in Spain.

Humanity has prevailed in the Landes of recent years, however, and only men venture forth into the arena to meet the "bull." The "bull" is not can desert.

Ireland's Thrift.

Ireland, if poor, is provident. According to the Banking and Railway Statistics, just published, there has been a very large increase in savings during the year 1894, the total amount in the savings banks in Ireland being close on to seven millions sterling in December, 1894, as compared with 6,219,000 pounds for 1893. The actual increase is 740,000 pounds for the year following an increase of 48,000 pounds in 1893, and an increase of 239,000 pounds at the close of 1892, as compared with December, 1891.

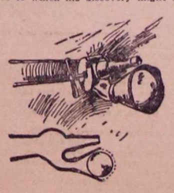
IT CONQUERS THE FLAME.

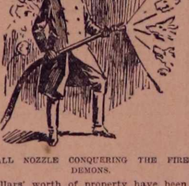
How a Secret of Nature Was Discovered.

It was in August that Charles V. Pollock, a resident of Des Moines, Ia., while experimenting with an ordinary lawn sprinkler, discovered a secret of nature which promises far-reaching results in our domestic economy. Mr. Pollock found that a ball placed loosely in a bell-shaped nozzle, without anything to hold it in position, would resist all pressure of water and create a spray, and that no possible pressure would dislodge the ball. Following it up and searching out the practical uses to which his discovery might be applied, Mr. Pollock has found that it will serve many purposes of human necessity, most important of which is that of adding to the present fire equipments a spray of such powerful effect that it is doubtless not claiming too much for it to say that in every case where fire departments are prompt in reaching fires there will be no longer necessity for loss of life either from suffocation or fire.



THE NEW NOZZLE.

It was found that by using a large bell and ball and applying such a nozzle to fire hose it would create a solid sheet of water and give out the same quantity of water as given out through the straight nozzles without creating any back pressure on the hose. Careful study was given to depeloping the ball nozzle for this purpose, and after experiments extending over a period of several months the best form of bell was found and a new appliance was given to fire departments which is certain to increase to a very large extent their efficiency. The ball nozzle was immediately adopted by the fire department in Des Moines, the home of the inventor, and since its adoption the record of the Des Moines Fire Department has been a marvellous one; not a single serious loss has occurred, and the chief of the fire department testifies that he has by the use of the ball nozzle saved many lives and thousands of dollars' worth of property. In one particular instance, when one of the largest lumber yards in that city took fire, and for a few minutes threatened a valuable portion of the city, the timely arrival of the department and the use of the ball nozzles averted a most disastrous conflagration. As is generally known, the most difficult thing to contend with in the early stage of fires is the smoke, which quickly fills the entire structure, making it impossible for firemen to enter, and for this reason it may be said that thousands of lives have perished and millions of dollars' worth of property have been destroyed. Efforts have constantly been made to produce an effective spray with sufficient power to drive smoke and quench flames, but up to the time of the discovery of the ball nozzle this important result had not been accomplished. The difficulty has been to secure a spraying device that would permit the flow of a sufficient amount of water to give it driving power and at the same time to overcome the back pressure of the hose, but the ball nozzle accomplishes these important results and is withal more easily handled than the ordinary straight stream. Indeed, while it takes two or more men to handle a straight stream, one man can easily handle the ball nozzle, which creates a solid wall of water between the firemen and the smoke and flame, enabling them to pursue the fire to its source, no matter where it is in a structure, cover a large area quickly and rescue people, if there were any, who might otherwise perish. Where a powerful straight stream is used it is often the case that as much damage results from water as from fire. The ball nozzle obviates this to a very large extent, as the force, while great enough to quench flame, is not sufficient to cause unnecessary destruction of fragile interior property.



BALL NOZZLE CONQUERING THE FIRE DEMONS.

Common Error in Speech.

The verb to get is one of our most misused words; it means to acquire, win, obtain; and, primarily, it signifies the putting forth of effort to attain something. Consequently it is not only superfluous, but incorrect, to speak of a man as "getting drowned" or "getting sick"; and you may, unfortunately "have a cold," but it is impossible that you "have got a cold." At this moment no exceptions occur to the writer to the rule that got should never be used in connection with have, which alone sufficiently expresses possession. Say "I have the picture"; "The dog has a broken leg." The irregular verbs lay and lie are frequently confounded. Lay is an active or transitive verb, and lie is passive or intransitive. We lay things down, or have laid them down; but we and things lie at rest. You lie down, have lain down, will lie down, or are lying down; she lay down yesterday and is going to lie down this afternoon. A frequent error is to confound the past tenses of these verbs. One should say "Mary laid the book on the table, and lay down herself," but the book lies on the table.—Demorest Magazine.

Swore Himself In.

In his reminiscences of the Crimea in 1854, Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood tells a story of a fighting general who during a conflict was seen wherever bullets fell most thickly. When not visible his voice was heard encouraging his men with "a vocabulary borrowed from the army in Flanders," which Sir Evelyn says will not bear repetition. "Years after he was appointed to the Aldershot command and Her Majesty happened to ask, 'Has the new general yet taken up his command?' 'Yes, Your Majesty,' was the reply, 'he swore himself in yesterday.'"

A Lesson in Diplomacy by an Artful Lady's Maid.

The beautiful billionairess was sad. Of course this sounds like a paradox, for no one can exactly understand how billionairess can be otherwise than supremely, divinely, everlastingly happy. But the fact remains nevertheless she was miserable.

She sat by the lace curtained window her rosy, dimpled feet upon a perfumed ottoman embroidered with thousand dollar hens' egg diamonds, impatiently awaiting her maid, who was bringing up from the cuisine an omelet of nightingales' eggs and a mint julep made of the whole Philadelphia mint. This was only her breakfast. You can judge from that what her dinner cost!

"You are disconsolate this morning, mam'zelle?" ventured the maid, removing the society sheet of the morning paper, especially printed for her on watered silk in ottar of roses ink, and replacing it with the delicate repast served in pearl studded golden dishes.

The beautiful billionairess raised her languid eyelids and heaved a deep pachouli scented sigh that fairly peeled the million dollar frescoes off the wall. "Yes, I am sad," she moaned, "very sad," and she took a $40,000 sip of the julep as a bracer.

"Why so?" persisted the maid, who always spoke to her mistress in one of 31 earthly or 200 heavenly dialects of Cupid. "Has not the duke been as persistent in his proposal as ever?"

"More so. I have to loan him $3,000,000 a day to get rid of him."

"Aren't your new Worth gowns masterpieces of extravagance?"

"Marvels! That extra 1½ bushels of rubies on my ball gown train retards my waltzing a little, but——"

"Do you long for Paris and fear the rough voyage?"

"Oh, dear, no! I've arranged with the Standard Oil Company to pour 10,000,000 gallons of oil per hour into the ocean during the time I am crossing to grease the track, you know——"

"What, then, can be the matter which so oppresses you?"

"Only to think," replied the beautiful billionairess, taking up the watered silk newspaper once more, "for five years I have been reported engaged to 33 men, on an average weekly, including every eligible bachelor or widower of both hemispheres, from a Zulu chief to the czar of Russia. This morning—ah, this morning, I am miserable! I have toiled through 69 columns of solid nonpareil and nary a single engagement. It is awful!"

"Ah, mam'zelle, you cannot think that your popularity is on the wane. That is impossible!"

"Alas, I fear it—either that or else the society editors hava died at their posts in faithful efforts to marry me off."

"No; I have it. Eureka!"

The fair one flushed a royal flush worthy to break the bank at Monte Carlo. "Quick, tell me," she cried, "why am I slighted thus?"

"They have exhausted the whole international directory!"

"Bravo!" exlaimed the other, springing to her feet. "Then I must consider their silence as the greatest compliment of my life. Marie, you are a petticoated Daniel. Your salary is raised $2,000 a minute. Swear that you will never leave me. I shall marry his dukelets, get you to doctor up a divorce and we will be the most popular women in the world. Go below and order us two golden buck made of limberger cheese and a jailbird's egg, and four fingers each of B.C. 450 Cyprian from the wine cellars of Pericles, worth $7,000 a drop and we'll toast society editors in blocks of five. Ah, you are a jewel, Marie, a veritable jewel!"—New York World.

Curious Occupations.

Curious occupations for women crop out in these days, when any talent, from that of sharpening a lead pencil specially well to teaching Greek, seems to find a money equivalent from some circle of patrons. A novel way of earning a living is afforded a certain number of young girls in one or two places of business in the East End of London. Their sole duty is to test eggs, by holding them between the eye and the light. From skill and experience they are able instantly to determine their condition in this way. Another woman, also English, is a purveyor, or provider, for a consideration, of appropriate names for children. For the modest sum of 25 cents she proclaims in the newspapers her willingness to suitably name any baby of high or low estate. All the proud parents have to do, who wish to take advantage of her professional assistance, is to forward with the requisite fee such particulars as to their position in life, temperament, the color of the baby's eyes, the month of its birth, and one or two more of like import, and by return mail the applicant will receive a name which, it is stated, "is warranted to give satisfaction."

The Empress of Japan.

The Empress of Japan is said to enjoy the largest washing of any royal or plebian personage in the round world. She is a very petite and winsome little lady. It does not take much to cover her, to be sure, but a Japanese Queen must change that covering many, many times a day, and her raiment must be of delicate, cobwebby, lacey silk, satin, crape or crepe de chine. Even if she never wears the same article twice she has it cleaned, washed, perfumed and either packed away in her wardrobe, presented to her ladies in waiting or her beloved female retainers. At one time during the last summer season, when her maids were busy putting away summer robes and bringing to light autumn ones, she had over 2,000 silk kamonas sent to her royal laundry and cleaning department of the imperial household. This, they say, was a very small amount indeed for the royal washerwomen.

Her funny little stockings, with arrangements like gloves' fingers for each toe, numbered many, many thousands and had to be attended to as carefully and thoroughly as though she had only one pair and never knew where the next one would come from. She dons European costume, to be sure, almost all of the time, and always at state festivals, and this fact, together with the necessary Japanese custom of donning a robe for every day in the year adds to her weekly laundry list.—Tokyo Letter.

The Tramp's Opportunity.

Queer things happen in this world. A tramp took refuge in an old graveyard in Geogia and prepared for a sound night's rest, between two graves. About an hour when graveyards are supposed to "yawn," he was awakened by a strange noise, and, on looking up, discovered an escaped convict in the act of filing off his shackles. As the tramp stood up, the convict, in superstitious terror, fell upon his knees, whereupon the tramp arrested him, delivered him over to the authorities at the camp near by and received a reward of $50.

Johnson, Holland Landing, who says: I had a constant Back-Ache, my back felt cold all the time, appetite poor, stomach sour and belching, urine scalding, had to get up 3 or 4 times during night to urinate, commenced taking one Kidney-Liver Pill a day; Back-Ache stopped in 48 hours, appetite returned, and able to enjoy a good meal and a good nights sleep; they cured me.

3. Constipation often exists with Kidney Trouble, in such a case there is no medicine that will effect a permanent cure except Chase's combined Kidney-Liver Pill, one 25 cent box will do more good than dollars and dollars worth of any other preparation, this is endorsed by D. The Origin of Cold Waves.

It is frequently asked, where do cold waves originate? The coldest portion of the North American continent, is, in all probability, in the Saskatchewan Valley, east of Mount Hooker and Mount Head, both of which are situated in the Rocky Mountain range that divides British Columbia from this valley and the Alberta country. The height of this mountain range prevents the eastern trend or flow of vapour from the Pacific ocean from crossing over into this valley, as it would were it not for the presence of this high range of mountains. Yet it must not be supposed that extreme cold always prevails here, because at certain intervals the vapor from the Pacific flows east by way of the Alaskan peninsula, through the upper valley of the Athabasca river into Alberta and the valley of the Saskatchewan, and there, meeting with a more southern and eastern flow of vapor that flows through the gap in the mountain range, made by the Bay of San Juan, it warms and expands the atmosphere, crosses the path of the cold wave, and a warmth of from 20 to 40 degrees is the result, as we often see graphically marked on the weather map by red dots here and there on its surface.

But this does not satisfactorily answer why it is that the cold wave leaves its home in the above-mentioned valley to go junketing on a southern tour at this time of the year, when the normal temperature should be sufficiently cold to meet the demands of the most exacting plumber. To find the cause of those successive cold waves which we are experiencing from time to time this winter, we will have to look in quite another direction, down to the northern tropical latitude, where the great evaporation of those warm currents and ocean surfaces is carried westward from the Atlantic Ocean by the trade winds, and is massed together between those winds and the eastern off shore winds, blowing sometimes from Florida and at other times from Texas, but in either case promoting a cyclonic action, which has the effect of enlarging the area of the storm, and the immediate result is an enormous expansion of the atmosphere usually deominated "low." As this low moves across the surface of the Middle or Eastern States it pours down large quantities of water in the shape of rain, and is constantly receiving accessions of cloud matter to replenish its energies; and thus in this manner it creates more or less of a vacuum into which the air from the northwest is drawn with more or less momentum, and the cold wave is completed.—Washington Post.

Divorce in Burmah.

Suppose a Burmese husband and wife quarrel and determine to separate. The wife—who always does all the marketing—goes out and buys two little candles of equal length, which are made especially for this use. She brings them home. She and her husband sit down on the floor and light them simultaneously. One candle stands for him, the other for her. The one whose candle burns out first rises and goes out of the house forever, with nothing but what he or she may have on. The one whose candle has survived the longest, even by a second, takes everything. So the divorce and the division of the property—if you can call that a division—are settled.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell Its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money.'

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles: and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

For female complaints it has no equal.'

ON THE GOSPEL SHIP.

REV. DR. TALMAGE DRAWS A LESSON FROM THE ARK.

Gift of Salvation Through Christ—A Sure Defence in Time of Trouble—The Loadstone of a God Fearing Life.

Although his oratory is at all times magnetic and eloquent, there is one theme with which, whenever he makes it the groundwork of his sermon, Dr. Talmage never fails to communicate to his auditors the enthusiasm he himself feels. That theme is the gospel invitation, and when he took for his subject "The Gospel Ship," the great audience that crowded the Academy was in full sympathy. The text selected was Genesis vi., 18, "Thou shalt come into the ark, thou and thy sons and thy wife and thy sons' wives with thee."

In this day of the steamships Lucania and Majestic and the Paris I will show you a ship that in some respects eclipsed them all and which sailed out, an ocean underneath, and another ocean falling upon it. Infidel scientists ask us to believe that in the formation of the earth there have been half a dozen deluges, and yet they are not willing to believe the Bible story of one deluge.

In what way the catastrophe came we know not—whether by the stroke of a comet, or by flashes of lightning, changing the air into water, or by a stroke of the hand of God, like the stroke of the axe between the horns of the ox, the earth staggered. To meet the catastrophe God ordered a great ship built. It was to be without prow, for it was to sail to no shore. It was to be without helm, for no human hand should guide it. It was a vast structure, probably as large as two or three modern steamers. It was the Great Eastern of olden times.

The ship is done. The door is open. The lizards crawl in. The cattle walk in. The grasshoppers hop in. The birds fly in. The invitation goes forth to Noah, "Come thou and all thy house into the ark." Just one human family embark on the strange voyage, and I hear the door slam shut. A great storm sweeps along the hills and bends the cedars until all the branches snap in the gale. There is a moan in the wind like unto the moan of a dying world. The blackness of the heavens is shattered by the flare of the lightnings that look down into the waters and throw a ghastliness on the face of the mountains. How strange it looks! How suffocating the air seems! The big drops of rain begin to plash upon the upturned faces of those who are watching the tempest. Crash go the rocks in convulsion! Boom go the bursting heavens! The inhabitants of the earth, instead of flying to housetop and mountain top, as men have fancied, sit down in dumb, white horror to die, for when God grinds mountains to pieces and lets the ocean slip its cable there is no place for men to fly to. See the ark pitch and tumble in the surf, while from its windows the passengers look out upon the shipwreck of a race and the carcasses of a dead world! Woe to the mountains! Woe to the sea!

I am no alarmist. When, on the 20th of September, after the wind has for three days been blowing from the northeast, you prophecy that the equinoctial storm is coming, you simply state a fact not to be disputed. Neither am I an alarmist when I say that a storm is coming compared with which Noah's deluge was but an April shower, and that it is wisest and safest for you and for me to get safely housed for eternity. The invitation that went forth to Noah sounds in our ears, "Come thou and all thy house into the ark."

Well, how did Noah and his family come into the ark? Did they climb in at the window, or come down the roof? No. They went through the door. And just so, if we get into the ark of God's mercy, it will be through Christ, the door. The entrance to the ark of old must have been a very large entrance. We know that it was from the fact that there were monster animals in the earliest ages, and in order to get them into the ark two and two, according to the Bible statement, the door must have been very wide and very high. So the door into the mercy of God is a large door. We go in, not two and two, but by hundreds and by thousands, and by millions. Yea, all the nations of the earth may go in, 10,000,000 abreast.

The door of the ancient ark was in the side. So now it is through the side of Christ—the pierced side, the wide open side, the heart side—that we enter. Aha, the Roman soldier, thrusting his spear into the Saviour's side, expected only to let the blood out, but he opened the way to let all the world in. Oh, what a broad Gospel to preach! If a man is about to give an entertainment he issues 200 or 300 invitations, carefully put up and directed to the particular persons whom he wishes to entertain. But God, our Father, makes a banquet, and goes out to the front door of heaven, and stretches out his hands over land and sea, and with a voice that penetrates the Hindoo jungle, and the Greenland ice castle, and the Brazilian grove, and the English factory, and American home cries out, "Come, for all things are now ready!" It is a wide door. The old cross has been taken apart, and its two pieces are stood up for the door posts so far apart that all the world can come in. Kings scatter treasures on days of great rejoicing. So Christ, our King, comes and scatters the jewels of heaven. Rowland Hill said that he hoped to get into heaven through the crevices of the door. But he was not obliged thus to go in.

After having preached the Gospel in Surrey chapel, going up toward heaven, the gatekeeper cried, "Lift up your heads, ye everlasting gates, and let this man come in!" The dying thief went in. Richard Baxter and Robert Newton went in. Europe, Asia, Africa, North and South America may yet go through this wide door without crowding. He, every one—all conditions, all ranks, all people! Luther said that this truth was worth carrying on one's knees from Rome to Jerusalem, but I think it worth carrying all around the globe and all around the heavens—that "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Whosever will, let him come through the large door. Archimedes wanted a fulcrum on which to place his lever, and then he said that he could move the world. Calvary is the fulcrum, and the cross of Christ is the lever, and by that power all nations shall yet be lifted.

Further, it is a door that swings both ways. I do not know whether the door of the ancient ark was lifted or rolled on hinges, but this door of Christ opens both ways. It swings out toward all our woes. It swings in toward the raptures of heaven. It swings in to let us in. It swings out to let our ministering ones come out. All are one in Christ—Christians on earth and saints in heaven

One army of the living God,
At his comamnd we bow.
Part of the host have crossed the flood
And part are crossing now.

Swing in, O, blessed door, until all the earth shall go in and live. Swing out until all the heavens come forth to celebrate the victory.

But, further, it is a door with fastenings. The Bible says of Noah, "The Lord shut him in." A vessel without bulwarks or doors would not be a safe vessel to go in. When Noah and his family heard the fastening of the door of the ark, they were very glad. Unless those doors were fastened, the first heavy surge of the sea would have whelmed them, and they might as well have perished outside the ark as inside the ark. "The Lord shut him in." Oh, the perfect safety of the ark! The surf of the sea and the lightnings of the sky may be twisted into a garland of snow and fire—deep to deep, storm to storm, darkness to darkness—but once in the ark all is well. "God shut him in."

There comes upon the good man a deluge of financial trouble. He had his thousands to lend. Now he cannot borrow a dollar. He once owned a store in New York and had branch houses in Boston, Philadelphia and New Orleans. He owned four horses and employed a man to keep the dust off his coach, phaeton, carriage and curricle. Now he has hard work to get shoes in which to walk. The great deep of commercial disaster was broken up, and fore and aft across the hurricane deck the waves struck him.

But he was safely sheltered from the storm. "The Lord shut him in." A flood of domestic troubles fell on him. Sickness and bereavement came. The rain pelted. The winds blew. The heavens are aflame. All the gardens of earthly delight are washed away. The mountains of joy are buried 15 cubits deep. But standing by the empty crib and in the desolated nursery, and in the doleful hall, once a-ring with merry voices, now silent forever, he cried: "The Lord gave; the Lord hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord." "The Lord shut him in."

All the sins of a lifetime clamored for his overthrow. The broken vows, the dishonered Sabbaths, the outrageous profanities, the misdemeanors of 20 years, reached up their hands to the door of the ark to pull him out. The boundless ocean of his sin surrounded his soul, howling like a simoon, raving like an euroclydon. But, looking out of the window, he saw his sins sink like lead into the depths of the sea. The dove of heaven brought an olive branch to the ark. The wrath of the billow only pushed him toward heaven. "The Lord shut him in."

The same door fastenings that kept Noah in keep the troubles out. I am glad to know that when a man reaches heaven all earthly troubles are done with him. Here he may have had it hard to get bread for his family. There he will never hunger any more. Here he may have wept bitterly. There "the lamb that is in the midst of the throne will lead him to living fountains of water, and God will wipe away all tears from his eyes." Here he may have hard work to get a house, but in my Father's house are many mansions, and rent day never comes. Here there are deathbeds and coffins and graves. There no sickness, no weary watching, no choking cough, no consuming fever, no chattering chill, no tolling bell, no grave. The sorrows of life shall come and knock at the door, but no admittance. Safe forever! All the agony of earth in one wave dashing against the bulwarks of the ship of celestial light shall not break them down. Howl on, ye winds, and rage ye seas! the Lord —"The Lord shut him in."

Oh, what a grand old door! So wide, so easily swung both ways and with such sure fastenings. No burglar's key can pick that lock. No swarthy arm of hell can shove back that bolt. I rejoice that I do not ask you to come aboard a crazy craft, with leaking hulk and broken helm and unfastened door, but an ark 50 cubits wide, and 300 cubits long, and a door so large that the round earth without grazing the post, might be bowled in.

Now, if the ark of Christ is so grand a place in which to live and die and triumph, come into the ark. Know well that the door that shut Noah in shut others out, and though, when the pitiless storm came pelting on their heads they beat upon the door, saying "Let me in! Let me in!" the door did not open. For 120 years they were invited. They expected to come in, but the antediluvian said: "We must cultivate these fields. We must be worth more flocks of sheep and herds of cattle. We will wait until we get a little older. We will enjoy our old farm a little longer." But meanwhile the storm was brewing. The fountains of heaven were filling up. The pry was being placed beneath the foundations of the great deep. The last year had come, the last month, the last week, the last day, the last hour, the last moment. In an awful dash an ocean dropped from the sky, and another rolled up from beneath, and God rolled the earth and sky into one wave of universal destruction.

So men now put off going into the ark. They say they will wait 20 years first. They will have a little longer time with their worldly associates. They will wait until they get older. They say: "You cannot expect a man of my attainments and of my position to surrender myself just now. But before the storm comes I will go in. Yes, I will. I know what I am about. Trust me." After awhile, one night about 12 o'clock, going home, he passes a scaffolding just as a gust of wind strikes it and a plank falls. Dead, and outside the ark! Or, riding in the park, a reckless vehicle crashes into him, and his horse becomes unmanageable, and he shouts: "Whoa! whoa!" and takes another twist in the reins, and plants his feet against the dashboard, and pulls back. But no use. It is not so much down the avenue that he flies as on the way to eternity.

Out of the wreck of the crash his body is drawn, but his soul is not picked up. It fled behind a swifter courser into the great future. Dead, and outside the ark! Or some night he wakes up with a distress that momentarily increases until he shrieks out with pain. The doctors come in, and they give him 20 drops, but no relief; 40 drops, 50 drops, 60 drops, but no relief. No time for prayer. No time to read one of the promises. No time to get a single sin pardoned. The whole house is aroused in alarm. The children scream. The wife faints. The pulses fall. The heart stops. The soul flies. Dead, and outside the ark!

I have no doubt that derision kept many people out of the ark. The world laughed to see a man go in and said: "Here is a man starting for the ark. Why, there will be no deluge. If there is one, that miserable ship will not weather it. Aha, going into the ark! Well, that is too good to keep. Here, fellows, have you heard the news? This man is going into the ark." Under this artillery of scorn the man's good resolution perished.

And so there are hundreds kept out by the fear of derision. The young man asks himself: "What would they say at the store to-morrow morning if I should become a Christian? When I go down to the clubhouse they will shout: 'Here comes that new Christian. Suppose you will not have anything to do with us now. Suppose you are praying now. Get down on your knees and let us hear you pray. Come, now, give us a touch. Will not do it, eh? Pretty Christian you are.'" Is it not the fear of being laughed at that keeps you out of the kingdom of God? Which of these scorners will help you at the last? When you lie down on a dying pillow, which of them will be there? In the day of eternity will they bail you out?

My friends and neighbors, come in right away. Come in through Christ, the wide door—the door that swings out toward you. Come in and be saved. Come and be happy. "The Spirit and the bride say 'Come.'" Room in the ark. Room in the ark.

But do not come alone. The text invites you to bring your family. It says, "Thou and thy sons and thy wife." You cannot drive them in. If Noah had tried to drive the pigeons and the doves into the ark, he would only have scattered them. Some parents are not wise about these things. They make iron rules about Sabbaths, and they force the catechism down the throat as they would hold the child's nose and force down a dose of rhubarb and calomel. You cannot drive your children into the ark. You can draw your children to Christ, but you cannot coerce them. The cross was lifted not to drive but to draw. "If I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me." As the sun draws up the drops of morning dew so the sun of righteousness exhales the tears of repentance.

Be sure that you bring your husband and wife with you. How would Noah have felt if when he heard the rain pattering on the roof of the ark he knew that his wife was outside in the storm? No; she went with him. And yet some of you are on the ship "outward bound" for heaven, but your companion is unsheltered. You remember the day when the marriage ring was set. Nothing has yet been able to break it. Sickness came, and the finger shrank, but the ring staid on. The twain stood alone above a child's grave, and the dark mouth of the tomb swallowed up a thousand hopes, but the ring dropped not into the open grave. Days of poverty came, and the hand did many a hard day's work, but the rubbing of the work against the ring only made it shine brighter. Shall that ring ever be lost? Will the iron clang of the spulchre gate crush it forever? I pray God that you who have been married on earth may be together in heaven. Oh, by the quiet bliss of your earthly home, by the babe's cradle, by all the vows of that day when you started life together, I beg you to see to it that you both get into the ark.

Come in and bring your wife or your husband with you—not by fretting about religion or ding donging them about religion, but by a consistent life and by compelling prayer that shall bring the throne of God down into your room. Go home, and take up the Bible and read it together, and then kneel down and commend your souls to him who has watched you all these years, and before you rise there will be a fluttering of wings over your head, angel crying to angel, "Behold, they pray!"

But this does not include all your family. Bring the children too. God bless the dear children! What would our homes be without them? We may have done much for them. They have done more for us. What a salve for a wounded heart there is in the soft palm of a child's hands! Did harp or flute ever have such music as there is in a child's "good night?" From our coarse rough life the angels of God are often driven back. But who comes into the nursery without feeling that angels are hovering around? They who die in infancy go straight into glory, but you are expecting your children to grow up in this world. Is it not a question, then, that rings through all the corridors and windings and heights and depths of your soul, what is to become of your sons and daughters for time and for eternity? "Oh," you say, "I mean to see that they have good manners!" Very well. "I mean to dress them well, if I have myself to go shabby." Very good. "I shall give them an education. I shall leave them a fortune." Very well. But is that all? Don't you mean to take them into the ark? Don't you know that the storm is coming and that out of Christ there is no safety, no pardon, no hope, no heaven?

How to get them in? Go in yourself. If Noah had staid out, do you not suppose that his sons—Shem, Ham and Japeth—would have staid out? Your sons and daughters will be apt to do just as you do. Reject Christ yourself, and the probability is that your children will reject him.

An account was taken of the religious conditions of families in a certain district. In the families of pious parents two-thirds of the children were Christians. In the families where the parents were ungodly only one-twelfth of the children were Christians. Which way will you take your children? Out into the deluge or into the ark? Have you ever made one earnest prayer for their immortal souls? What will you say in the judgment when God asks: "Where is George or Henry or Frank or Mary or Anna? Where are those precious souls whose interests I committed into your hands.

A dying son said to his father, "Father, you gave me an education, and good manners, and everything that the world could do for me; but, father, you never told me how to die, and now my soul is going out in the darkness.

Oh, ye, who have taught your children how to live, have you also taught them how to die? Life here is not so important as the great hereafter. It is not so much the few furlongs this side of the grave as it is the unending leagues beyond. O, eternity, eternity! Thy locks white with ages! Thy voice announcing stupendous destiny! Thy arms reaching across all the past and all the future! O eternity! eternity!

Go home and erect a family altar. You may break down in your prayer. But never mind. God will take what you mean, whether you express it intelligibly or not. Bring all your house into the ark. Is there one son whom you have given up? Is he so dissipated that you have stopped counselling and praying? Give him up? How dare you give him up? Did God ever give you up? While you have a single articulation of speech left cease not to pray for the return of that prodigal. He may even now be standing on the beach at Hongkong or Madras meditating a return to his father's house. Give him up? Never give him up! Has God promised to hear thy prayer only to mock thee? It is not too late.

In St. Paul's, London, there is a whispering gallery. A voice uttered most feebly at one side of the gallery is heard distinctly at the opposite side, a great distance off. So every word of earnest prayer goes all around the earth and makes heaven a whispering gallery. Go into the ark—not to sit down, but to stand in the door and call until all the family come in. Aged Noah, where is Japheth? David, where is Absalom? Hannah, where is Samuel?

On one of the late steamers there were a father and two daughters journeying. They seemed extremely poor. A benevolent gentleman stepped up to the poor man to proffer some form of relief and said. "You seem to be very poor, sir," replied the man. "If there's a poorer man than me a troubling the world, God pity both of us." "I will take one of your children and adopt it if you say so. I think it would be a great relief to you." "A what?" said the poor man. "A relief! Would it be a relief to have the hands chopped off from the body or the heart torn from the breast? A relief indeed! God be good to us! What do you mean, sir?" However many children we have, we have none to give up. Which of our families can we afford to spare out of heaven? Will it be the oldest? Will it be the youngest? Will it be that one that was sick some time ago? Will it be the husband? Will it be the wife? No, no! We must have them all in. Let us take the children's hands and start now. Leave not one behind. Come, father! Come, mother! Come, son! Come, daughter! Come, brother! Come, sister! Only one step, and we are in. Christ, the door, swings out to admit us, and it is not the hoarseness of a stormy blast that you hear, but the voice of a loving and patient God that addresses you, saying, "Come thou and all thy house into the ark." And there may the Lord shut us in!

Chinese Virtuosos.

You must know that the Chinese are far more commonly virtuosos than we; and a Chinese collector is a real connoisseur. He had no idea of beauty, except to eye it suspiciously, as probably of Japanese or other foreign origin; all he worships is age; and—mark this most curious trait—antiques of his own country only. What a conversatism to boast of this! The Chinese scholar and virtuoso has the profoundest admiration for his own country's ancient literature and art. He will not deign to have anything foreign or new on his shelves. I think this is something of a rebuke to us, hunting for relics of every country but our own. It puts us on the stand of nouveaux riches.

Don't think that a Chinaman spends nothing on his collection. He will outbid the vulgarest millionaire in the world for a genuine old bronze or porcelain. His collection is not built up in a day by wholesale commissions given to dealers. His is bought piece by piece as opportunity and finances allow. The collection made by a single man's lifetime is nothing. You will see pieces in his catalogue bought by father and grandfather and remote ancestors. They are heirlooms. They are passed down from father to son. They are the mark of education and noble birth, because the only nobility there is education and noble rank, and noble birth is being the descendants of ancestors who have held office and taken degrees. An heirloom of a choice bit of porcelain proves education and wealth in the purchaser. Does this not make you feel rather new with your twopenny fans and plates on the wall?—Temple Bar.

How to be Pretty, Though Cold.

"How to be pretty, though cold" is a difficult problem for the unfortunate woman who cannot afford furs of some description in this season when fur garments are made so fascinatingly becoming, with their wide, soft collars and so expensive in their exaggerated fullness. Sealskin is the one fur which is continually in fashion, and it is so distinctly becoming to every face and complexion that it will never lose its popularity. It is not quite so aristocratic as the gray haired Russian sable, but that is a matter of rarity and price rather than a question of beauty. Chinchilla is one of the season's favorites, and for the woman with a clear pink and white complexion there can be nothing prettier.

A beautiful evening cloak is made of dark green bengaline, with a lining and full cape of chinchilla. For those who cannot afford the larger garments there are Eton coats of seal and Persian lamb, with moire velvet sleeves. These are made with wide revers and high collar, either single or double breasted, and are very chic little garments for young ladies especially, and still cheaper are the collarettes, miniature capes and fur boas, which were never so pretty as they are now, and they answer every purpose for becoming effect.—Philadelphia Press.

Slang of the Turf.

To a stranger within the gates of a race track, if he enters the betting-ring and hears the language about him, would surely imagine that he was in a strange land. The slang of the turf is peculiar enough to the initiated.

The commonest terms, that is, the ones heard most frequently, are "dead ones" and lobster. Of course every race track frequenter knows the words are synonymous, and mean a horse in a race whose jockey does not try to win. "Dope" is a word of double meaning, signifying in one aplication an injection used to accelerate a horse's speed. Again, it means a form of book, or chart, showing the running of the horses. "Phony" tickets are bogus tickets of no value, usually written by at out for the purpose of making some "sucker" believe the tout is betting his own money on a horse. The "sucker," of course, is the green hand at the track, and the display of a ticket reading $800 or $500 usually convinces him that the man who would bet so heavily must "know something."

To "know something" is to have inside information that a certain horse is to be "shooe'd in," which means that that horse is the only one in the race which is trying to win. The "sucker," who nearly always is a very respectable gentleman, who wouldn't do a dishonest thing for the world, almost invariably gives the tout the money to bet on the "good thing," and thereby "skin" the unsuspecting bookmaker out of a little sure money. To "do business," or "stop" a horse, is to prevail upon a jockey to pull him, and thereby prevent him from winning.

Thus it goes on, ad infinitum. There is not a single feature of a race track, of bookmaking, or of management which is not described in some slang phrase, which to the race track devotee means everything, and to the ordinary citizen nothing.—St. Louis Republic.

History of the Barometer.

In the Meteorologische Zeitschrift for December last, Prof. G. Hellmann gives a very interesting account of the invention of the barometer, which has now been in use 250 years. Torricelli, who died at the early age of 39 years, was too busily engaged in mathematical studies to publish an account of his discovery, but on June 11, 1644, he wrote a description of it to his friend Ricci. This letter, and Ricci's objections to the experiment, were published in 1663 by C. Dati, a friend of Torricelli's, and, as this work is now excedingly scarce, Prof. Hellmann has reprinted the correspondence, in the original Italian, in the above mentioned journal. Some of the paragraphs, says Nature, are noteworthy, especially those in which Torricelli states that it was not merely a question of producing a vacuum, but of making an instrument, which would indicate the changes of the atmosphere. The first continuous barometrical observations appear to have been made in France. In England they were first taken by Robert Boyle, about the year 1659, to whom we owe the invention of the word "barometer."—Scientific American.

The Chiropodist on Pointed Shoes.

"I am sorry to see a tendency on the part of men to forsake the sharp-pointed shoe that has held the fashion for so long and to return to the broader style of extremity," said a leading chiropodist. "The change, if it come about as I expect it will, will have a pretty substantial effect for the worse upon my business. Two-thirds of the patients who come to me suffering from painful callous growths on their feet are the victims of sharpened shoes. There is only one foot in a thousand that can wear such an article with anything like comfort, but the 999 who can't, stand the misery in order to make a pretty good pedal appearance. The contracted space allowed for the toes in such shoes crowds them together as in a vise, and circulation in them stops and corns and bunions are the result. No one should wear a shoe which does not allow the joints of the toes to work naturally, but it should always fit the foot closely and snugly. A loose shoe is as provocative of corns and other foot ailments as a tight and narrow one."—Washington Post.

AN ANXIOUS MAN

The Disease Disappears in Three Weeks by the use of B. B. B.—Letter From Manitoba Fully Describing it.

DEAR SIRS—During the winter of 1892 93, I was covered with pimples on the inside of my right leg between the knee and the ankle. As I never had anything of the kind before I was anxious about it, and sought medical advice, but getting no relief from the doctor I tried a bottle of B. B. B., applying some of it to my leg as well as using it internally, and to my surprise the nasty disease, whatever it was, disappeared within three weeks, and I am thankful to say it has never re-appeared.

Hot water heating is being tested on one of the North Side street cars, in Chicago. The hot water reservoir surrounds the stove, which is placed under the car, and connection is made to hot water pipes running around the inside of the car.

According to the latest reports, there are in the world 140,334 miles of submarine telegraph cable. Of this total the various governments own 14,480 miles of cable and 25,550 miles of wire. The balance is owned by private companies.

In France, a very good gas is made from the fatty material contained in the soapsuds, after washing wools and yarns. The wash water of a wooden mill with 20,000 spindles will annually yield enough of this substance to produce 1,100,000 feet of gas.

A new imitation of gold is made of 94 parts of copper and six of antimony, with a little magnesium and carbonate of lime added while it is melted. It is said that it preserves its color, is an almost exact imitation of gold and that it costs only a shilling a pound to make it.

A firm in London, England, have placed on the market an electric fire radiator, consisting of a wrought-iron basket filled with fire clay balls, which partly hide a colored incandescent lamp. The illusion afforded by this arrangement is that of a glowing coal fire in an open grate.

Mexico produces anything that can be raised in any other country. So varied is the climate that in the same State can be raised any product of the tropics and of the polar regions. Cotton, wheat, rye, silver, silk, cocoanuts, bananas, rice, cocoa, vanilla, logwood, mahogany, hides and wine are the principal products.

Holy Terror gold mine, located at Keystone, in the southern Black Hills, has been worked for less than five months by a small force of men, and there has been only a five-stamp mill to crush the rock, yet it has turned out nearly $50,000 worth of gold, and there has been found at the bottom of the shaft small pockets of rock that have assayed more than $230,000 to the ton.

Villages Besieged by Wolves.

A number of villages in the Mzensk district of the Government of Orel have for several weeks past been practically deprived of intercommunication by a kind of wolf siege. These ravenous nests, which are more than ordinarily numerous and pedatory this season, at first confined themselves to nocturnal raids upon horses, cattle, sheep and pigs; but since a better watch has been kept the daring animals have taken to harrying the peasants and besieging the villages during the day, as well as under cover of the night. Several children have been carried off or devoured on the spot, in stray places. The district authorities offer a reward of three roubles for every wolf's head brought in, but this incentive has so far proved of little avail, owing to the scarcity of arms among the people, and to the astute wariness of the wolves themselves. A few companies of troops are now being formed into battue parties in order the more effectually to rid the neighborhood of this harrassing wolf-plague.

TWO OPERATIONS.

BOTH FAILURES

A Case of Kidney Complaint that Would Not Yield to Surgery or Medicine until B. B. B. Was Tried.

GENTLEMEN,—After having undergone two operations for Kidney Complaint without securing the least relief, and hearing of some remarkable cures made by B. B. B. in our neighborhood, I decided to try it. I was given up by the doctors after the operations failed, and it was providential that I heard of B. B. B. After the use of six bottles I experienced so great relief and so great a change for the better that I felt the good effects would be lasting, as indeed they have been. The seventh bottle perfectly cured me, and I am now stronger and better than I ever was before. People who saw me before I took B. B. B. and who see me now can scarcely believe that I am the same person.

Ladies of West Belleville Methodist church will give a Sugar Social on the evening of Good Friday April 12th inst.

Naturally fair complexions would be the rule rather than the exception as unfortunately it is at present, if the ladies would wholly abandon cosmetics, and more generally keep the blood pure and vigorous by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only reliable blood-purifier.

As baldness makes one look prematurely old, so a full head of hair gives to mature life the appearance of youth. To secure this and prevent the former, Ayers's Hair Vigor is confidently recommended. Both ladies and gentlemen perfer it to any other dressing.

Goldsmith supplied the British Columbia salmon for the Mackenzie Bowell banquet, since then the demand has been great. Try it.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich it, every bodily function fags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, its contamination by bile, or other causes, serious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery

Ernest McGregor of Whitby, Ont. Gives an Account of his Experience—Cured of Persistent Dyspepsia by B B B

WORST KIND OF DYSPEPSIA

GENTLEMEN,—I write to inform you that for years I had been troubled with Dyspepsia, and having tried other medicines which entirely failed, I at last found relief and cure in Burdock Blood Bitters, of which I took two bottles, the result being a perfect cure. Although only a young lad I had been troubled with Dyspepsia for four or five years, but I can say now that B.B.B. does its work faithfully in the worst kind of Dyspepsia, and has proved itself the only cure for me.

SOFT TYPEWRITER KEYS.

Covers Which Spare the Fingers and Improve the Impression.

A boon to typewriters consists in an attachment for the keys of the machine which gives them a soft and yielding surface for the fingers to strike against. The idea is not entirely new, but it is only lately that a cushion for the keys meeting with very much favor among good operators has been introduced. The present device is of hollow rubber, three-sixteenths of an inch deep, with a flat surface, corresponding in size with that of the key itself, and having a metal base which attaches firmly to the key. The characters on each cushion are the same as those on the key to which it is fastened.

The advantage of resilient key tips compared with those of glass or celluloid used on most machines is plain; by their use the operator's fingers is not battered and chafed from continued manipulation of the keys, and the machine is not so liable to be racked, or the type thrown out of align. Moreover, characters which are small in size and often pierce the paper and injure the cylinder of the machine, are caused to strike with less force, and leave a more even impression on the written page.

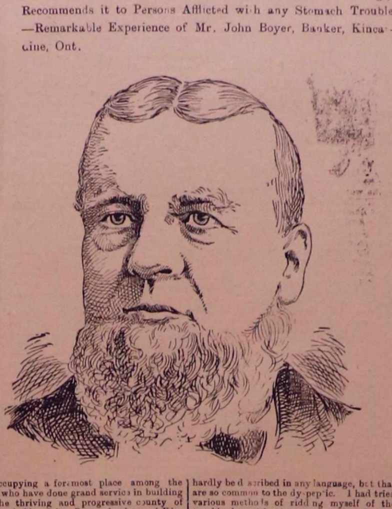
For the use of those operators able to write without closely observing the keys, cushions are made on which the characters are omitted altogether. These serve the double purpose of relieving the eyes of the strain imposed upon them by frequently glancing at the keyboard, and of insuring the machine against being tampered with by persons not thoroughly familiar with its use. For the further benefit of the eyes rubber of any desired color is used in making these tips, and the metal base may be coated either with nickel or black enamel. The space-bar of the typewriter is also provided with a cushion of the same height and elasticity as that of the keys.—New York Sun.

This Will Help to Make Thing Look as Good as New.

Almost everyone has about the house some articles of brass that are discolored and ugly looking, but are for divers reasons retained and would be prized were it not for their unattractive appearance and the extremely unpleasant odors that attaches to anything brought in contact with them. It has been asserted by an eminent chemist that a durable and handsome color may be put upon brass by a very simple process. Dissolve one drachm each of sal ammoniac and verdigris in a quart of water. Let this stand over night, covered from the dust, then add three pints of water and strain through a fine cloth. Clean the brass thoroughly from any greasy substance that may attach to it. This is best done in a sal soda bath, after which the piece must be rinsed in clear hot water, then dried and heated over a charcoal fire until the moistened finger will give the hissing sound so familiarly to those who use laundry iron. Immediately coat the surface of the brass with the prepared liquid, laid on with a brush or a soft rag free from lint. As soon as the coating is dry apply another. It is sometimes necessary to put on ten or fifteen coats and twenty are more desirable. This gives a beautiful brownish color not unlike good bronze. If the coats are thoroughly dried between applications, the finish is exceedingly durable. It certainly has the merit of being inexpensive and entirely does away with the disagreeable odor. Although the application of so many coats seem tedious, yet they are put on with great rapidity when one begins and the finished article is so handsome that it well repays the trouble.

A PROMINENT CANADIAN BANKER CURED.

A Victim of Indigestion for Years Finds Speedy Relief and an Absolute Cure in South American Nervine—Unhesitatingly Recommends it to Persons Afflicted with any Stomach Trouble—Remarkable Experience of Mr. John Boyer, Banker, Kincardine, Ont.



Occupying a foremost place among the men who have done grand service in building up the thriving and progressive county of Bruce, is Mr. John Boyer, banker, of Kincardine. His fellow citizens are prepared at any time to do honor to Mr. Boyer, for they know how much the prosperity of Kincardine is due to his foresight, prudence and energy. Men like the Rothschilds have saved even the Bank of England in its days of trial, and our bankers everywhere, when imbued as Mr. Boyer has been with a desire for the substantial welfare of the community where his lot has been cast, perform a service to every individual of the community that can hardly be too highly estimated.

Unfortunately, the mental strain that necessarily falls upon the great financiers is, in many cases, a precursor of that dreaded and worrying ailment, indigestion. Mr. Boyer found this to be the case with himself. Years of hard mental labor had brought on indigestion. In his own words he says:—"About a year ago, as a result of heavy work, no doubt, I became very much troubled with indigestion; associated with it were those terrible distressing feelings that can hardly be described in any language, but that are so common to the dyspeptic. I had tried various methods of ridding myself of the trouble, but without success; at last I tried South American Nervine. The result! In one word I may say, and I gladly say it, it cured me, and I have no hesitation in recommending any person affected with any stomach trouble to try South American Nervine." Dated Kincardine, April 7th, 1894. This estimable citizen of Bruce county has affixed his well-known signature to these strong, but plain and hearty words.

There is no occasion to add to what Mr. Boyer has said. If any one particular South American Nervine is more certain to cure than another, it is in the case of indigestion. It never fails; and an encouraging fact to the patient is that after taking only a few doses he commenced to feel relief. Its not a medicine that upsets the stomach and causes torture to the victim. It acts immediately on the nerve centres, and, as they supply the life fluid to all parts of the system, it removes the stomach trouble in this certain, effective and lasting manner.

As a remedy for internal use Hagyard's Yellow Oil is wonderful in its curative power. One or two doses cure Hoarseness and Sore Throat. Asthma, Bronchitis and Swelled Tonsi are quickly relieved. For Quinsy, Colds etc., it is the best remedy of Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.

J. C. PATTERSON RUNS AWAY

Thinks California Healthier Than Facing a Session.

RUMORED JUDICIAL CHANGES.

Hamilton Projectors Apply for a Blanket Electric Franchise Covering Nearly the Whole of Western Ontario—General News From Ottawa.

Ottawa, April 15.—A notice has been issued by the Collector of Customs at Victoria, B.C., pointing out that of the amount allotted to seal hunters and seamen by the award of Her Majesty's Government in respect of the modus vivendi in Behring Sea during 1891, a balance of the sum allotted to hunters and seamen on board certain of the vessels whose claims have not yet been presented remains unpaid.

The commissioners have granted an extension of the time for receiving claims from these hunters and seamen up to March 31, 1896.

It is the prevailing belief in political circles that Hon. J. C. Patterson has bidden good-bye to parliamentary life for some years to come. On Tuesday the ex-Minister of Militia leaves for California, and it is possible he will not take his seat in the House of Commons again, as in June he is to assume the duties of Lieut-Governor of Manitoba.

Dame Rumor says that during the next few weeks there will be a change in the personnel of the Supreme Court bench. Chief Justice Strong has, it is said, manifested a desire to retire, while Justices Gwynne and Fournier are, it is understood, not unwilling to resign. Had the bill promoted by Sir John Thompson last session became law, it is possible that the three judges named would have retired, as this measure provided that when a Supreme Court judge attained the age of 70 years, and had acted as a Superior Court judge for 15 years, of which five must have been on the Supreme Court bench, he could then retire on full pay instead of two-thirds as at present. The bill was introduced late in the session, and as it met with considerable opposition it was massacred along with other innocents. It is not known whether a similar bill will be introduced this session, but even if it be not, there seems to be some ground for the report that some of the Supreme Court judges will shortly retire.

Considerable correspondence has within the past two weeks passed between the salmon canners of British Columbia and the Fisheries Department regarding the enforcement of fishery regulations on the Fraser River, more particularly as regards depositing fish offal from canneries in the river. The department has just received the text of a judgment of Justice Drake, who granted an injunction against certain canneries from creating a nuisance in this manner. Before the offal regulations went into effect nearly 4000 tons of fish waste was allowed to enter the Fraser, and evidence was produced that this was creating a very offensive nuisance, polluting both air and water, and breeding typhoid.

An Order-in-Council has been passed amending the regulations respecting the compulsory attendance of Indian children at the Industrial or boarding schools. Any child absenting himself or herself from such school may be arrested under warrant issued by an Indian agent or Justice of the Peace, and brought back to the school.

The Civil Service promotion examination has, by Order-in-Council, been dispensed with for the present year. This is taken to mean that there will not be any promotions in the service this year.

According to advices which have reached the Fishery Department, the spring run of salmon in British Columbia has been quite up to the average. Ten thousand pounds of salmon came east from British Columbia in one shipment.

Mr. J. J. Haslett, traveling passenger agent of the C.P.R. in Great Britain, has arrived in the country on his annual tour to gather the latest information respecting the development of the Northwest and British Columbia, and to ascertain the requirements of the country, so that he may be thoroughly in touch with all the circumstances as they exist in Canada in his intercourse with the people of the Old Land. For some time Mr. Haslett has had charge of an exhibition car, showing the products of the Northwest, which last year visited three hundred and sixteen towns, besides the leading agricultural shows in Somerset, Devon, Nottingham, Wiltshire, Hereford, Shropshire, Hampshire, part of Scotland and other districts, and from which over 1,000,000 books were distributed.

Messrs. Crerar, Crerar & Banker of Hamilton give notice of application to Parliament for the incorporation of a company to be called the International Radial Railway Co., which has a very ambitious scheme in prospect. The company seeks to build from Hamilton northwesterly through or near Dundas, Galt, Preston, Berlin, to Waterloo, with a branch to Guelph; from Hamilton to the International boundary at Fort Erie or Victoria Bridge, with a branch to the Village of Dunnville and the mouth of the Grand River, passing through the Counties of Wentworth, Welland and Haldimand; from Hamilton to St. Mary's, passing through Brantford and Woodstock, with a branch from a convenient point to the Village of Port Burwell or some other port in the County of Norfolk, on Lake Erie; also a branch from a convenient point to London; from Hamilton to Toronto or Cooksville, with a branch from some convenient point to Brampton; with power to build or acquire and operate steam or tow barges and steamships to ply between the terminal points of the railway and ports of the United States; with power also to acquire, lease, amalgamate or enter into other arrangements with the Hamilton and Dundas Street Railway, the Galt, Preston and Hespeler Street Railway, the Berlin and Waterloo Street Railway, the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Canada Southern Railway or the New York Central Railway; to acquire sites for and build electrical works in connection with the railway for the purpose of generating electrical energy; to acquire the right of way to transmit and also the right to sell and otherwise dispose of electrical energy for heat, light, power and other purposes, and to distribute the same, and also for all the powers necessary for constructing and operating the said electrical works, and otherwise fully carry on the said undertaking, and power to acquire lands on the said lines of railway to be used as parks.

According to advices received at the Interior Department from R. L. Alexander, land agent in the Edmonton district, 427 settlers arrived in that district in the first quarter of the year, bringing with them 41 carloads of stock and effects valued at $45,100. Mr. Alexander has received double the number of letters of enquiry from the United States compared with last year, and believes there will be a large immigration to Alberta this year. The winter has been delightful and stock thrived well.

BANK NOTES IN LEAD PENCILS.

How Forged Notes Were Smuggled Across the Russian Frontier

London, April 15.—For some time the Russian Government has been trying to trace the origin of the counterfeit notes which have been freely circulated in St. Petersburg and elsewhere. The authorities felt certain that they were engraved abroad, and a sharp lookout was kept upon the custom houses for a long time without result. Finally a large consignment of pencils was sent through the custom house. On the German frontier they were inspected, and passed in the regular way. An official happened to drop one. This was afterward picked up by another employe. On the next day the finder undertook to sharpen it when he discovered that it had no lead, but a bank note had been carefully rolled and inserted where the lead should be. The pencils had been despatched from England.

GOSPEL OF BREAD AND BUTTER.

Prof. Robertson on the Nourishing Powers of Various Foods

New York, April 14.—Prof. L. W. Robertson of Ottawa delivered an address this afternoon in Association Hall on "The Gospel of Bread and Butter." He illustrated his lecture by means of colored charts showing the relative effects of the different articles of food on the human body. He said in part: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of bread and butter. We are told to glorify God in body and spirit, and unless we have healthy bodies we cannot do the latter." He said the food had a marked effect upon man morally. "A boy with a badly-nurtured body will give in when tempted to do wrong easier than a boy who is well fed and healthy. Food has two uses, namely, to furnish material out of which the body is built up and to repair the waste that is constantly going on in our bodies." He then pointed out on the charts the nourishing effects of different articles of food on the human body. He showed how the Chinese, who ate large quantities of rice, were inferior and weak, while the Japanese, who also ate rice but a great deal of fish, were their superiors. He said that the laboring classes spent 62 per cent. of their earnings for food, but that if they better understood the relative values of food they could get as much nourishment and enjoyment out of 40 per cent. of their wages.

PAYING 50C. A DAY.

Commander Murray Commences Relief Work in Newfoundland.

St. John's, Nfld., April 15.—Commander Murray is getting relief plans formulated and will begin work on the city waterworks next week, which will employ 500 to 1000 men at 50 cents a day for one month. Work will cease then to allow the men to go fishing. Similar work will also begin at outports. He is also arranging plans to assist fishermen with small outfits to begin voyages. The wages are considered small and are being taken as a criterion of Crown Colony pay, strengthening the cause of Confederation greatly.

LORD HOUGHTON TO RESIGN.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland Worried by the Social Boycott.

New York, April 14.—The World's London cable says: A report is current in semi-official circles here that Lord Houghton is about to resign as Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, being wearied out by the continued bitter social boycott by the landed gentry.

Niagara Park Commission Meets.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 14.—The commissioners of the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park held their annual meeting Saturday, and transacted considerable business. The most important move was the taking of formal possession of Queenston Heights, which have been turned over to the commission by the Canadian Government. Brock's monument will be made more accessible and the surroundings generally beautified. Other improvements may be made in the reserve the coming summer. Those present at the meeting were the Hon. J. W. Langmuir of Toronto, chairman; Commissioners John A. Orchard of Niagara Falls South and George H. Wilkes of Brantford, together with Supt. James Wilson. They came to this side of the river, enjoyed a fine dinner at the Prospect House and this afternoon went down to Queenston Heights on the Niagara Falls Park and River Railway. The commissioners refused to grant a license to sell liquor in the Dufferin Cafe.

Gilbert, night station agent at Savannah Hill. The child's head was badly mutilated, the top of the skull having been literally cut off with an ax. Gilbert has been arrested.

The Case of the Hawaiian Deports.

Victoria, B.C., April 14.—Johnson, the former detective or spy of the Hawaiian Government, deported by it three months ago, has received assurance from the British Government that thorough investigation of his case will be insisted upon. President Doles' administration intends fighting in the courts and thereafter in the Privy Council of England, if necessary, the constitutionality of the act. Muller, the German subject deported at the same time, has also been promised that his case will be fully investigated by the German Government.

TWO MURDERS IN A CHURCH

Horrible Discovery by Ladies in San Francisco.

A BAPTIST PASTOR UNDER ARREST

Bodies of Two Murdered Girls Found in the Sacred Edifice—One Hacked to Death, One Strangled—A Medical Student Suspected.

San Francisco, April 15.—The mutilated body of Minnie Williams, a young domestic, was found in the study of Rev. Dr. Gibson, pastor of Emanuel Baptist Church, to-day. The discovery was made by young ladies, who had come to decorate the church for Easter. Parts of the girl's clothing had been crammed into her mouth, with which the murderer had tried to stifle the cries of his victim, whom he hacked to death.

Another horrible discovery was made Sunday morning in a small room in the steeple. The church had been desecrated by a second murder, the victim being another young girl, Blanche Lamont, who had been missing since the 3rd inst.

She had been strangled to death, her clothes had been torn from her person and the body was almost nude when discovered. Her shoes and stockings were missing. The imprints of the assassins' finger nails were plainly visible on the murdered girl's throat, but there was no indication of further violence.

Shortly after the discovery was made Dr. George Gibson, pastor of the church, was taken into custody by the police. No charge was made against him, but he will be held until the mystery is fully cleared. Miss Lamont was last seen alive in the company of Theodore Durant, a young medical student and assistant superintendent of the Sunday school connected with the defiled place of worship.

Durant, who is said to have been engaged to be married to Miss Lamont, is suspected of having taken the life of the Williams girl, who is known to have been a warm friend of Miss Lamont. They were members of the church, which they frequently attended together, and were also in the same Sunday school class.

Since the disappearance of Blanche, Miss Williams often said that she knew that her companion had met with foul play. This statement reached the ears of several members of the church, and the girl was asked for an explanation, but she declined to reveal the nature of her information and the matter was dropped.

The police are now inclined to think that Durant, knowing that Miss Williams was in possession of sufficient evidence to prove his guilt in connection with the disappearance of Miss Lamont, concluded to decoy her into the church and silence her forever.

GREENWAY TO GO TO THE COUNTRY.

On the School Question—Attempted Wife Murder for Life Insurance.

Winnipeg, Man., April 14.—Politicians here appear to be quite certain that Premier Greenway contemplates bringing on the provincial elections at an early date. The Opposition are so very well convinced of this that they are already discussing their candidates and the policy in respect to the school question, for of course that will be the chief issue.

Lena Bender, a 14-year-old German girl, employed as a domestic in the family of Rev. John Semmens, was last fall suspected of stealing several articles from the residence. She denied the charge, and seemed to take it so much to heart that she told a girl friend she would suicide. A day or so afterward she disappeared, and all trace of her was lost. Saturday her body was found in the floating ice of Red River.

Archbishop Langevin leaves for the east to-morrow. It is said he goes to attend a convention of Catholics to be held in Montreal respecting the school question.

His Grace Archbishop Langevin preached in St. Mary's Church Sunday night, and his discourse created a sensation. His Grace, after begging Catholics to stand firm for their school, stated plainly that those of the church who continued to give their aid to the opponents of Catholic schools would no longer be considered Catholics by the church. This is taken to be equivalent to excommunication, and a number of Catholics who have been with the National School Party in the present struggle are consequently greatly agitated.

William Farr is a Canadian Pacific locomotive engineer who came originally from Cobourg, Ont. Early Saturday morning a deliberate attempt was made to fire his residence in Ross-street, the whole downstairs portion being sprinkled with coal oil and fires started at several points. The stairway, the only means of escape of Mrs. Farr and her four children, was saturated with oil, as were also mats and rags placed at the front and back doors, the very evident desire of the incendiary being not only to destroy the house, but also to cremate the woman and her little ones. Mrs. Farr was rescued and the fires extinguished.

Half an hour after the fire was discovered and extinguished Farr, who runs a switch engine, ran it into the C.P.R. depot, and, jumping off, asked the night policeman where the fire was. The policeman said there was no fire as far as he knew and the engineer remarked: "Oh, I thought I heard the fire bells ringing!"

He returned to his engine and when pulling out of the depot he remarked to his fireman: "That policeman tells me there is fire near my house. I hope my folks are all right."

Running up into the yard, Farr climbed on top of a box car to see if he could see the blaze. The fire bells did not ring during the night. All these facts were learned by the police and Farr is now in jail awaiting trial. The fire was discovered about 2 o'clock in the morning, and between 1 and 2 o'clock Farr was away from his engine.

It is said that Farr has been keeping a mistress for some time and that he had insured his wife's life for $10,000.

Drunkenness in England.

In England during one year for which returns have been furnished, there were 142,725 convictions for drunkenness, of which 11,178 were for offences committed between noon and midnight on Sundays. This does not show that there was excessive indulgence on Sabbath days more than on others. In Wales the proportion of Sunday convictions was still less, numbering only 772, out of a total of 10,347. Compared with this return for the whole of Wales, there is a significance in the fact that in the border county of Monmouth, to which the Sunday closing act does not apply, there were 110 convictions for drunkenness on Sunday, against 868 on other days.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell Its Worth—We Don't Need To.

Mimico, Aug. 20, 1894

Wm. Dean, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

Walter Burgess.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.'

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelee's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money.'

Germany reports 289 instances of suicide among school children during the last six years.

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal.'

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

Beyond Dispute.

There is no better, safer or more pleasant cough remedy made than Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cures Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles.

There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time effectual and pleasant, as Milburns Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry Hypophosphites, which is the largest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. RELIGION IN THE SCHOOLS

The suggestion of purely secular schools in theory as well as fact, that has recently found expression in the press and on the platform has at least resulted in adducing evidence that secular schools will not be allowed the sanction of public opinion without very determined opposition. No abler opponent of the opposing trend of thought could be found in this country than the Rev. Prof. Clark, of Trinity College and he has taken up the task in two letters in The Week.

His introductory paragraph is seductive and purposes the disarmament of opposition:

"It is much to be regretted that the subject of the religious education of children in our national schools should hardly ever now be discussed without the introduction of side issues which tend to prejudice the whole question. The present writer desires, as far as possible, to consider the subject simply on its merits, and with reference to the circumstances of this country, comprehending, as it does, a population widely differing among themselves in religious opinions and practices.

He asks first will it be conceded "that it is desirable that the young should be carefully and systematically instructed in the principles of the Christian Religion'; and answers it by stating that "we have no right to allow masses of human beings around us to grow up in ignorance of the Gospel of Christ.

Up to this point the reverend gentleman's path is easy and brightened by the genial rays of a universal public opinion, at least the voice of the infinitesimal minority is not loud enough to create discord. But here Prof. Clark plunges into a bog as he ventures the statement that the church and the home are not equal to the task of instructing children in the "Gospel of Christ." But it seems pertinent to enquire what is the Gospel of Christ, for the Professor pushes aside his first requisite of religious teaching and substitutes another in his complaint that the amount of religious instruction imparted in our schools is insufficient and that children leave them with "hardly any knowledge of scripture history leaving alone christian doctrine."

We do not conceive scripture history to be an essential element of the gospel of Christ, and christian doctrine is but the centuries' incrustation of human fallibility of thought about the simple gospel of love and truth and faith.

The Separate school, he assumes, "rests upon a right principle" because it is "a new application of the voluntary principle, according to which each communion builds and supports its own churches and meeting houses." The remainder of the letters is devoted to a discussion of methods, but without arriving at any satisfactory conclusion and this part of the letters is outside our interest in them. In short the letters advocate separate schools to the fullest possible extent, ostensibly with a view to instructing the children in the Gospel of Christ but really to inculcate sectarian creeds and dogmas.

In neither letter is there a suggestion that secular education approaches in importance anywhere near religious education, or that there is anything to be desired in a broad national sentiment attainable only through a free national educational system.

Yellow as guinea.—The complexion in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick headache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels there after to become regular. High professional sanction has been accorded to it; and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

A Case of Kidney Complaint that Would Not Yield to Surgery or Medicine until B. B. B. Was Tried.

Gentlemen,—After having undergone two operations for Kidney Complaint without securing the least relief, and hearing of some remarkable cures made by B. B. B. in our neighborhood, I decided to try it. I was given up by the doctors after the operations failed, and it was providential that I heard of B. B. B. After the use of six bottles I experienced so great relief and so great a change for the better that I felt the good effects would be lasting, as indeed they have been. The seventh bottle perfectly cured me, and I am now stronger and better than I ever was before. People who saw me before I took B. B. OBJECTIONS TO JAPAN'S DEMANDS

Cession of Chinese Territory to Be Resisted by European Powers

New York, April 14.—The World's London cable says: Japan's terms of peace are approved with practical unanimity so far by the London newspapers. Both the Conservative and the Liberal organs express the opinion that the conquerors are not asking too much. It is even reported that the demand for the cession of the Leaotang (Shingking) Peninsula has evoked no vigorous English protest anywhere. But the tone of the Berlin official press indicates a disposition on the part of the German Government to act with Russia in resisting this demand. The point is made in Berlin and in Vienna, too—and it is understood that representations to such effect have been made to the English Government—that Japan cannot be allowed to have a line of harbors from Formosa to Port Arthur, unless the other maritime powers get important concessions for their own navies in the East. It is stated, apparently on authority in Paris to-day, that the French Government has given Russia perfect assurance of her intention to support Russian resistance to any cession of territory on the Chinese mainland.

Peace in the East.

London, April 15.—The Morning Post has this despatch from Shanghai: A private telegram from a Chinese official in Hiroshima reports that the terms of peace were finally arranged by the negotiators in Shimonoseki yesterday.

FIGHTING IN THE CHITRAL

Col. Battye Killed While Destroying Villages in the Hills.

Calcutta, April 14.—The following news of the Chitral campaign was sent from Sir Robert Low's headquarters to-day: A corps of guides under Col. Battye was instructed yesterday to destroy the villages in the hills from which a persistent fire was dropped into camp. The guides advanced further than Sir Robert had intended. They discovered two large bodies of the enemy approaching and signalled to that effect. Sir Robert signalled back that the guides should retire at once. This the guides did, delivering a steady fire at the enemy. The natives were held in check and apparently suffered heavy losses. Just as the movement of the guides' corps was completed Col. Battye fell mortally wounded. He died a few minutes later. The British lost three others killed and two officers and 17 privates wounded. The British had no idea that such a large force of the enemy was in the immediate neighborhood. Nevertheless their loss would not have been so heavy had the commander's instructions been understood and obeyed. Further fighting in the near future was regarded as likely when the last despatches left camp.

Umra Khan Gives Up His Prisoners

Calcutta, April 15.—Umra Khan has sent Lieut. Edwards to the British camp at Lado. Lieut. Fowler is expected to arrive there soon. Both officers have been held as hostages by the native leader.

OCEAN GREYHOUNDS RACE.

Trial of Speed Between the Paris and Lucania.

New York, April 15.—The steamship Paris of the American line was moored at her dock Saturday, after encountering and being defeated by the Lucania of the Cunard Line in an ocean race. The Paris left Southampton on Saturday last. On Tuesday the Lucania was espied looming above the horizon to the westward, but astern of the Paris. From that moment the decks of the racing liners were black with excited passengers. Engines were hooked up and the two ships forged through the tranquil sea as fast as their propellers could drive them. On that day the Paris made 507 knots, the Lucania 540. Slowly but steadily the Lucania kept pushing ahead, and gaining on the Paris, and at midnight she was slightly in the lead. Signals were exchanged and many wagers were made on board the Paris as to the result of the contest.

The Lucania was lost to the view of the Paris at 3.30 o'clock on Wednesday morning, and arrived at midnight Friday, five hours in advance of the Paris. Notwithstanding this handicap the two steamers left quarantine within 30 minutes of each other, and the Paris landed her passengers an hour earlier than the Lucania. When steaming at top speed the Paris consumed 350 tons of coal a day, while the Lucania used 550.

KILLED BY SEWER GAS.

Fatality in a London Sewer—Two Other Men in Peril.

London, Ont., April 13.—About 2 o'clock Saturday morning Hugh O'Meara, brother of Ald. Stephen O'Meara, Harry Wallace and M. Miller of William-street entered the sewer at the corner of King and Ridout and were working their way eastward, when O'Meara found himself becoming dazed by the effects of the gas and started to leave the scene of danger. Wallace also realized his peril. Miller, however, was by this time completely prostrated and was found by his companions lying in the filthy water. In endeavoring to convey Miller to the manhole, Wallace, too, was overcome.

O'Meara by a desperate effort succeeded in climbing the ladder and reaching the man-hole. Scarcely had O'Meara reached the surface when he, too, became unconscious, but soon revived. The rescuing party entered the sewer and brought out Wallace in an unconscious condition.

The sewer was opened at several places and the body of Miller recovered.

GENEROUS JAIL BIRDS.

Would Starve Themselves to Relieve Others in Want.

Dorchester, N.B., April 13.—The prisoners in the Maritime Provinces' Penitentiary here are making a record for themselves. When Sir John Thompson died they signed a long resolution of regret, extolling the late Minister of Justice.

Now they have requested Warden Foster that they be put on short allowance, in order that what is thus saved may be sent to the sufferers in Newfoundland. Foster laid the matter before the Minister of Justice at Ottawa for approval.

Sir Rod. Cameron's Daughter Not Robbed.

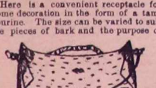
London, April 13.—The rumor that Sir Roderick Cameron's daughter was robbed at the Victoria Station on Thursday evening is regarded with scepticism at Scotland Yard. No such case has been reported to the Scotland Yard detectives. If there was any robbery at all the booty was so small that the matter was left to the local police.

Martin Not Going to Haldimand.

Ottawa, April 13.—Mr. Joseph Martin, M.P., Winnipeg, who arrived here last night, said that he was not in Haldimand, and does not intend going there. He is here on legal business.

A Birch Bark Receptacle.

Here is a convenient receptacle for home decoration in the form of a tambourine. The size can be varied to suit the pieces of bark and the purpose of the receptacle. Large ones are used for newspapers, smaller ones for letter or hair receivers, while a tiny one makes the cutest little jewelry catchalls to suspend beside the dressing table. Light blue and yellow ribbon form the most pleasing contrast with the bark. Photograph frames, bookmarks, cardcases, and in fact almost any article seen made of cardboard can be constructed from the bark where a little taste and patience are exercised.—Ella S. Welch.



TEA, COFFEE AND COCOA.

AN INTERESTING LECTURE ON OUR MODERN BEVERAGES.

Good and Bad Qualities of Tea—Objections in the Coloring of Tea—Coffee Easily Adulterated—Cocoa Not Easily Digested or Soluble.

A very interesting lecture, illustrated by stereopticon views, was given by Professor Ellis of the School of Practical Science at the Canadian Institute recently, the subject being "Tea, Coffee and Cocoa." The Professor said that when we drink we are not satisfied with quenching the thirst; we demand a beverage which will stimulate our torpid energies, or refresh our flagging powers. In former times, he said, this want was exclusively filled by alcohol, but, after a while, in Africa, Asia, and, later on, in Europe and America, were found plants whose leaves, roots or berries, produced a stimulant to take the place of alcohol. All contain alkali; the "alkaloid" and "theine" in tea producing in reasonable quantities a stimulant, in larger quantities paralysis. The tea plant, "Camellia thea," belonging to the camellia tribe, is very closely related to the camellia in our green houses, and is indigenous in Assam, where it is found in the thick jungles as a tree fifteen or twenty feet high; it has a leaf nine inches long or more. In China and Japan, where it is cultivated, it is much smaller, not exceeding six or seven feet high, and the leaves never exceeding four inches in length. The Chinese plant was introduced into India by the Government about 1850, and tea is now made from the Chinese and Indian varieties, and from hybrids. In China much of the tea is grown upon hill sides, but the best is grown on level, fertile plains, where it can be cultivated and manured. The smaller and younger the leaves the better will be the quality of the tea, if it is properly prepared. Black and green teas were formerly believed to be different plants, but Dr. Ellis said, they come from exactly the same plant, the difference being only in the mode of preparation. In both cases the leaves are dried over a fire, but in the case of black tea it is allowed to lie in heaps for a time, when it undergoes a species of withering, and fermentation, and it acquires a dark color. The change is the same which occurs in a damp haystack, where after the hay has been heated, it turns black. This is what is purposely done with tea to make it black. After being withered, the black tea is tossed about in a basket by a man to give it the aroma, and on the proper performance of this work depends the quality and the aroma of the tea. In the manufacture of green tea, instead of being subjected to the withering process, after being rolled it is immediately fired, and it requires three men to attend to the process, owing to the skill and work required to keep it from being colored, and these men have to stand before the fire, in some cases as long as nine hours, before the process is concluded. It is then sifted through bamboo mats of different sizes, the smallest being the best.

CARE OVER GREEN TEA.

Nearly all the tea made in Japan is green, and, to show the care that is taken over green tea, Mr. Ellis said that in transporting the chests to the coasts a coolie was required to carry two chests of black tea, which was a heavy load, and necessitated his frequently putting his load on the ground to rest. Thus, when the roads were muddy and wet it, of course, caused a dampness to the tea, but with green tea a coolie only had to carry one chest, and never, on any account, must he put it on the ground, and he avoids this by fastening the chest to one end of a long pole, with an attachment in the centre to go over his head on to his shoulders. When he is tired he sticks the other end into the ground, and thus takes the weight from off his shoulders. Mr. Ellis next came to the question of adulteration, and he said that he knew of no article of food that was less adulterated than tea. Of course, green tea was colored to suit the taste of the European consumer, and this was done by putting a sufficient quantity of Prussian blue into the pan at the last firing, but the quantity used was harmless, as far larger quantities had been used without any harm being done. He said the Chinese do not use it on the tea they drink, but they say it is easy to make, and if the Europeans like it they can have it. Mr. Ellis said the coloring of tea should be discontinued, as it enabled the Chinese to sell a poorer quality of tea than they could if it was not used. He then came to the chemistry of tea, and said that "theine" was found in tea, 2 1-2 to 3 per cent., producing when taken in sufficient quantities nervousness and sleeplessness. Mr. Ellis narrated a legend of an Indian Prince named Dharma, who in 510 A.D., endeavored to go without sleep. Having on one occasion been overcome with sleep he in his anger at his weakness pulled out his eyelashes and threw them on the ground, from which it is said the tea plant sprang.

ESSENTIAL OIL.

Besides "theine" essential oil is found in black tea to the extent of 1-2 per cent., and in green tea about 1 per cent., which produces the same effect as "theine." Tannin is found in black tea to the amount of 5 per cent., and in green tea to 11 per cent., and is an astringent, which very much interferes with the digestion of fresh meat, and, he said, no doubt it is this tannin that causes indigestion, but he said that it had very little effect on salt meat, and that was one reason why lumbermen could take strong tea in such large quantities, but he said that while theine and the essential oil were easily dissolved, tannin was encased in what is called stone cells and took far longer to dissolve. He then went on to show the mistake of allowing tea to boil, as the tannin is thus brought out, and is, therefore, more injurious.

Coffee, he said, contained the three qualities of tea, but, while tea was adulterated to a very small extent, coffee was one of the most largely adulterated articles of food, chicory being the substance most commonly used. Coffee, he said, yields a light-colored liquid and chicory a very dark one, and a little coffee and a lot of chicory would, of course, make a very dark-colored cup of coffee.

FOOD OF THE GODS.

The cocoa tree, he said, is by many called the "food of the gods," its chief characteristic being that it contains 50 per cent. of fat. Cocoa was believed to be exceedingly nutritious, but it has been shown repeatedly to be to a large extent indigestible and insoluble. The practice of preparing cocoa with milk is a mistake, as milk contained also a large percentage of fat. Cocoa should always be prepared with water.—Toronto Globe.

The Tramp's Opportunity.

Queer things happen in this world. A tramp took refuge in an old graveyard in Geogia and prepared for a sound night's rest, between two graves. About an hour when graveyards are supposed to "yawn," he was awakened by a strange noise, and, on looking up, discovered an escaped convict in the act of filing off his shackles. As the tramp stood up, the convict, in superstitious terror, fell upon his knees, whereupon the tramp arrested him, delivered him over to the authorities at the camp near by and received a reward of $50.

Eccentricities of Diet

The French snail-eating habit is said to be growing apace in America. Its ultimate popular adoption should by no means occasion surprise. Snail-eating is no more queer than eel-eating. The development of cooking is the miracle of civilization; and yet the American custom of pickled pigs' feet might offend the African epicure who dines upon elephants' feet baked in a hole in the ground. Rattlesnakes, blacksnakes and lizards were all pronounced edible by the late Frank Buckland, the naturalist, and are no more repulsive, in a way, than the misshapen frog. In New Zealand a great delicacy is the boiled grasshopper, afterwards crisped in an oven and served headless. The flavor is said to resemble that of shrimp. Here is a suggestion for the Kansas farmer. Why not the pate de grasshopper as a rival edible to the hors d'oeuvre de snail?

A Song of Fatherland.

I've wandered east, I've wandered west,
In gypsy-wise a random roamer,
Of men and maids I've known the best,
Like that far-travelled King in Homer.

But oh for the land that bore me,
Oh for the stout old land,
Of breezy Ben, and winding glen,
And roaring flood and sounding strand!

I've stood where stands in pillared pride
The shrine of Jove's spear-shaking daughter,
And humbled Persia stained the tide
Of free Greek seas with heaps of slaughter.

I've stood upon the rock crest,
Where Jove's proud eagle spreads his pinion,
Where looked the god far east, far west,
And all he saw was Rome's dominion.

I've seen the domes of Moscow far,
In green and golden glory gleaming,
And stood where sleeps the mighty Czar,
By Neva's flood so grandly streaming.

I've stood on many a famous spot,
Where blood of heroes flowed like rivers,
Where Deutschland rose at Gravelotte,
And dashed the strength of Gaul to shivers.

I've fed my eyes by land and sea
With sights of grandeur streaming o'er me;
But still my heart remains with thee,
Dear Scottish land that stoutly bore me.

Oh for the land that bore me,
Oh for the stout old land,
With mighty Ben and winding glen,
Stout Scottish land, my own dear land!

—John Stuart Blackie.

Shoe Superstitions.

When you buy a pair of new shoes never put them on a shelf higher than your head, unless you want to bring bad luck; and if you blacken them before you have had both shoes on you may meet with an accident, or even have a sudden death. This is an old Irish superstition. The Scotch girls believe that if they drop their shoes before they are worn trouble will ensue, while a French lady losing her heel is sure of a disappointment in love, and a German mother in the same predicament, feels that she will soon lose one of her children. You must not put your right shoe on your left foot or your left on your right, nor must you put your left shoe on before the right unless you want bad luck. This superstition dates back to one of the Emperors of Rome, who, it is recorded, put on his left shoe first one morning, and came near being assassinated during the day.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or Irritation in any part of the body are immediately relieved and permanently cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Gives Instant Relief.

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause than Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

BRITISH POLITICAL GOSSIP

As Commented on by New York Correspondents.

THE CHITRAL CAMPAIGN FLAWLESS

Harcourt's Local Veto Bill Declared to Be Unworkable—Conservatives Defy Precedent in Opposing Gully's Election as Speaker—France to Pension Old Men.

New York, April 15.—Cables from London say: Again there is wonderful Easter weather and no self-respecting person remains in London. Golf links, trout streams, boating river reaches, the sands of Margate, are all swarming with pleasure-seekers. The mails are disorganized, the papers are empty and business from that of merchant prince down to the humblest green grocer is quite paralyzed. Good Friday has come to be, for some mysterious reason, the occasion for a mammoth gathering of pigeon fanciers out on the Lea Meadows beyond the east end, where rival Columbarian clubs compete with their homings and prize messengers. As every new form evolves its special parasite, this "Easter fly," as it is called, has prompted hundreds of White Chapel loafers to hire guns for the day, lie along the banks of the Lea and shoot at these pigeons when they pass overhead. Yesterday some of these potters who killed a valuable bird were seized by an angry crowd. Their guns were smashed and they were dragged through the river and then pummeled to an inch of their lives.

Gen. Low's initial success against the Chitral tribesmen seems, according to this morning's News, to have knocked all heart out of his opponents. The machine and mountain guns at Malakand Pass taught a lesson the force of which even young bloods among the Hillmen have been compelled to acknowledge, and to-day we hear of Umra Khan being virtually deserted, while the opposition to the march of the main army seems melting away. Col. Kelly's brilliant feat of crossing the Shandur Pass has caused a diversion, and the release of Dr. Robertson, the immediate object of the campaign, appears within arm's length of accomplishment, with the prospect of little or perhaps no more fighting.

It is undoubtedly the best managed little war that they have undertaken in our generation, without a blunder or a flaw anywhere, and with one feat of crossing an icy pass 14,000 feet high with artillery, which will make of Col. Kelly almost a national hero, though the more substantial honors of a peerage will probably fall to Gen. Low.

There now rises the question, what shall be the frontier policy of the Indian Government? Lord Roberts proposes that Chitral and the country between it and the rest of the empire be retained, not only to control the exit by the passes of the Hindoo Koosh, but to prevent the Pathan tribesmen from joining Russia should she ever descend by the Chitral route. Mr. Neville Chamberlain, who, it is suspected, reflects the opinion of the Indian Government, deprecates that proposition. He argues that such a policy would mean the stirring up of the liveliest hornets' nest on the frontier, and the financial strain upon India is enormous already; 17,000 men are engaged in this campaign alone. In addition to the great divergence of opinion on the leading principle of the policy thus described, there is another difficulty before the Government. They have not yet justified their intervention in family disputes in Chitral, unless it be true as rumored, that one of the claimants to the throne is making overtures to Russia, and that it will be impossible to restore the dethroned ruler without the presence of a large military force. In truth, the greatest difficulties relating to this subject are likely to arise when the campaign itself is ended.

Trifling differences of opinion in the ranks of the Unionists have afforded some measure of plausibility to the reiteration by their opponents of the statement that the alliance between the two great sections of that party is weakening. The selfish attitude of the Ulster tenantry respecting the Irish Land Bill undoubtedly compelled the Unionist leaders to moderate their opposition to the measure, at any rate until the committee stage has been reached. If they insist upon maintaining what Mr. Chamberlain calls their unreasonable demands, they may lose all by grasping at too much.

Mr. T. W. Russell, who is formulating amendments covering the Ulster demands, is himself disposed to go further than the Unionists. The chief party organ also censured Mr. Balfour unsparingly for advising the Leamington Conservatives to withdraw their candidate from the field. These indications of the revolt in the Unionist camp have been seized upon and magnified by enemies into a serious rupture, but all this is mere fudge.

Another phase of public opinion also causes embarrassment to the party. In certain ultra-militant quarters, Mr. Balfour's Parliamentary pugnacity and earnestness are called into question. A feeling exists that he is not eager enough to trip his opponents or to force a dissolution. This is held to be the more inexcusable, since the Government continues to exhibit increasing feebleness. True, they have passed two important items of their program—the Welsh disestablishment bill and the Irish Land bill—through the critical second reading stage, but their most ardent well-wisher does not venture to assert that either bill is yet safe. On the contrary, the ordeal of the committee session is beset with dangers which may prove fatal at any moment.

The division on the election of a speaker demonstrates how slender is the Government's parliamentary majorities when bereft of the support of the Redmondites, and it is increasingly evident that that faction is fast becoming utterly irreconcilable. To make matters worse, it has just leaked out that Mr. Sweetman, anti-Parnellite, member for East Wicklow, has resolved to resign his seat and cast his lot with the Redmondites. If, as is believed to be likely, Mr. Carvill, member for Newry, follows Mr. Sweetman's example, this constitutes a significant reminder to the McCarthyites that their policy is not so favorably viewed by all classes of Irishmen as the anti-Parnellites profess to assume.

The proceedings in the House of Commons connected with the Speaker's election were characterized as a display of partisan feeling, if not without precedent, yet certainly not shown for a very long period. Ordinarily the members elect their own president without party bias and without ministerial pressure. On the present occasion neither the Ministry nor the Opposition selected the Speaker. On the contrary, he has been forced upon the House by a noisy, though minute, group of Radical malcontents, headed by Mr. Labouchere. The man best fitted for the position was unquestionably Mr. Courtney, but the cabal against him on the part of some Conservatives who resented his ultra-independence as a Liberal-Unionist wrecked his prospects. Then, the Conservatives determined to nominate Sir Matthew White-Ridley. Sir William Harcourt and many Liberals would have acquiesced in this decision had not Radical dissensions compelled the Ministry to propose their own candidate, even at the risk of bringing about a contest upon purely party lines. Mr. Gully's chances were nearly killed by the current shot that, although a member of Parliament of 10 years' standing, he had not been 10 minutes in the chamber. Sir Matthew White-Ridley, on the other hand, has had a quarter century's experience, has acted as chairman of committees and commissions, and admittedly possesses a knowledge of parliamentary procedure to which Mr. Gully does not even pretend.

The work of plowing the sands goes merrily on in Parliament this week, Sir William Harcourt turning the furrow by introducing his Local Veto bill. In its main features it closely follows the similar measure of 1893, but it supplies additional option, giving the people the alternative of total prohibition and the diminution of the number of licenses. They are at liberty to vote for closing all public houses, for closing one-fourth of the number, or for no change in the present arrangement. Professional prohibitionists do not welcome the new provisions. The least examination of the measure suffices to demonstrate its complete impracticability. If by any mischance it should become a law it would create endless turmoil, confusion and injustice, without securing any good results. There is nothing to prevent all three systems contemplated by the bill from operating in separate wards of a parish at one and the same time. Thus each parochial unit might be kept in a state of continual unrest.

It is wearisome to dilate upon the eccentricities of a measure obviously introduced merely for political effect and never intended to be passed. One shameful provision may, however, be noted, only to demonstrate Sir William Harcourt's audacious inconsistency. This apostle of temperance calmly exempts Ireland from the operation of the bill because he needs all the votes of the Irish members to impose it upon the rest of the Kingdom. Surely this is a strange travesty of local option. Mr. T. W. Russell has set himself the task of remedying this defect, but if he secures the extension of its provisions to Ireland he will set against it all the Irish votes, and thus the Government may perish at the hands of their own friends. Unless, however, the leader of the House is deliberately riding for a fall, which some persons suspect, little more will be heard of this measure, which is only an electioneering device.

The French Government have taken an important step in the direction of establishing state pensions for the aged. Their credit of £80,000 yearly to benefit societies is intended for workingmen who must have subscribed to such societies for ten years in order to be entitled to the maximum allowance of one franc per day. The Socialist deputies desired that State help be given to all workingmen, not merely to those who had subscribed to friendly societies; but they did not persist in their demand. The Government assistance assumes the shape of a grant, according to the merits of the recipients in saving money, not according to their needs.

The information which Captain Lugard brings with him from the Niger region respecting the French prospecting expeditions in that territory is not likely to improve the relations between the British and French Governments. It will certainly strengthen Lord Rosebery's hands in the current negotiations for a settlement.

WHOLESALE SEDITION IN SPAIN.

A Widespread Anarchist Plot—Searches Reveal Quantities of Dynamite.

New York, April 15. The Madrid correspondent of The Sun sends via London the significant events of the current week until Thursday. The knowledge of the widespread sedition in many classes has led the Government to adopt the high-handed policy of the Inquisition. There have been searches and wholesale arrests under the pretence of a great anarchist plot brewing. It is announced that secret deposits of large quantities of dynamite have been discovered in Barcelona, Cartagena, the Bilbao district and the French frontier. House to house searches in various places have resulted, according to the official report, in the finding of quantities of anarchist pamphlets of the violent sort, which has led to the arrest of the owners.

The court, for the first time since the Spanish Restoration, did not celebrate Easter with the usual impressive ceremonies. The sudden order announced that even the ceremony of washing the feet of 12 poor men and 12 poor women, usually performed by the Queen and court, will be omitted. It is nonsense to declare that these traditional functions are abandoned through fear of the anarchists.

The newspapers are more remarkable for what they don't contain than for what they do. No reliable news from Cuba is printed, nor indeed about the crisis in domestic affairs, which everybody vaguely feels.

The Copyright Bugaboo

New York, April 14.—The Times today says: "If the Canada Copyright Act be allowed the cause of international copyright would receive a terrible setback, and of the not too many fruits of a long and arduous campaign that literary men are now enjoying the most substantial would be taken away. Any privileges that Canada may gain would, of course, soon be demanded by the other English colonies, and the existing system would fall to pieces."

Ask for a Dam Across Niagara.

Toledo, Ohio, April 14.—The Toledo Produce Exchange yesterday adopted a memorial giving expression "To the solicitude very generally entertained by western commercial men, and in fact by all interests east and west, concerning the effect of the water level of Lake Michigan, and indirectly upon Lakes Huron and Erie, of the largest volume of water to be drawn from the former lake by means of Chicago's drainage canal." The exchange asks the Secretary of War to appoint a committee of engineers to examine into the matter, and finally suggests an investigation by engineers of a dam across the Niagara River at a suitable point, and its effect in preserving or deepening the water of the lakes.

Tariff Reduction in Victoria.

Melbourne, April 14.—The report of the Victorian Tariff Board has been published. It declares that the evidence taken shows a feeling in the colony in favor of moderate protection, but opposed to prohibitive duties. The board finds that the duties levied with the view to fostering industries failed of their purpose and have become a great burden. The reduction of various duties is recommended.
